POPE'S AID HITS AT WILSON

GERMAN WEB OF SPIES IN U.S. BARED BY RAID

Kaiser's Men Struck Many Foul Blows, Books Show.

An amazing report of German intrigue and propaganda against the interests of the United States is presented herewith. These disclosures are made by the committee of public information, an official bureau of the government.

Some of these cases have been made public before. The indictment drawn up by the Washington authorities sets them forth in glaring sequence. They began in the autumn of 1914.

The report by the committee of public information is given herewith.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Within a few days a German newspaper published in this country employed as the headline to an article dealing with a rumor of German-American disaffection in this country the derisive legend, "Lieb' Washington, magst ruhig sein."

This is, of course, a parody on the refrain of "Die Wacht am Rhein," the German national hymn:

"Lieb' Vaterland, magst ruhig sein."

"Loved fatherland, be resetful for us Watchers."

In the parody it carries a sinister connotation only to one who understands the German mode of speech and thought.

TITTIES PROPAGANDA.

Of itself the instance is slight. But it typifies a certain important phase of the German propaganda which subtly but persistently seeks to prevent Germany's course in America in the most favorable light, even to the extent of defending the improper activities of the Teutonic diplomatic representatives before their passports were given them.

Because of this continuing propaganda certain documents in the possession of the department of justice now assume peculiar importance, in that they prove undeniably the intimate relations between the accredited representatives of the kaiser in the United States and plotters against the laws and the security of this country, whose enterprise did not fall short of projected wholesale destruction of life and property.

OFFICE IS ESTABLISHED.

Both of these documents, as were essential to legal proceedings brought against the Germans have been published. Others are here made public for the first time. They form a curious if disjointed, chapter in the diplomatic history of the war.

In the fall of 1914, when the German plots against Canada were fomenting in this country, there was established, at 40 Wall street, an "advertising" office presided over by a big, suave man of Teutonic aspect named Wolf von Igel. There were two peculiar features about this office. One was that it was frequented during two years of singularly quiet and unbusiness-like existence chiefly by Germans who had nothing whatsoever to do with advertising. The other was a large safe, bearing the insignia of the German imperial government.

One morning in April, 1916, government secret service men visited this same Wall street office while Von Igel was preparing a mass of papers which he had taken from the safe for transfer to the German embassy in Washington.

FIND LISTS OF SPIES.

When the papers were examined by the department of justice the reason for Von Igel's determined fight became apparent. Here, in the form of letters, telegrams, notations, checks, receipts, ledgers, cashbooks, cipher codes, lists of spies, and other memoranda and records, were found indications—in some instances of the vaguest nature, in others of the most damning conclusiveness—that the German imperial government, through its representatives in a then friendly nation, was concerned with—

Violation of the laws of the United States.

Destruction of lives and property in merchant vessels on the high seas.

Irish revolutionary plots against Great Britain.

Fomenting ill feeling against the United States in Mexico.

Subornation of American writers and lecturers.

Financing of propaganda.

Maintenance of a spy system under

GERMAN INTRIGUE

Trail of Vast Spy System Maintained by Ambassador von Bernstorff's Agents in the United States.

In the fall of 1914, shortly after the outbreak of the war, the German embassy established a publicity department at 60 Wall street, under the direction of Wolf von Igel. About two years later this office was raided and documentary proof obtained that Von Igel was the chief spy and plotter of a vast system maintained in the United States under Ambassador von Bernstorff's general direction.

Paul Koenig, pretending to conduct the secret service of the Hamburg-American Steamship company from a New York office, was discovered to be in reality one of the directors of the German spy system in the United States. He is now interned at Fort Oglethorpe. In Von Bernstorff's code he was known as "XXX."

In a report by Koenig to his boss, Capt. von Papen of the German embassy, Koenig describes an agent who has made bombs to resemble lumps of coal to be placed on board merchantmen sailing from New York for the purpose of blowing them up while at sea.

Dr. Max Niven of Chicago is shown as receiving $60 for the labor fund in connection with establishing a branch of German and Austro-Hungarian labor information and relief bureau in Detroit.

The German embassy maintained confidential relations with the Irish revolutionary movement, through John Devoy of New York (formerly of Chicago), editor of the Gaelic American. Through Devoy at least one check for $1,000 was sent to Sir Roger Casement.

Daniel F. Cohalan, Supreme court justice of New York, is shown in a Von Igel cipher message as urging German support for the Irish revolution.

George Sylvester Viereck, editor of The Fatherland, a rabid pro-German weekly published in New York City, is noted in the German records as sending inquiries as to bombs and picric acid. Viereck is still conducting his paper, having changed its name to Viereck's Weekly since the United States entered the war.

James F. J. Archibald, the magazine writer, in whose possession the British government discovered official correspondence between Von Bernstorff and Berlin, is shown in one of the papers seized to have acknowledged receipt of $5,000. Edwin Emerson, another writer, got $1,000 from Von Igel.

Ray Beveridge, a California artist, and sister of Kuehne Beveridge, the sculptor, is shown to have received $3,000 of German propaganda money.

DETECTIVE NOW GUARDS BOARD OF EDUCATION

All last night the stalwart form of a plain clothes man guarded the deserted precincts of the board of education. No longer will the documents of the Thompson board of education be subjected to the dangers of raids or thieves.

Except for the period of several weeks when the new board had a squad of policemen on guard, it has never been considered necessary to put extra guards in the board rooms. Capt. Percy Coffin, business manager, and Edwin S. Davis, president, held a consultation yesterday and decided protection was necessary.

"We're going to have a policeman on hand when the office force is not in the building," said Capt. Coffin. "We must protect the property of the board."

"Has it anything to do with a possible raid by the state's attorney?"

"Nothing at all," replied Capt. Coffin."

Autoist Hurled 90 Feet but Escapes Injury

While trying to cross the railroad tracks at Ontarioville, Ill., yesterday afternoon in his auto Hugo Brown got in front of a train. The machine was knocked ninety feet and landed on top of Brown, who was unhurt except for a few bruises. The engineer brought his train to a halt about a quarter of a mile from the scene and backed up. While he was backing he saw Brown walking down the track to meet him. Brown is a garage owner at Wayne, Ill.

Gaston Means Arrested as Mrs. King's Slayer

Concord, N. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Gaston Bullock Means is in custody here tonight, charged with the murder of Mrs. Maude A. King near here on the evening of Aug. 29 last. He was locked up in the Cabarrus county jail.

Hayden Clement, prosecuting attorney, determined to issue a warrant for the arrest of Means after a long conference with John S. Dooling, assistant district attorney of New York City, and after Capt. William Jones, pistol expert of the New York police department, and Otto H. Schultze, district attorney's physician of New York, had assured him it was a physical impossibility for Mrs. King to have received the pistol wound which killed her from a revolver held in her own hand.

The arrest of Means is considered by the authorities only the preliminary breaking of the King case. The arrest of at least three other persons on the major charge of murder is confidently expected by them.

Tragedy Is Re-enacted.

Mr. Dooling is convinced, after his conferences with Mr. Clement, that the officials of the two states—New York and North Carolina—in close and friendly coöperation can bring to justice all those he believes, and has a certain amount of evidence to show, were guilty of a conspiracy to murder Mrs. King, whose estate, before its looting, has been estimated as worth $2,000,000.

The arrest of Means was only one of three sensational developments today. Soon after he had been formally placed under arrest by the sheriff, following his voluntary surrender, Gaston Means and his father, his brothers, his lawyers, and a company of friends were permitted by the sheriff to go together to Blackwelder's Spring, where Mrs. King was killed, and there Gaston Means, with the assistance of friends and counsel, reënacted the tragedy according to his version of it.

Trunk of Evidence Vanishes.

The only official present at this proceeding, which even among friends of the Means family here was the subject of severe criticism, was the sheriff. He obligingly stood for long periods out of earshot of the conferees and as far as safeguarding the interests of the state is concerned might as well not have been present.

The third development was the disappearance of a trunk and a box of papers brought here by Mr. Dooling this morning. These papers, a part of those seized by the New York district attorney from the apartment of Gaston Means, at 1155 Park avenue, New York, were relied upon by him to furnish valuable documentary evidence at the coroner's inquest within forty hours.

Mr. Dooling and Detective Cuniff went to extraordinary trouble to protect the papers on the way from New York to Concord. They were assured they would arrive safely. What happened to them is not clear, but a long distance telephone message brought the information tonight they had been put off the train at Charlotte, thirty miles from here, which is the home of Frank L. Osborne, chief counsel for Gaston Means.

Vital Evidence Is Safe.

Whether the missing baggage reached Charlotte purely by accident or whether it reached there through deliberate design an investigation now under way will show. However, the New York officials feared such an "accident" might happen, and the essentially vital documentary evidence they brought with them in bags which never for a moment left their possession on the trip to Concord.

It may further be stated that even if it should develop that documents were abstracted from any of Mr. Dooling's luggage, certified copies of them can be obtained from New York.

New Inquest Called Off.

Mr. Clement in procuring the warrant for the arrest of Means automatically called off the reopening of the coroner's inquest. The witnesses who were to have appeared at that proceeding next Monday morning will now appear before a police magistrate, before whom the warrant is then returnable.

Mr. Clement called the newspaper men together and handed them this statement:

"After an investigation of the law I find that some of the courts hold that a second inquest on the same body may not be held by a coroner without the verdict rendered upon the first inquest having been set aside or quashed.

"It is at least a debatable question as to whether or not the coroner has the right to reopen the matter, therefore in order to avoid all tecanicalities and complications I have called off the second inquest of the coroner and have

JAM JARS CALM OF CRANE HOME

Miss Arsene Lupin Gums Up Police in Sticky Mystery.

A domestic with kleptomania tendencies figured as a female Arsene Lupin yesterday in "Pilfered Preserves," or "The Great Gold Coast Jam Robbery," the enactment of which precipitated a state of chaotic excitement in the Hudson avenue police station until detectives finally called "curtain" to the skit.

The plot of the piece started at 2:06 in the afternoon with flashing of the following bulletin:

"Detectives from the Hudson avenue station have gone to the home of Mrs. Charles R. Crane II. at 1330 North State street to investigate the theft of a large amount of jewelry belonging to Mrs. Crane. The police were called by Mrs. Crane, who said she suspected maids in her employ."

Home in Confusion.

The Crane domicile was discovered in a high state of emotion. Maids, footmen, and butlers dashed up and down the steps, and detectives lurked in nooks and corners jotting down mysterious notes. To a volley of questions hurled at them everybody looked agitatedly secretive and said nothing.

"Later," said Mrs. Crane to the reporters who managed to get through the wire entanglements, "I will tell you everything. But not now."

The status quo was preserved for about fifteen minutes. Then two maids, carefully guarded by Detective Sergts. Jensen and Boss, left the house, entered the Crane limousine, and sped away to Hudson avenue.

Acting Lieut. Jacob Wright was stormed for information.

Scent "Gold Coast" Crime.

"All I can say now is that we have one woman under arrest," he said. "Her name is Lena Bauman, and she's been employed as a maid by Mrs. Crane for the last week. Formerly she worked for Arthur Reynolds in Glencoe."

"Reynolds!" a suggester suggested. "Why, he's an uncle of George Reynolds' son, whose home was burgled in the Gold Coast robberies! Aha! Maybe this woman's a disciple of Adam Prochowski, the 'chloroform burglar' in those cases. The loot, lieutenant, what was the loot?"

"That," said the lieutenant mysteriously, "will come later. I have sent detectives to get it."

At last two detectives appeared, lugging a large suit case between them. This was deposited in the lieutenant's office, while a conference was held behind closed doors. Then the lieutenant appeared.

"The loot has been recovered from the maid's flat at 1752 Mohawk street," he announced. "I will now give you a list of it, starting with the articles of highest value.

Then Comes the Jam.

"No. 1 consists of three dozen jars of Mrs. Crane's best strawberry jam. No. 2, one dozen table doilies. No. 3, two bedspreads. No. 4, a bottle of champagne——"

"Hold on," he was interrupted. "What about the dog collars and the pearl necklaces and the diamond tiaras?"

"Weren't any," the lieutenant said.

ARGENTINA FOR WAR; GERMANY HAS ULTIMATUM

BUENOS AIRES, Sept. 22.—Unless Germany immediately makes satisfactory explanation of the Luxburg incident, Argentina will declare war.

An ultimatum thus serving notice on the imperial German government has already gone to Berlin, it became known tonight.

The minister of foreign affairs tonight communicated to the chamber of deputies this statement:

"The Argentine government has requested the Berlin legation to urge a categorical explanation from Germany. If this is unsatisfactory Argentina will take the most extreme measures."

Even if Germany "satisfactorily" explains the Luxburg incident, the indications tonight were that Argentina would nevertheless formally sever relations.

Tremendous enthusiasm greeted the news in the city. Great crowds poured out of all business houses or journeyed from their homes downtown to mass in excited, cheering, marching thousands.

German residents of Buenos Aires were cautious. Downtown business firms with German names barricaded their doors and windows, evidently fearing a repetition of the rioting a fortnight ago.

FROM LONDON TO NEW YORK IN 1 DAY BY PLANE

(Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).)

LONDON, Sept. 22.—From London to New York by aeroplane in one day. This is the scheme of J. A. Whitehead, governing director of Whitehead Aircraft Ltd., and he told a Daily Sketch reporter that it is to be carried to a successful conclusion.

"When our plans are fully matured," he said, "we shall make a trip which will be the most sensational in the whole history of aviation. The aeroplane will be piloted by Herbert Sykes, who anticipates leaving Hanworth park, Feltham, Middlesex, at dawn, and reaching New York before night.

"The trip will be accomplished in a specially designed, very powerful Whitehead machine, which is being built at our Middlesex factory. Edgar Middleton will accompany Mr. Sykes as navigator. He has served in an Essex regiment and was sub-lieutenant. Both are immensely enthusiastic and confident."

BUSINESS OFFICE ROMANCE BARED BY BRIEF WIRE

A business office romance, with the sort of happy ending that you see every day in all good, well behaved one-reels, was revealed last night by the following telegram from THE TRIBUNE'S correspondent at Crown Point:

"Charles H. Warren Jr., 26, and Miss Clara H. Lepper, 22."

The abbreviation of "stenog" follows Miss Lepper's name in the city directory and her place of employment is given as 1035 East Sixty-seventh street. This address is the office of A. C. Clark & Co., a manufacturing concern of which Charles H. Warren Sr. is listed as treasurer. The elder Warren resides at the South Shore Country club.

The home of the bride's parents at 7316 University avenue was called up and the telegram read to her mother.

"Well, I knew they intended being married, but the elopement is a surprise," said Mrs. Lepper. "Young Mr. Warren has been employed in his father's office for some time and met Clara there."

EX-PEDAGOGUE AND CASH VANISH

Residents of Irving Park Want to Know About $50,000.

William E. Deans, erstwhile school teacher, but more recently a votary of frenzied finance, has disappeared from his haunts in Irving Park and many citizens thereabouts are demanding the return of sums said to aggregate $50,000.

In two years Deans is said to have emerged from comparative obscurity to a dealer in vast sums. He is said to have engaged in stock selling for the now defunct Bank of Commerce, in borrowings on a large scale, and in schemes for home building in behalf of the thrifty.

Bankers Get Warrant.

A warrant for his arrest has been obtained by officials of the Irving Park National bank. An investigator has been sent south in the hope that Deans may be apprehended. Meanwhile his own mother is alleged to have forfeited her home and small savings to aid in restoring losses attributed to Deans.

Deans is 42 years old. He has a wife and three children. His eldest son is in service in France. Two years ago Deans came to Chicago from the southern part of the state, where he taught school.

Officials of the Irving Park National bank, through Attorney Vernon R. Loucks, explain that Deans borrowed $2,900 of the institution, depositing the Bank of Commerce stock as security. Later he paid back $1,200 and obtained permission to take the stock with him, that he might sell it and thus pay off the $1,700 debt. He has failed to return.

Many Paid on Homes.

When Deans' absence became noticeable inquiries began to come in at the offices formerly occupied by him at 4736 Irving Park boulevard. Deans was not to be found there or at his home, 4137 North Laramie avenue.

Investigation among residents of the neighborhood showed that Deans had collected from more than fifty persons amounts ranging from $200 to $1,000 as advance payments on homes he proposed to build for a small sum down and a mortgage on the lot. It is alleged that the mortgages thus obtained have been disposed of. Deans' mother resides at 5040 Patterson street.

Deans was last seen about two weeks ago.

'MOON IS ONLY SAFE SPOT FOR WORLD COURT'

New Papal Note to Urge Bar on Army Conscription.

ROME, Sept. 22.—The reply of the entente allies to the peace note of Pope Benedict now is being awaited by the vatican, after which the pope will again address a note to all the belligerents.

The pontiff will point out that the questions on which all agree really represent the foundation of a new order of things in the world and a new era of peace for humanity. The secondary problems, he will say, certainly can be adjusted easily and better through good will and friendly discussion than by force of arms.

It is understood that the next papal note virtually will embody the views expressed by Cardinal Gasparri, the papal secretary of state, to the Associated Press today in commenting upon the situation after the publication of the reply of the central empires to the pope's note.

CALLS WILSON PLAN A DREAM.

"President Wilson's proposal to reduce armaments and impose international arbitration by force through a society of nations, is a dream," Cardinal Gasparri said. "An international army to enforce the verdicts of the court of arbitration? In which country would it be located without being influenced by local politics and prejudices? The moon is the only place possible.

"All the other inconveniences and objections could be avoided by suppressing conscription with the proviso that it could not be reëstablished without a law approved by the people, which in normal conditions would be improbable, indeed morally impossible.

DIFFICULT TO GET ARMY.

"To this some would object that certain governments first would declare war and then present a bill to parliament for the adoption of conscription and the formation of a large standing army, which parliament undoubtedly would pass from patriotic motives.

"All this would be possible, but it would be difficult, as such a government first would have to violate a treaty signed in conjunction with all civilized nations. Then it would not always be possible to induce parliament to vote large military appropriations."

END CONSCRIPTION; END WAR.

"Even Bismarck found this to be true several times, but especially when the party of the Center succeeded in January, 1887, in defeating an increase in the German army of 41,000 men yearly, which so angered the Iron Chancellor that he dissolved the reichstag.

"Under conditions we propose the nation attempting to violate a treaty with the civilized world would be immediately threatened by a general economic, commercial, and financial boycott. Thus, only a mad government would run such a risk.

"The suppression of conscription would lead automatically and without any disturbance of public order to disarmament—namely, to the end of militarism, bringing beneficial consequences for international peace and also the restoration of economic and financial conditions in the countries exhausted by the present war.

ALWAYS OPPOSED BY POPE.

"The holy see always has opposed conscription. We always refused to introduce it in our own army when the pope was a temporal sovereign. Besides England and the United States are the most splendid examples of how great powers can exist without standing armies, but even these two countries, despite their colossal resources, once war was declared, required a long time before being able to form a large army.

"If all states were in the same condition during the time necessary to prepare weapons such a long period would elapse as to render it possible for friendly intervention with a view to avoiding conflict.

URGES WAR REFERENDUM.

"Finally, the whole world, in addition to the suppression of obligatory military service, should proclaim the principle that no head of a state, either emperor or king or the president of a republic, should have the right to declare war without first consulting the people, preferably through a referendum or at least through the parliament.

"Conscription is one of the hideous burdens of a free people, both as regarding financial expenses and personal liberty, besides being an inevitable war breeder. Thus we saw Australia rejecting conscription, by referendum, although the feeling in Australia for the mother country was most loyal. Perhaps even England, the United States, and Canada would have refused conscription if the people should be consulted through a referendum. The law which introduced it for the duration of the war provided for its suppression immediately after the conclusion of peace."

MUST END BY MEDIATION.

Cardinal Gasparri concluded:

"It is now evident that in the present conflagration there is no question of victor and vanquished, no question of absolute military successes which no group of belligerents seems able to secure over the other, but the question is to find an equitable solution of satisfying the people of both sides with a view to avoiding graver catastrophes of a social and financial character.

"The war must end through our mediation or the good offices of other neutrals. The objection made by President Wilson is easily overcome as the people of the central powers, as well as those of the allies, are ready and willing to give all guarantees for the fulfillment of conditions leading to a just and lasting peace."

BRITISH SCOFF AT KAISER.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—On inquiry at the British foreign office regarding the Austro-German replies to Pope Benedict's peace proposals the Associated Press received today the following unofficial statement:

"It seems hardly necessary, especially in view of President Wilson's reply to the pope, to comment at length on the German reply beyond pointing out that it contains not one word as to restoration or reparation.

"Recent history and especially the correspondence between the kaiser and the former czar published a few days ago form an interesting commentary on the kaiser's contention that the preservation of peace has been his 'principal and most sacred task.'

CITES RAVAGES OF BELGIUM.

"The sympathy which the German government expresses toward the people of moral power and of right does not come well from those whose blood-stained records include the ravaging of Belgium, the murder of peaceful citizens, the sinking of passenger and merchant ships, the dropping of bombs on undefended towns, the murder of Miss Cavell and Capt. Fryatt, the torpedoing of hospital ships, the bombardment of hospitals, deportations from Belgium and northern France, connivance in wiping out by their ally, the Turk, of the Armenian nation, and countless other crimes.

"Nor does talk of moral right come well from those who were responsible for the organization of the intrigues and espionage in the United States since the beginning of the war which are revealed in today's newspapers."

"HYPOCRITICAL CLAPTRAP."

The portions of the replies of Germany and Austria to Pope Benedict's peace plea which arrived before press time are given prominence by the morning newspapers. Owing to the lateness of their receipt, however, only two or three papers commented on them in the editorial columns. The tenor of the headlines, however, reflects the British attitude, one paper captioning the documents as "hypocritical claptrap from Berlin and Vienna."

The Daily Mail characterizes the Austrian reply as "a vague document" and comments on "the new moves in the peace plot," in which it says:

"We are told that the German governments are arranging terms with the pope and the government of Spain. . . . The allies' peace conditions stand on record. Germany has not as yet the slightest intention of accepting them. . . . From them the allies will never recede."

The Chronicle says that it is impossible to suspect the earnestness of the Austrian emperor's reply, adding: "Sincerity breathes through every part of this remarkable utterance."

RUSH WAR, U. S. ANSWER.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The only effect of the joint replies made to the pope's peace proposals by the kaiser and the emperor of Austria has been to cause the United States to continue to rush war preparations.

The White House and state department evinced virtually no interest today in the statements made by the governments at Berlin and Vienna. They had been discounted in advance. Secretary Lansing for more than a week has been warning the public to be prepared for a peace reply from the kaiser which would be worded in friendly language, but which would not contain the essentials President Wilson has demanded as the basis for a cessation of hostilities.

There was nothing in either message which was unexpected here. As viewed by the White House and state department the joint replies offer the allies nothing which can even be considered as a basis for discussing peace.

Expect New Pope Note.

Officials took the position that the rulers of the central powers have no more realization of the determination of this government today than they had five months ago. The president considers it useless to continue to discuss phases of the war which have been settled long since so far as the United States is concerned.

As a result of the latest emanations from Berlin and Vienna reports were circulated today on what appeared to be fairly well informed authorities that a new peace proposal may be expected from Rome. The administration has nothing to substantiate these reports.

Has He New Terms?

It is known that the president and his advisers fail to see why the pope should offer another peace proposal at this time unless he had some information of an authoritative source from Berlin and Vienna indicating that the kaiser and the emperor are willing to make proposals and accept demands which they never have indicated that they even would consider.

COMMENT OF GERMANS.

BERLIN, via London, Sept. 22.—What scant German newspaper comment there was today on the Teutonic reply to Pope Benedict pointed out forcefully that Germany, stigmatized by the entente allies as a militarist nation, had expressed its full approval of disarmament and arbitration.

Most newspapers were reluctant to comment on the German and Austro-Hungarian replies. The Lokal Anzeiger summed up the general view in its editorial comment:

"Lloyd George, Wilson, and Painleve ought to confess that their conception of the German government's character has been senseless. How can the entente powers demand destruction of Prussian militarism against a government which proclaims disarmament and arbitration by an international court?"

"Only maliciousness could misinterpret the German answer as discouraging to peace," declared the Vorwaerts, leading Socialist organ. "The Socialists particularly will watch further developments with sympathy."

GERMANS CHEER HARDEN'S 'FREE BELGIUM' PLEA

Calls Claim of Need for Flanders Coast an Error.

BY CYRIL BROWN.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 22.—German censors permitted just a few words of Maximilian Harden's "peace speech" to percolate across the frontiers yesterday.

I am able today to give more extensive excerpts.

Thousands in the audience of the most outspoken of German editors cheered Harden when he made this declaration:

"I am convinced peace can yet be had this year if Germany, out of the sum of its individual convictions, declares that it will in no form subjugate the former kingdom of Belgium nor dominate it nor seek to guide it in specific paths."

Hardin Faints.

The superheated air in the crowded auditorium overcame Harden, who fainted. He was carried out and a half hour passed before he was himself again.

The course of the speech was repeatedly interrupted by vociferous pan-German and other Annexationist hecklers.

"In the fourth year of this war," Herr Harden said, "we must learn to think differently and clearly and unequivocally to declare what our intentions are regarding Belgium. We must not carry water on both shoulders, after the manner of Bethmann-Hollweg's policy of mere ground gain, which broke down during this world war.

Is Belgium Worth It?

"The world today is engaged in too much war and too little politics. Who brings peace, whether the pope or the Socialists or any one else, makes no difference to us, but whoever really brings peace is welcome.

"Bismarck himself called even the most victorious war a frightful evil. Ponder ye whether Belgium is of sufficient importance for us to justify the curse of the whole world upon us for having caused indefinite continuance of the war.

"The giving back and setting up again of Belgium is the question on which all our enemies agree, and, perhaps, so do many among us, were the light to be turned on. Neither in private nor national life is it good to retain all that one has won by fighting.

To Decide Own Destinies.

"If we insist on keeping Belgium, the war will last a long time yet. In that case, our enemies will await America's help in the theaters of war and will fight on so long, until they realize that America's help, too, does not help any.

"We must not believe our enemies are ready to discuss peace if we guarantee the satisfactory solution of the Belgian question. A nation like ours, which so successfully has held out through the war and through every sacrifice, has a right to decide its own destinies.

"Responsibility for the coming peace can be borne only by the whole nation. It is lucky for the inquiring house if it can be relieved of this burden.

Must Have Reforms.

"We do not want President Wilson's interference in Germany's inner political affairs, but we must come to parliamentarism, and we must declare that we never thought of keeping Belgium.

"Had Belgium permitted the passage of our troops at the outbreak of the war we should have had no Zu Reventlow and no Louvain. Our task, after a successful war, is by no means to take from the enemy everything we can get.

"The assertion that we need the coast of Flanders in order to bring England to her knees is an error. England, as well as our other enemies, will not so readily attack us again. Our successes hitherto guarantee that.

Create New World Order.

"The object of this war is to create a new world order. May the decision regarding Belgium, on Germany's part, be made quickly and unequivocally, and may it also be clearly said what is meant by the securing of our boundaries and our ideal peace aims."

Beginning his lecture, Harden took exception to Germany's repeated peace offers, saying:

"The dawn of hope for the return of our soldiers from the front has not been hastened by this constantly repeated, official mouthed peace offer. Even had it been done much more cleverly than is the case it would be useless. It has only done harm."

Calls Situation Satisfactory.

Continuing, Harden characterized the situation as satisfactory in every respect. He pointed out that all the enemies' spring efforts to break the German fronts had come to naught, in contrast to highly successful counter offensives, such as on Riga, whereby the resistance of the Russian army and the Russian spirit had more and more been crushed.

Dealing with Russia, Harden said:

"Czarism will certainly not return in its old form. The light of the Russian revolution rose in the east; now a new light must arise in the west, too. We must be prepared voluntarily to make sacrifices."

KAISER TO POPE

Concluding Portions of the German Reply to the Plea for Peace.

The German reply to the pope's peace plea, as published in "The Tribune" yesterday morning, was incomplete because of delays in cable transmission. The additional part of the reply is given herewith:

"Appreciating the importance of his holiness' declaration, the imperial government has not failed to submit the suggestion contained therein to earnest and scrupulous examination. Special measures which the government has taken in closest contact with representatives of the German people for discussing and answering the questions raised prove how earnestly it desires, in accordance with his holiness' desires and the peace resolution of the reichstag on July 19, to find a practical basis for a just and lasting peace.

"The imperial government greets with special sympathy the leading idea of the peace appeal wherein his holiness clearly expresses the conviction that in the future the material power of arms must be superseded by the moral power of right. We are also convinced that the sick body of human society can be healed only by fortifying its moral strength of right.

"From this would follow, according to his holiness' view, the simultaneous diminution of the armed forces of all states and the institution of obligatory arbitration for international disputes.

"We share his holiness' view that definite rules and a certain safeguard for a simultaneous and reciprocal limitation of armaments on land, on sea, and in the air, as well as for the true freedom of the community and high seas, are the things in treating which the new spirit that in the future should prevail in international relations, should find first hopeful expression.

"The task would then of itself arise to decide international differences of opinion not by the use of armed forces but by peaceful methods, especially by arbitration, whose high peace producing effect we together with his holiness fully recognize.

"The imperial government will in this respect support every proposal compatible with the vital interest of the German empire and people.

"Germany, owing to her geographical situation and economic requirements, has to rely on peaceful intercourse with her neighbors and with distant countries. No people, therefore, has more reason than the German people to wish that, instead of universal hatred and battle, a conciliatory fraternal spirit should prevail between nations.

"If the nations are guided by this spirit it will be recognized to their advantage that the important thing is to lay more stress upon what unites them in their relations. They will also succeed in settling individual points of conflict which are still undecided in such a way that conditions of existence will be created which will be satisfactory to every nation, and thereby a repetition of this great world catastrophe would appear impossible.

"Only on this condition can a lasting peace be founded which would promote an intellectual rapprochement and a return to the economic prosperity of human society. This serious and sincere conviction encourages our confidence that our enemies also may see a suitable basis in the ideas submitted by his holiness for approaching nearer to the preparation of future peace under conditions corresponding to a spirit of reasonableness and to the situation in Europe."

Former Premier Marvels at Ardor of U. S. Soldiers

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Georges Clemenceau, former premier of France, today describes at great length in his newspaper L'Homme Enchaine, his recent visit to the American training camp in France. He says:

"I marveled at the ardor with which the officers and men devoted themselves to practical work and in the study of theory. Every one applies himself to his duties every hour of the day and often at night."

Gary Finds Itself Mecca for New Army Slackers

Gary, Ind., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Disappearance of scores of men ordered up for examination or missing since the draft is believed to explain why 10,000 instead of the anticipated 6,000 or 7,000 men were registered here. It is thought that slackers flocked to Gary, hoping to get exemption by munition employment. In one district this week a fourth of those ordered up for examination cannot be found. Five hundred draft law prisoners have been arrested since June.

BULGARIA WANTS PEACE, ENVOY IN U. S. DECLARES

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Bulgaria wants peace, according to Bulgarian Minister Stephen Panaretoff. Returning from a summer vacation "somewhere in America," Panaretoff said today that he has been unable to communicate officially with his government but knows "there is an earnest desire for peace among all the central powers."

Mayor's Weekly Shows a Much Milder Tone

The Republican, the city hall weekly, was a much toned down issue yesterday. It contained Corporation Counsel Ettelson's opinion that the mayor would have violated his oath of office had he prevented the recent meeting of pacifists in Chicago, and a statement that "Chicago's war mad press" had maligned the mayor for his action, although the executive's action was a legal one.

5 STEAMERS AND 2 DESTROYERS LOST IN BATTLE

Passengers Tell of Big Submarine Attack; U-Boats Sunk.

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 22.—Passengers who arrived from England today on an American steamship brought circumstantial reports that five British steamships and two destroyers out of a convoy fleet of six, which left Lough Swilly, Ireland, Sept. 3, were sunk by German submarines within a few hours of the port of departure.

The story was told, among others, by shipwrecked seamen who were survivors of other submarined vessels and by a merchant ship officer who had been in Lough Swilly.

Report U-Boats Sunk.

The five vessels, it was said, convoyed by the destroyers, put to sea shortly after midnight and they were attacked by massed submarines at daylight the following morning. The news of the disaster was learned when the destroyers which escaped put back to port bringing survivors of the torpedoed merchantmen and war vessels.

"The closest secrecy was immediately thrown about the incident," the merchant ship officer said. "The survivors were given positive instructions to say nothing about it, and no details as to the names of the ships or the extent of loss of life could be learned. It was reported that one and possibly two of the U-boats were sunk by the destroyers."

Beef Ship Sent Down.

The British steamship La Negra, on her way from Buenos Aires to Havre with a cargo of Argentine beef, was sunk by a German submarine Sept. 3 forty-five miles off Plymouth, according to survivors of the crew who arrived here today on an American steamship.

La Negra, 8,312 tons gross, was owned by the British and Argentine Steam Navigation company of West Hartlepool. She was torpedoed twice within three hours, the survivors said, and eight members of her crew of ninety-eight lost their lives.

Eight of Crew of Eighteen Die.

Several survivors of the crew of the Norwegian motor schooner Caracas, which left Philadelphia the latter part of August for Spain, arrived here today and told of their vessel being destroyed by a German submarine Sept. 2 in the Bay of Biscay, with loss of eight of her crew of eighteen men. The Caracas was 1,076 tons gross register.

Stock Frauds Charged.

Frederick C. Emery, mining promoter, arrested Friday on a writ of ne exeat by United States marshals, gave bond yesterday in $10,000 to appear in the United States District court in answer to a civil suit filed against him by Charles M. Tantow, a mail carrier, who alleges that Emery sold him some worthless stock. Emery had no sooner furnished his bond than he was rearrested on a warrant issued in the Municipal court.

WAR TAX BILL IS NOW STUCK ON NEW SNAG

Conferees' Deadlock May Bring Final Disagreement.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Conferees on the war tax bill today agreed on one of their chief points of dispute in considering war excess profits taxation—the definition of invested capital—and then struck a serious obstacle in house demands for drastic tax increases, which threatened tonight to result in final disagreement.

The new deadlock dissipated earlier confidence for a complete agreement and several conferees tonight predicted that the fight would be thrown back into both houses, though some members were more optimistic, believing an ultimate complete agreement could be reached.

A Sunday session of the conferees was arranged, largely to clear up miscellaneous minor questions, with a final decision expected Monday on the entire bill, including the war excess profits question.

If the conferees fail to agree then it was believed further negotiation would be futile and a partial report would be made Tuesday to both houses.

It was understood that the house members insist upon adding between $250,000,000 and $500,000,000 to the $1,060,000,000 senate levy on war profits.

Senate conferees were reported to have expressed the fear that a higher total assessment on war excess profits would impair business, and after today's session they met separately and were said to have agreed to withstand the house demands, even to reporting final disagreement.

Fit, Refit, Prepare, Repair, New War Society Program

"The Liberty War Association," a new organization, has issued a prospectus announcing arrangements to help American soldiers.

"To fit and refit, prepare and repair," reads the announcement and explains:

"To fit by medical and surgical treatment men disqualified by minor physical defects from entering into army and navy service.

"To fit by medical and surgical attention for civil vocation, soldiers and sailors injured in the war."

The association's officers are at 207, 64 West Randolph street. Judge Charles N. Goodnow is president.

New Insurance Measure to Aid U. S. Fighters

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Attacks by representatives of insurance companies and senators on the validity of the insurance provisions of the soldiers' and sailors' civil rights bill resulted late today in an agreement by the senate judiciary subcommittee to consider a new insurance section to be drafted by representatives of the war department and the companies.

GERMANS CRACK RUSSIANS' LINE; WIN JACOBSTADT

Hurl Back Slavs Over 10,000 Yards on 25 Mile Front.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

In the midst of Russia's internal troubles has come another German stroke on the Russian northern front, resulting in the capture of the bridgehead and town of Jacobstadt, on the Dvina, and the enforced retirement of the Russians in this region to the eastern bank of the river.

The fall of the bridgehead gave the Germans possession of new territory on a front of approximately twenty-five miles and six miles in depth, enabling them to push their lines to the west bank of the Dvina in this area. They took only 400 prisoners from the retreating Russians, but gathered in fifty guns from the abandoned positions.

Dramatic as this suddenly developed operation was, it seems unlikely to develop anything comparing in importance in its effect upon the general military situation with the desperate battle still in progress on the Flanders front.

German Losses Heavy in West.

Loath to give up the valuable ridges the British wrested from them on Thursday, the Germans continue to launch desperate counter attacks from their battered Flanders line and to combat with determination every effort of Field Marshal Haig's forces to improve their positions. This fighting has been costly to the Germans, and the London official statement lays stress on the exceedingly severe character of their losses.

The German command seems particularly reluctant to surrender the slight elevation west of Gheluvelt, close to the Ypres-Menin road. Fierce fighting developed there Saturday, the engagement centering about the position known as Tower Hamlets.

Aviation Reports Differ.

Berlin's official statement makes no claim of any ground recovered from the British. It records the fighting of Friday, the day following the initial British dash, as marked by continuation of British attacks along the Langemarck-Hollebebe front, which were repulsed, and describes Saturday's engagements as fighting of a local character which resulted in German successes.

Regarding the air fighting of Thursday and Friday, the customary comparison is given by Berlin of German and entente losses in machines. Thirty-nine hostile machines were shot down on those days by the Germans, it is declared, while only three German machines were lost.

This varies notably from the British official account, which mentions ten German airplanes destroyed and six driven down out of control. The probable loss of ten British machines, classed as missing, is admitted by London.

JUDGE KAVANAGH SAYS PACIFISTS ARE MILK-VEINED

"Milkveined" Americans came in for a drubbing yesterday at the hands of Judge Marcus Kavanaugh of the Superior court in a talk at the weekly luncheon of the Irish Fellowship club at the Hotel Sherman.

They are fighting the flag as effectively as though they had rifles in their hands, the judge sa[id]. He sounded a warning against the kaiser's diplomatic camouflage. The kaiser doesn't want peace; he wants time to raise new forces, the judge said.

"In the last two months," said Judge Kavanagh, "I have visited sixty American towns from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from the Canadian border to the Gulf of Mexico. And everywhere I visited I found soldiers doing 'squads right' and 'squads left,' and if the powers that be in Germany saw what I have seen they would be very anxious for peace.

"Six million stand ready for the call, and when needed there will be ten million others. We hear the talk of peace. No one desires peace except a few milk-veined Americans and British pacifists.

"The German emperor doesn't wish peace. All he wants is a truce. He holds one-third of Europe. If he can find time to reclaim his regiments, raise more forces, manufacture more cannon and powder, and get a breathing spell that is all he desires.

"This babbling of free speech should be stopped for it means treason and death."

DENIES BINGHAM WILL CONTEST

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., Sept. 22.—(Special.)—Mrs. Lawrence Lewis, who is visiting the Thornton Lewises at the Meadows near White Sulphur Springs, today denied knowledge of the rumor that she would contest the will of the late Mrs. Robert Worth Bingham.

Relative to the report of disinterment of Mrs. Bingham's body to determine the cause of death she said:

"I read a report in the morning papers of some action being taken, but aside from that have heard nothing of any contest of the will, and the report that Mrs. Bingham's body will be disinterred for autopsy is press rumor so far as any of us know."

Mrs. Lewis was the favorite niece of the late Mrs. Bingham.

TRIBUTE

Gov. Lowden Praises Eleventh Regiment and Declares Others of Home Guards Are Equally to Be Honored.

Springfield, Ill., Sept. 22.—Informed of the reception accorded the Eleventh Illinois infantry upon their return to Chicago, Gov. Lowden tonight expressed his gratification and paid a tribute to the men and officers.

"I am delighted to hear of the reception which the Eleventh infantry received upon their return to Chicago," said the governor. "I knew that this, our baby regiment, would be a revelation to the people of the state. The Ninth and Tenth, now in camp here, are equally admirable.

"The people of this state are under very great obligations to the officers and men of these regiments, for the service that they render is no whit less than the service to be rendered by any three regiments that have been federalized and are going abroad."

The state now has, according to the governor, sufficient arms to equip the entire force of 6,000 reserve militia provided for by an act of the last legislature.

O, YES, AUTUMNAL EQUINOX IS HERE; NEARLY FORGOT

Which Means It's Time to Buy That Hat.

Yesterday at 9:10 a. m. the autumnal equinox arrived. There was no beating of drums, no fanfare of trumpets, no clash of cymbals. Mrs. MacStinger went as usual to the grocery and ordered a dozen of eggs on the condition that they be fresh, a peck of potatoes, and a roast for Sunday.

Lusty Luke, the vegetable peddler, burst his larynx as customarily announcing the superior quality of his wares.

West Madison street car conductors wrestled with baby cabs and grew red in the face. The mayor was out of town. Nicholas Romanoff spent a quiet day. The baby had the colic.

The autumnal equinox arrived. The lake lapped gently along the shore and clerks stood first on one foot and then the other while a woman with a double chin matched a sample of blue taffeta.

Well, Well, What of It?

"Red" Malone, the traffic copper at State and Washington streets, blew his whistle.

"Well, the autumnal equinox is here," called a passing autoist. "Red" looked after him quizzically.

"Nutty as a $2 clock," he said, and he blew the east and west.

Tillie was hanging out the clothes when the sewing machine man came for his installment.

"Well, the autumnal equinox is here," he said cheerily. Tillie glowered.

"I'll have you know I'm a lady," she said. "Fresh!"

The staid citizen gazed regretfully upon his passe, lightsome helm of straw.

"I'll have to can it," he said. "This is the autumnal equinox." His wife glinted at him out of the corner of her eye.

Yes, Yes—the New Hat.

"You needn't swear," she said. "That hat is a disgrace. I'll have it cleaned in the spring."

On Monday Mr. Citizen will enter a hat emporium and say: "Well, the autumnal equinox is here, I see."

And the clerk will say: "Yep, you can git a bear with a little bow behind for two bucks."

The season has changed.

If You Don't Believe This Tale Recall Doc Crones

Two men came to a farmhouse near Burlington, Palatine, Bartlett, Crystal Lake, Elgin, McHenry, Kirkland, and Barrington, and while the farmer stepped out they poisoned the soup. The farmer came in, knew instantly that the soup had been poisoned, and shot one of the men, killing him instantly. Then he forced the other man to drink the soup. He died in ten minutes. This story "must be true," for it has come from each of the places mentioned above. No one, however, has added an explanation as to how the farmer knew the soup was poisoned. Nor can the place be located. It always is at "some other town."

TEACHER ORDERS BOY STRUNG UP, BEATEN, CHARGE

Wheaton Is Aroused by Hazing of Youth by Schoolmates.

Wallace Grange, 12 years old, son of W. S. Grange of Wheaton, bears lumps and black, blue and green marks upon his body as a result of a hazing Friday at the command of his school teacher, Miss Hazel Reber, according to his schoolmates. As a result the Wheaton school board gathered last night at the home of H. A. Schryver, president, with the county judge and the mayor present, and started an investigation.

Friday one of the boys brought a rubber balloon to school and blew it up in school hours, the story goes. Miss Reber told him to throw it into the wastepaper basket and he did. Later young Grange "fished" it out.

When Miss Reber learned this school work was stopped and, the pupils say, she announced to the boys and girls—all of the seventh and eighth grades—there was to be an "initiation," with young Grange as the chief figure.

Yard Arm, Grave Figure.

First a picture of a grave was drawn upon the blackboard and this epitaph put upon it:

Here lies "Wad" Grange,
Aggot darned goo mule,
He got overheated and
Now he's too cool.

Then he got threatening letters, signed by the "K. K. C." (meaning Ku Klux Klan), notes threatening his "end," warnings, pieces of paper with skull and cross bones, one showing a form dangling from a "yard arm," and numerous other things.

Some of these notes were signed "Bloody Bones," "Captain Kid," and other such names. One said Grange was going to "stretch hemp." These notes are in possession of Prof. J. B. Russell of the school.

Hanged to a Tree.

One boy was excused, according to the pupils, to get a rope. The school flag was lowered to half mast, others say. Clubs and pieces of board were obtained and spikes driven through them.

The boy was taken into a grove, a gunny sack put over his head, and his feet shoved into another, the pupils say. Then a rope was tied under his knees and under his arms and he was hoisted into a tree and, at command of the teacher, according to the charges, belabored with sticks.

Asked if he had had "enough," the boy "talked back" to the teacher, it is declared, and she ordered more punishment, and it was given. Then, the pupils say, she beat the boy over the arms with a strap.

When seen at her home Miss Reber admitted that this story, told by numerous students and their parents, was correct in effect.

"He's a bad boy," she explained. "He's an imp and he talked back to me. He came to school so dirty I had to take him out and scrub him time and time again."

Straps were issued to all the teachers at the beginning of the term, Miss Reber said, but Prof. Russell declared he had no knowledge of the straps.

Teacher Retains Lawyer.

While the Grange boy was showing the welts upon his arms and body, and where his hands had been beaten, his mother brought out a coat. The pocket was half torn out. She explained:

"When the teacher told Wallace to put out his hands for more punishment—he'd already been whipped upon his hands, he tells me—he stuck them in his pockets. The boys twisted his arms and yanked his hands out of his pockets. When they did it they tore this pocket."

Miss Reber yesterday retained Frank E. Herrick as her attorney. She comes of one of the best known families in Wheaton. Her father, the late Irwin M. Reber, was several times mayor of Wheaton and her grandfather was the founder of the Reber Preserving works.

"250 COLD SMACKS"

That Means Dollars in Ike Bloom's Parlance and Refers to Suit to Collect from Actress.

"Two hundred and fifty 'cold smacks,' and she told me she was a comedienne, but this is tragedy," said Mr. Isaac Bloom, ruefully. He referred to a loan of $250 which he made to Miss Regina Connelli over a year ago and for which he attached the salary of the young actress two weeks ago when she was appearing in a vaudeville sketch, "Moondown," at the Majestic theater here.

"It's a purely personal matter," said Mr. Bloom, "and I would rather not discuss it. I lent Miss Connelli the money over a year ago—just on her word. She ignored my letters after she left Chicago and I just thought I would show her that 'Ike' Bloom was no sucker.

"She gave a bond and her salary was released and the case is still pending."

Miss Connelli has been on the stage over six years. She is known to Chicago theatergoers as having played in "Bachelors and Benedicts," "Ready Money," and "Take My Advice."

Mr. Bloom is proprietor of a café known as "Freiberg's," at 18 East Twenty-second street.

RUSHING TO FILM AUTO ACCIDENT, HE STAGES ONE

Rex Weber, director of the Titan Pictures Corporation company, Century building, hopped on a taxicab yesterday to rush to the Rothacker studio. He had an idea for a comedy automobile accident.

He was making a diagram of the "set," when there was a crash, and Mr. Weber's head went through the taxi door in a style which the most adept Keystoner couldn't beat.

The cab had collided with a south bound Broadway car. The taxi lost a front wheel and smashed an axle. Mr. Weber broke a rib and the third commandment. He is at his home in Edgewater.

Motoring to Rockford? Have You Extra Room?

If wishes were autos one can't imagine how many sweethearts and mothers of national army boys would be riding to Rockford on Sunday. Some of them can ill afford the train fare.

It is an opportunity for owners of automobiles to render a patriotic service. Miss Frances Brown of 6028 South Halsted street first thought of it. Miss Brown has a brother at Camp Grant and "somebody else," and so have a number of her girl friends. So yesterday she appealed to THE TRIBUNE:

"I would love to go over there on Sundays. And I know many other girls and mothers who would like to go but cannot afford it. Couldn't you arrange to have autoists who drive over there on Sunday make room for us in their machines? How we would appreciate it!"

German Pastor Found Guilty of Disloyalty

Winona, Minn., Sept. 22.—The northern conference of the German Methodist Episcopal church today sustained the charge that the Rev. G. H. Lehnert, pastor of the Central German Methodist Episcopal church of Minneapolis, had used obscene language in a letter to the Liberty loan committee at Minneapolis last May but did not expel him from the church. Instead, the temporary suspension was continued indefinitely because of his expressed penitence for the offense and other "extenuating circumstances" surrounding the letter.

Boarder Fatally Wounds Woman, Then Kills Self

Perry, Ia., Sept. 22.—S. A. Aldrich, 55, a shoemaker, shot and fatally wounded Mrs. Frank Brown, 33, and then killed himself here this afternoon. Aldrich had been a boarder at Mrs. Brown's home for four years and is alleged to have sought to prevent the woman from effecting a reconciliation with her husband, from whom she had been separated several years. When the woman, it is said, refused to listen to Aldrich the shooting followed.

STATE ACTION, CITY CONTROL OF MILK SALE URGED

Dr. Robertson and Ald. Nance Discuss Protection of Poor.

Action by Gov. Lowden and the state council for defense and a plan to have Chicago go into the milk business were proposed yesterday to check the activities of the milk producers in ordering a 30 per cent increase in prices.

Dealers also were laying plans to prevent the forcing of milk to 12 or 14 cents a quart.

Health Commissioner Robertson and Ald. Nance, the latter chairman of the city council committee on health, declared that a sudden rise in milk prices at this time would increase the death rate, as it would work against babies, invalids, and tubercular patients.

"This proposed increase is not fair," said Dr. Robertson. "It will work a hardship on the poor. These people can get along without meat, but they need milk.

Plan for City Action.

Health Commissioner Robertson and Alderman Nance, who is chairman of the city tuberculosis sanitariums, have the right to sell milk at cost. Dr. Robertson believes it can be sold in this way at 9 cents, as it costs 8 cents at the depots. In case the plan is found to be legal, Dr. Robertson holds that sales could be made in this way to all residents of the city. The health commissioner contends that 700 milk dealers are not necessary, and that a big saving could be effected if the city would make sales direct to consumers.

"Babies and tubercular patients will suffer if this new scale of prices go into force Oct. 1," said the commissioner. "Last year we treated 25,000 tubercular cases. This year we have more than 30,000."

Ald. Nance, who, with Commissioner Robertson, recently made an inspection trip through the dairy district, urged Gov. Lowden and the state council for defense to take hold of the situation.

Expects Federal Control.

"I think there should be a month to month price until the government fixes a definite price," said Mr. Nance.

"This idea of arbitrarily raising the price of milk 30 per cent is unfair. It has been an ideal dairymen's summer. Feed is plentiful, and I cannot see anything to justify the increase.

"The state council for defense has ample power to take hold of this matter, and I hope it will act.

"It is unfair for a few men to get together and dictate the price of milk."

The city has no jurisdiction over milk prices, the authorities pointed out.

Milk dealers are to decide early this week regarding the plan they are to follow. The dealers met yesterday at the Hotel La Salle and discussed difficulties they are having with drivers, but the price of milk was not taken up. At their meeting Friday the producers prepared to arbitrate with the dealers as soon as the expected opposition should develop. A resolution was passed to leave the arbitration in the hands of the milk board, of which C. H. Potter is chairman, but opposition developed and arrangements were made for calling another meeting of producers to discuss the protests.

MRS. COURTENAY LOSES $6,500 IN GEMS FROM BAG

John O'Rourke, house detective of the Hotel Sherman, reported last night to the police that Mrs. William Courtenay, wife of the actor (now playing in "Pals First" at the Illinois), who are staying at the hotel, had lost a brooch and a pendant, both set with diamonds and valued at $6,500, or they had been stolen, some time between Friday afternoon and yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Courtenay took the gems to a loop jewelry store Friday to have repairs made. For some reason she was unable to get the work done and replaced the jewelry in her handbag.

She returned to the hotel and did not open the handbag again until yesterday afternoon when the jewelry was missing.

Thanks for the Concert; We're Glad to Explain

The Grant Park Camp band, sixty strong, had a busy afternoon.

First they serenaded THE TRIBUNE and then, before the echoes from the last number had died away, they sent a delegation to straighten out a matter of confused identity.

"We are not the Great Lakes band," said Edward M. Kennedy, chief musician. "The band was built up from recruits at the Grant Park camp and trained there. It plays for the entertainments at the camp on Tuesday afternoon and evening, and Thursday evening. It also gives a concert every noon at the Randolph street gate."

Suffragist of Jail Fame Here to Promote Cause

Miss Margaret Whittemore, national organizer for the Woman's party, who is one of the young women who served thirty days in the workhouse for picketing the White House on the Fourth of July, arrived in Chicago yesterday to arrange for a series of suffrage meetings here. Mrs. Lawrence Lewis of Philadelphia, member of the national executive board of the Woman's party, and Miss Mabel Vernon of Delaware, national secretary, will speak here on the 6th, 7th, and 8th of October.

Plans Launched for Club for Deaf and Dumb

Those interested in aid of the deaf and dumb are asked to attend a meeting this afternoon in the Congress hotel in which there will be organized a society to carry out the construction of a clubhouse and social center for the deaf and dumb. The site has been presented by Mrs. R. Philip Gormully and the Rev. P. J. Mahan, S. J., has been appointed moderator of the society by Archbishop Mundelein.

MATTESON CHIEF PUTS BARRAGE ON ANTI-WAR TALK

Few Brief Words Take Possible Sting from His Speech.

Should there be any question about the matter, let it be mentioned quite distinctly that the mayor of Matteson, Ill., is Alexander F. Robinson. If anyone is disposed to the contrary that one will find adequate proof by applying to that same Alexander F. Robinson.

Four meetings projected in behalf of peace and democracy and other associated matters have been headed off by Mayor Robinson. Another one was proposed for last night. Matteson is on the Cook county line and a certain Prof. McQueen of Morgan Park was scheduled to speak.

Vetoes the Plans.

Mayor Robinson vetoed the plans for the gathering, whereupon the village board, consisting of Joseph Hauck, Arthur Mahler, Louis Meinheidt, Gustav Grosse, Henry Michelf, Henry Demering, and Leo Koch, vetoed Mayor Robinson and bade Prof. McQueen fare forth with his speech.

Mayor Robinson was reached on the telephone last night for news of what happened.

"McQueen applied for a permit to speak in the village hall," said Mayor Robinson.

Defends War Policies.

"I told him I was for upholding the constitution, for permitting free thought and free speech on all religious and political matters. If he wished to speak on religion or on socialism he might go the limit, I told him, but if he opened his mouth against the administration at Washington or against the work of the government in this crisis he had better begin folding his tent before the trouble started.

"I have a good village marshal down here and we understand each other perfectly. McQueen went before the meeting and he spoke on straight socialistic subjects. He didn't deviate from the narrow path. There was no trouble and there isn't going to be any. Anti-Americanism will not thrive in this town."

BRITISH SEIZE MAIL OF SWEDEN FOOD MISSION

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 22.—Dr. Hjalmar Lundbohm, recently named by Sweden as a special envoy to the United States in connection with shipments of foods, arrived here today from Christiania, accompanied by First Secretary Patrick Reutersword of the Swedish foreign office.

A quantity of mail matter, said to consist mainly of statistics on consumption, importation and production of food supplies of Sweden, was seized by British authorities when the ship put in at a Canadian port for examination.

Dr. Lundbohm said he had entered a vigorous protest against the seizure of pouches containing mail matter. He was informed by the boarding officers, he said, that they were carrying out British admiralty orders.

Climbs Ladder to Get Her and He, 72; She, 71, Elope

Union City, Tenn., Sept. 22.—Age did not cool the ardent love Dr. J. T. Lasley, 72, had for Mrs. Aline Priest, 71, so he went to her home at Troy, Tenn., placed a ladder to her upstairs window, climbed it and helped her through the window to the ground. They eloped to Hickman, Ky., and were married. They will spend their honeymoon on Dr. Lasley's stock farm near here.

Court Upholds Plan of Woodmen Circle Women

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 22.—The Supreme court of Nebraska, in a decision handed down today, sustained the action of the convention of the Woodmen circle, the woman's auxiliary of the Woodmen of the World, held at Atlanta, Ga., in July, 1917, in giving control of the order to an executive council, composed of the supreme guardian, the supreme clerk and the supreme adviser of the order.

WOMEN TO FORM BIG LAND ARMY

A woman's land army, trained and educated to take the places of the men who have been called from the fields to the trenches, is that the Woman's National Farm and Garden association hopes to accomplish through its convention, which is called for Oct. 3, 4, and 5 at the New Morrison Hotel.

Some of the most prominent women in Chicago are associated in the undertaking as members of the woman's committee of the council of national defense, with which the Farm and Garden society is affiliated. Among the women who will preside at the sessions of the convention are Mrs. Francis King of Alma, Mich., president of the association; Mrs. Alfred Gross of Evanston, president of the mid-west branch, and Mrs. G. B. S. Steward, vice president. Mrs. William Hibbard, president of the Garden Clubs of Illinois, will be the honorary chairman the first morning and make the address of welcome.

Dr. Blunt's Bond Reduced.

Federal Judge George A. Carpenter yesterday reduced the bond of Dr. Arthur L. Blunt, termed by the government as "the worst trafficker in drugs with whom they have ever had to contend," from $25,000 to $10,000. After the reduction of the bond the doctor was returned to jail.

RUSSO-ROUMANIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Front of Prince Leopold: On the western bank of the Dvina divisions fighting under the command of Lieut. Gen. Count von Schmettow, by a well prepared and powerfully executed attack, succeeded in breaking through the Russian positions northwest of Jacobstadt.

The excellent work of our artillery and mine throwers made a way for the infantry which was well supported by aviators under the leadership of Prince Friedrich Sigismund of Prussia, in spite of the unfavorable weather conditions prevailing.

By an impetuous thrust the enemy was forced back against the river. Under the pressure of our troops he yielded the bridgehead and territory forty kilometers wide and about ten kilometers deep on the western bank of the Dvina and fled in haste to the eastern bank. Jacobstadt is in our hands. Up to the present more than 400 Russians have been made prisoner and more than fifty guns are announced as booty.

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 22.—Northern front: In the Riga region yesterday, after intense artillery preparation, enemy detachments attacked in the direction of Sisseral. The attack broke down, owing to the tenacity of our advanced guards, which were supported by our artillery.

Near Jacobstadt the enemy yesterday morning fiercely bombarded our positions, particularly in the Dokterselburg sector, and also other points at our rear. At noon the enemy started an attack and, after piercing our lines, occupied parts of our positions southwest of Admini.

In this sector some of our positions two miles distant from the Dvina also were captured. Our detachments, under the cover of our rear guards, retired to the right bank of the Dvina.

Southern and southwestern fronts: Yesterday there were only fusillades, the most lively being in the region of Sventsiany, southwest of Postavy [south of Dvinsk].

Roumanian front: Thursday evening the enemy, after artillery preparation, three times attacked Roumanian positions in the region north of Muncelul. All attacks broke down. An enemy attempt to attack Roumanian positions north of Grozechti yesterday morning also broke down.

FRENCH FRONT

BRITISH.

LONDON, Sept. 22.—There was heavy fighting during the day south of the Ypres-Menin road. The enemy did not succeed in regaining possession of Tower Hamlets ridge, three strong German counter attacks being repulsed.

Attacks farther south compelled our advanced troops to retire slightly from the ground gained yesterday, but the whole positions captured on Sept. 20 were retained.

AVIATION.

The favorable weather resulted in great activity of the airplanes and balloons, which ranged the guns on the hostile batteries, troops, trenches, and the shell holes.

Ten and a half tons of bombs were dropped on the Roulers, Menin, and Ledeghem stations, an airdrome, billets in the vicinity of Lille, and masses of troops and transports on the Ypres-Menin road.

Ten German airplanes were brought down in fighting and eight others were brought down out of control. Twelve of our machines are missing, including two which have not returned from a bombing raid.

DAY STATEMENT.

Hostile counter attacks continued yesterday evening on the Ypres front. Considerable German forces were engaged without any result being gained except a heavy increase in the enemy's losses.

At dusk the enemy launched a powerful counter attack in massed formation on a wide front east of St. Julien.

At one point his troops succeeded in penetrating a short distance into our new positions, but they were immediately and completely driven out by our local counter attack.

At all other points West Lancashire and London troops repulsed the enemy's infantry with great loss. At the end of two hours of fierce fighting our whole line was intact. The attack was delivered with great determination and the enemy's losses were exceedingly severe.

Early in the night after the failure of his attack on the Tower hamlets ridge during the afternoon, the enemy again attacked with strong forces on both sides of the Ypres-Menin road. Here also heavy fighting ended in complete repulse of the enemy.

During the evening a third hostile counter attack east of Langemarck was crushed by our artillery.

AVIATION.

During the first two hours of our attack on Thursday low clouds and a drizzling rain made flying almost impossible. However, our airplanes flew out at low altitude and dropped bombs on a hostile airdrome near Courtral, besides firing at bodies of German infantry.

As soon as the weather slightly improved our aerial activity became great and contact was kept with our advancing troops and both airplanes and balloons gave observation for our artillery. On several occasions the location of enemy troops preparing for a counter attack was reported to our artillery, who successfully dealt with the situation.

While the attack was in progress airplanes fired from their machine guns over 28,000 rounds, from heights ranging between 100 and 1,000 feet, at German infantry in their trenches and shell holes, at reinforcements coming up to the battle, at bodies of troops on roads and working behind the lines, and at hostile batteries, machine guns and transports.

During the day sixty-eight bombs were dropped on the Ledeghem railway station, ninety-six on two airdromes northeast of Lille, and 108 on billets and ammunition dumps in the battle area. At night, in spite of the most unfavorable weather, bombs were dropped on two towns, on the Ledeghem-Roulers and Menin railway stations.

In the middle of the day the German aircraft became very active, attempting to interfere with our artillery and our bombing and low flying machines. In the evening, when the weather improved, they kept well to the east of the lines and were not inclined to fight. Ten hostile machines were destroyed and six were driven down out of control. Ten of our machines are missing.

SEA AND AIR RAIDS.

Naval works at Ostend were this morning bombarded by ships of our Belgian coast patrol with satisfactory results.

Three seaplanes attempting to assist the enemy by observation were shot down by our air patrol.

On Thursday night and Friday morning bombing raids were made by our naval aircraft on the following military objectives: Aertyoke, Sparaphelhoek, and Thourout airdromes and the Thourout railway station. Bombs were also dropped near the Atelier de La Marine at Ostend. A large quantity of bombs was dropped with good results.

The bombers were attacked by numerous enemy aircraft, which were driven off with the assistance of the Royal Flying corps patrol. All our machines returned safely.

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—Front of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria: After a violent outburst of fire, followed by local attacks by the enemy near St. Julien, which were unsuccessful, the artillery battle on the Flanders front weakened yesterday morning. At midday again it increased to great violence on the coast and from the Yser to the Lys. At 6 o'clock in the evening the strongest drum fire commenced suddenly and lasted an hour from Langemarck to Hollebeke.

After this the British infantry again advanced to the attack on many points of the front. Notwithstanding the devastating effect of our artillery defense the enemy assault was carried out and was repulsed in hand to hand fighting, especially between the Boessinghe-Staden and the Ypres-Roulers road.

Further south to the canal near Hollebeke the weight of our destructive fire broke down the enemy attacking waves. Only at isolated points were the English storming troops able to leave their crater positions, and they were repulsed. This morning, after a further increase in firing, local infantry engagements developed. All terminated successfully for us.

With the other armies of the western front there was only slight fighting activity.

AVIATION.

Aviators took a prominent part in the fighting in Flanders. In the last two days thirty-nine enemy airplanes and two captive balloons were shot down. Three of our aviators fell.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The artillery on both sides was very active on the whole Aisne front, notably near the Monnejean farm and in the regions of Cerny and Courcy. In Champagne the Germans delivered an attack against our positions between Maisons de Champagne and Massiges. Some enemy groups were able to reach our lines and gain a foothold in a trench element, but were driven out in a spirited engagement.

On our side we penetrated a German trench near Beausejour, destroyed shelters, and brought back material.

On the right bank of the Meuse there were quite lively artillery actions near Bezonvaux. In Upper Alsace patrol encounters took place east of Seppois.

AVIATION.

During the period of the last ten days fifteen German airplanes and one captive balloon were brought down by our pilots and twenty-nine enemy airplanes were forced to land in their own lines in a damaged condition after engagements.

DAY STATEMENT.

There was a lively artillery bombardment at various points along the Aisne front. Enemy surprise attacks against our small posts near La Royere, south of the Miette, and in the region northwest of Reims were repulsed by our fire.

At times there were violent artillery actions in the Champagne and on both banks of the River Meuse.

There was nothing to report from the rest of the front.

ITALIAN FRONT

ITALIAN.

ROME, Sept. 22.—Along the whole front there were brisk artillery duels, more intense in the upper Cordevole valley, in the region of Bainsizza plateau and the Selo sector in the Carso. In a patrol action northeast of Gorits, some prisoners were taken.

AVIATION.

Three of our airships last night attacked enemy encampments in the Chia-Povano valley, the station and hutments at Grahovo and railway works northeast of Prosecco. The operation, made difficult by a sudden adverse change in the meteorological conditions and by the enemy's most intense and well directed fire, was brilliantly executed and the objectives were bombarded with four tons of high explosive bombs.

AUSTRIAN.

VIENNA, Sept. 20.—[Delayed.]—An Italian attack without artillery accompaniment against Monte Sangabriele was brought to a standstill by our fire. On Col Bricon (northwest of Trent) the enemy endeavored to attack after a mine explosion, but was effectively caught under our fire in the positions in which he was preparing to attack. The number of prisoners brought in near Carzano (east of Trent) has increased to 11 officers and 516 men.

MACEDONIAN FRONT

GERMAN.

BERLIN, Sept. 22.—In the mountain land between Lake Ochruda and the Skumbi valley strong French forces attacked German and Austro-Hungarian troops who threw the enemy back in hard fighting.

FRENCH.

PARIS, Sept. 22.—The artillery activity yesterday was again marked in the region of the Vardar and north of Monastir. British aviators bombed enemy establishments in the neighborhood of Demir-Hissar.

TURKISH FRONT

RUSSIAN.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 22.—There is nothing to report.

SAN FRANCISCO SHIPYARDS MEN ARE STILL OUT

San Francisco, Cal., Sept. 22.—Conferees seeking to settle the strike of 25,000 ironworkers and shipbuilders here adjourned tonight without having reached an agreement.

Attorney Gavin McNab, special representative of the U. S. shipping board, announced the conference would be resumed tomorrow. He expressed the hope that a temporary settlement would be made that would result in the employés returning to work pending a final settlement of the workmen's demands for a 50 per cent increase in wages.

Seattle Trouble Grows.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 22.—Complete cessation of work in Seattle shipyards is threatened on account of the lack of success of negotiations in Washington between representatives of the U. S. shipping board, employés, and employers.

Further complicating the situation came an open break today between the Master Builders' association of Seattle, and the Seattle district council of carpenters over the trade union boycott of ten hour lumber.

Wilson Asks Boy Scouts' Aid in New Liberty Loan

New York, Sept. 22.—An appeal from President Wilson was received here today by the Boy Scouts of America asking their assistance in the coming second Liberty loan campaign, in which, he says, the "issue must be subscribed for in such a way as to show the firm resolution of our people in the present war."

GERMAN ADVANCE ON DVINA FRONT

The Germans have made another smash on the Dvina river front, driving the Russians out of Jacobstadt and to the west bank of the stream. The invaders advanced on a twenty-five mile front to a depth of six miles. Fifty guns and 400 prisoners were taken by the Germans.

HAIL TO THE HOME GUARD; FAREWELL U. S. PROTECTION

Day Made Notable by Return of Eleventh and Start of Rookies.

BY HENRY M. HYDE.

More than 1,800 of Chicago's new soldiers started yesterday on the first stage of their long march to the wars. And another regiment of Chicago soldiers were welcomed home from their training at Camp Lincoln.

In the untrained ranks of the selected men who went to join the great new national armies at Camp Grant all were young and stalwart. In the straight and well drilled lines of the returning regiment marched many boys under 21 and many men who have passed into their late 30s and beyond. The youngest was not yet 16 years old and the oldest was the commanding officer, Gen. James E. Stuart, veteran of both the civil war and the Spanish-American war, who, at the age of 76, marched at the head of his regiment as straight and soldierly as the best.

To Guard the Homes.

The selected men on their way to Rockford are to be trained to fight the battles of the republic in foreign lands. The boys and their older comrades in arms have come back home, meanwhile, to see that peace and security are maintained in the state and that neither foreign plotters nor domestic traitors disturb the wartime serenity of Illinois.

All the noon hour the bands of the departing and the returning soldiers filled the loop with martial music. Meanwhile over at the Chicago and Northwestern station on the west side a thousand selected men from Wisconsin, on their way to the training camp at Battle Creek, Mich., crowded the great building and showed their high spirit with songs and cheers.

During the afternoon the big band of white clad jackies from the naval training station at Great Lakes marched through the downtown streets, playing the war tunes of the rebellion and the newer marches, written by their leader, Lieut. John Phillip Sousa, U. S. N., who has deserted the concert stage to do his bit for his country in the training of the greatest of all naval bands.

Remarkable Progress.

With pride and admiration Chicago welcomed home its baby regiment, the Eleventh, marching at company front with a dash and steadiness that made it seem impossible only three weeks of intensive training had accomplished such results. Gen. James E. Stuart, its veteran C. O., can be no prouder of his boys than is Chicago.

Maj. Gen. Carter, U. S. A., commanding the central department, his staff, Col. James A. Ryan, commanding the reserve officers' training camp at Fort Sheridan, and members of the state council of defense reviewed the parade from the Jackson boulevard front of the federal building. They were emphatic in their admiration of what had been accomplished in so few weeks. Those who watched the parade may remember that on Aug. 1 the Eleventh regiment was unheard of. Since that time more than 1,000 men have enlisted in its ranks, the regiment has been officered, uniformed, equipped, armed, and trained. From a military standpoint its appearance yesterday was little less than a miracle. From start to finish it is less than six weeks old.

Selected Men More Impressive.

If the march past of the Eleventh was stirring and impressive, that of the unorganized column of selected men was vastly more appealing. None but a block could have watched it unmoved.

The band of Col. Moriarty's Seventh regiment, loaned for the occasion, came blaring their way from the west down the boulevard to lead the way. Behind marched a company of stalwart bucks from the same gallant command, sweeping the way clear for the parade behind.

Filled already with a touch of the soldier spirit, the selected men had formed themselves into companies. At the head of each was a pasteboard marker with the self-assigned letter of the company. Half the men in the long straggling line had their wives or their sweethearts on one arm and their mothers on the other. Old men, limping heavily on canes, walked beside their sons. There were even children tagging along to bid father or big brother good-by as he started for the wars.

The men themselves, carrying their paper bundles of toilet necessities, had their heads up and fire in their eyes. They sang as they marched.

Slogans Mark Line.

These men differed from many of the detachments which have left Chicago in that they all marched instead of riding in automobiles. And every few feet along the line they carried a home made banner with a legend roughly painted on pasteboard with a marking brush. Many of them expressed a fierce desire to capture the head of the Hohenzollerns.

"We want the kaiser's head and we want it quick," was the most bloodthirsty of the lot. There were several who were "Off for a swim in the Rhine" and one which declared its belief that "Barry's bucks will capture Berlin or bust."

One saw men of half a dozen nationalities in the ranks, but none which hung back.

Over at the Grand Central station there were good-by tears in plenty, but the boys, leaning out of their troop train, cheered back at their weeping wives and sweethearts and mothers and went away with a cheer.

Make Good Showing.

Meanwhile the boys and the elderly men of the Eleventh, in spite of certain shortages of uniform and equipment, made a smart showing as they marched through the downtown streets and out over the miles of asphalt to the armory of the Second regiment, I. N. G., at 3653 West Madison street.

Last night there were welcoming parties for the returning soldiers at Wilmette and other north shore suburbs and in a thousand homes. While out at Camp Grant the 1,800 additions to the new national armies were also being welcomed, more rudely and boisterously, perhaps, but none the less sincerely.

And hundreds of thousands of people in Chicago yesterday were thrilled with the strains of martial music and with the sight of the marching men to a deeper sense of the reality of war than they had ever had before.

LAWN FETE FOR WAR FUND PROVES BRILLIANT EVENT

Society Throngs Insull Estate to Buy and Give.

Those who traveled by motor to the vast estate of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Insull at Libertyville yesterday to attend the musical and sale for the benefit of the families of soldiers in France, and who had expected to find a quaint outdoor party, found the country fair of their fancy grown up into a gorgeous event.

In the great central loggia of the beautiful Italian palace which is the country home of Mr. and Mrs. Insull, immense masses of flowers in huge marble urns, in antique turquoise vases and wide oriental basins made a brilliant color contrast with soft grays and cream color of the walls and the balcony extending about the room. Oriental rugs and tapestries hung from the balustrades and great clusters of fruit were massed in the wall fountains.

Society Women Make Sales.

In the adjoining rooms were long tables from which society women, acting as members of the sales committee, sold fancy articles, desk appointments, work bags, knitted sweaters of all colors and bric-a-brac. A dozen pretty young girls in brilliantly colored sweaters walked through the rooms with wide baskets filled with small formal bouquets for sale, and in the long marble dining room punch was served by other members of the committee.

Outside this room, which opens upon a sunny alcove enclosed in glass, guests wandered about a lawn which sloped down to a winding lake on which little fleets of ducks sailed hither and thither.

Mrs. Insull Charming.

Mrs. Insull was an assiduous hostess, charming in a gown of flesh colored crêpe and Italian lace, with a round high turban. Mrs. Lawrence Viles was chairman of the committee of young girls who sold flowers and who wore bright sweaters and pretty wide summer hats. Those selling were Miss Clarissa Donnelley, Miss Elizabeth Chase, Miss Polly Chase, Miss Mary Baker, Miss Virginia Fitz Hugh, Miss Marie Smith, Miss Laura Thompson, Miss Betty Scott, Miss Courtney Letts, Miss Harriet McLaughlin, Miss Margaret Carry, Miss Alice Carpenter, Miss Edith Cummings, and Miss Carol Cummings.

Miss Emily Russell, wearing over her frock a smock of orange and having a parasol and hat of the same color, was bargaining away her adornments. Miss Clara Hollis and Miss Martha Clow took care of the tickets for punch, and in the "salesroom" were Mrs. Henry Rumsey, Mrs. James Keeley, Mrs. Bertrand Walker, Mrs. Halsted G. Freeman, Mrs. E. C. Pauling, Mrs. Laurance H. Armour, and Mrs. Leverett Thompson.

British Officers Present.

A number of officers from the British recruiting mission were present, among them Col. F. C. Jamieson, Maj. E. W. Wright, Maj. D. Guthrie, Maj. H. E. Ksown, and Capt. A. L. Brown. An orchestra, made up of members of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, played during the afternoon, and Mme. Irene Pawlowska of the Chicago Opera company sang several popular songs. Many of the guests, especially those living in Lake Forest, were either hosts or guests at dinner parties given in the evening and later returned to attend the entertainment given in the dining room of the great house by the Russian dancers in the company of Serge Oukrainsky and Andreas Pavley.

Eugene Cohan, the Russian baritone, sang in the evening. Among those who came were Mrs. Howard Vandoren Shaw, who wore a gown of purple georgette crêpe and who was with her sister, Mrs. Charles T. Atkinson.

Mrs. George A. McKinlock, who was in a black serge suit and small hat; Mrs. Hobart Chatfield-Taylor, who wore a blue serge coat and high hat; Mrs. Robert B. Gregory, in gray; Mrs. Charles T. Boynton, in a black satin gown; Mrs. Solomon Smith, Mrs. Henry S. Robbins, Mr. and Mrs. Harrison Musgrave, Mrs. Robert G. McGann and her daughter, Grace; Mrs. John S. Nollen, Mrs. A. C. Haven, Mrs. Ella Wood Dean, Mrs. Frank C. Letts, Mrs. Louis F. Swift, Mrs. Morris M. Townley, Mrs. I. C. Elston Jr., Mrs. William S. Monroe, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick T. Vaux, Mrs. Frederick Scott, Mrs. Maurice Miller, Mrs. Frank Miller, Mrs. Frank R. Chandler, Mrs. Benjamin Carpenter, and Mrs. Scott Durand.

Mrs. John M. Glenn of Evanston had with her her new son-in-law and her daughter, Ensign and Mrs. Thomas Jerrold Bryce, and her daughter, Mary. Mrs. Joseph M. Cudahy, Mrs. Charles Garfield King, and Mrs. Norman Williams were together. Miss Alice Cudahy, in a lavender sweater and wide hat, and Miss Isabel Robbins were also there.

Others Assisting.

With Julius Rosenwald were his daughters, Mrs. Armand Deutsch and Miss Marion Rosenwald. Others assisting or purchasing to help the cause were Mrs. William A. Alexander, Mrs. Jacob Baur, Miss Emily Larned, Mrs. H. H. Shearson, Miss Mary Nixon, Mrs. Frank G. Logan, Mrs. Edward F. Carry, Miss Doris Russell, Miss Helen Hoyne, Mrs. Arthur Farwell, Mrs. William V. Kelly, Mrs. George Thorne, Mrs. D. Mark Cummings, Mrs. Reuben H. Donnelley, Mrs. Cyrus H. Adams Jr., and Mrs. C. Edward Pope.

Samuel Insull Jr., son of the hostess, who is in the service of his country, was present during the afternoon. The proceeds of the sale and musical will go to the care of families of Canadians or Englishmen from Illinois, Iowa, Indiana, and Michigan who have enlisted in either the land or sea forces of their countries. The proceeds of the flower sales alone amounted to over $500 and it is expected that several times that amount will be counted as a result of the affair.

A rendezvous with death made thirty years ago was kept Friday night at the municipal pier by Mrs. Anna Houslien, 57 years old, of 19 East Ohio street. She left no message. A son, Robert, 32 years old, said she appeared melancholy when she left the home Friday night. The body was discovered yesterday morning near the pier by a night watchman.

Mrs. Houslien had never recovered from the shock of losing her husband, who died thirty years ago, her son said.

KAISER PLOTS IN U. S. SHOWN BY DOCUMENTS

Startling Chapter in Diplomatic History of the War Revealed.

the guise of a commercial investigation bureau.

Subsidizing of a bureau for the purpose of stirring up labor troubles in munition plants.

The bomb industry and other related activities.

KOENIG-VON PAPEN COMMERCE BUREAU.

Perhaps the most illuminating single document in the collection is a letter of July 20, 1915, here reproduced as it appeared upon the stationery of the "Bureau of Investigation." This innocent, pretending agency was at the outset the secret service of the Hamburg-American Steamship company. Under Paul Koenig, its manager, it became an adjunct to the German diplomatic secret service. "XXX" is the secret designation of Koenig, who is now under indictments on criminal charges in connection with this "diplomatic" work, and is interned at Fort Oglethorpe.

The person represented by the figure "7,000" is Capt. von Papen, former military attache of the German embassy and the practical executive of its underground system. The document describes the subterfuges of "XXX" [Koenig] so that he might not be identified by the mysterious —— when they met. "XXX" states that money was to be drawn for the payment of $150 to the unnamed person, under peculiar precautions, through "Check No. 146 on the Riggs National bank, Washington, dated July 16, payable to ——————, signed ——————, amount $150. No reason was given as to why the payment was made," says the report.

BOMBS IN COAL.

Several days after the payment, the recipient called at the "passenger office of the —— line" and made a statement which is thus embodied in the XXX report.

"My name is ——. I have an office at the —— building, but I do not care to state my local address. I intend to cause serious damage to vessels of the allies leaving ports of the United States by placing bombs, which I am making myself, on board. These bombs resemble ordinary lumps of coal, and I am planning to have them concealed in the coal to be laden on steamers of the allies."

Finally XXX states that "the caller" brought with him a sample bomb, "such as has been described to you by the subscriber," and asks for the instructions.

The document is lettered at the foot, "O. R. to 7000," indicating that the secret agent known as "O. R." had transmitted it to Von Papen.

CHECK IS TRACED.

Now for the proof, direct and unescapable. Check 146 on the Riggs National bank has been traced and added to the secret service collection. It is payable to Koenig and signed by Von Papen. Therefore Von Papen stands convicted, on the evidence of a report claimed as an official document by the Germans, of paying money to a plotter designing to blow up merchant ships sailing from the port of New York. The person who made this report is known to department of justice officials.

Compare these documents with the following authorized statement from Berlin, transmitted by wireless for publication in the New York Times in December, 1915:

"The German government has, naturally, never knowingly accepted the support of any person, group of persons, society, or organization seeking to promote the cause of Germany in the United States by illegal acts, by counsel or violence, by contravention of law, or by any means whatever that could offend the American people in the pride of their own authority."

KOENIG'S BUREAU IN SPY WORK.

Destruction was not by any means the sole interest of Koenig's energetic bureau. It concerned itself also with spy enterprises. To Koenig wrote Otto West, an American citizen and proprietor of the Hour Glass, at 908 (or 963) Fifth avenue, recommending a relative of his who, according to his description, must be an interesting and somewhat formidable figure. Mr. West's description, somewhat curtailed, follows:

"He is a grandson of the late Oberhofprediger Strauss of Berlin, brother of the present Militär Oberpfarrer Strauss of Potsdam, nephew of the late Admiral von Schleinitz, the late Gen. von Mantey, etc. This gentleman changed his name some twenty odd years ago to an American name, and none of his associates suspects his German birth or antecedents. He is an international journalist of great repute, for years at the head of a newspaper organization in England.

"He has a personal reason to be very bitter against England, because two years ago [this letter appears to have been written about June 1, 1915, which would make the date referred to the early summer of 1913] a certain attack was made against him over commercial matters in Great Britain, and it was only by appealing to the United States department of state and a writ of habeas corpus before the lord chief justice of England that he escaped successfully. . . . He was in England and France at the outbreak of the war; he has access to the great sources of British and French official information. He wants to go across to Europe and serve secretly for Germany."

HERE'S A PSEUDO LABOR AGENCY.

Closely related to and to some extent under the guidance of Von Igel was the German and Austro-Hungarian labor information and relief bureau, with central headquarters at 156 Liberty street, New York City, and branches in Cleveland, Detroit, Bridgeport, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, and Chicago. The head of this enterprise was Hans Liebau, from whom it took its familiarly accepted name of the "Liebau Employment Agency."

During the trying days which followed the arrest of the Welland canal conspirators it was unwaveringly asserted that the Liebau concern was a bona fide employment agency and nothing else, with no object other than to secure positions for German, Austrian, or Hungarian workmen seeking employment. That was for publication only. In Von Igel's papers the truth appears, brought out by the refusal of the Austro-Hungarian embassy to continue its subsidies to the bureau.

That the Austro-Hungarian embassy had taken official cognisance of the bureau previously, however, is disclosed in the letter written by the ambassador to the Austro-Hungarian minister for foreign affairs which was found in the possession of James F. J. Archibald by the British authorities Aug. 30, 1915.

AFTER AMMUNITION PLANTS.

In this letter the ambassador stated:

"It is my impression that we can disorganize and hold up for months, if not entirely prevent, the manufacture of munitions in Bethlehem and the middle west, which, in the opinion of the German military attaché, is of importance and amply outweighs the comparatively small expenditure of money involved; but even if the strikes do not come off it is probable that we should extort, under pressure of circumstances, more favorable conditions of labor for our poor, downtrodden fellow countrymen.

"So far as German workmen are found in the skilled hands, means of leaving will be provided immediately for them. Besides this, a private German employment office has been established which provides employment for persons who have voluntarily given up their places, and it is already working well. We shall also join in, and the widest support is assured us."

The following representations on behalf of the bureau's efficiency were made, under date of March 24, 1916, in a letter to the German ambassador, Von Bernstorff.

"Engineers and persons in the better class of positions, and who had means of their own, were persuaded by the propaganda of the bureau to leave war material factories."

CAUSE OF STRIKES.

The report comments with unconcealed amusement upon the fact that munitions concerns innocently wrote the bureau for workmen (which, of course, were not furnished) and continues in reviewing later conditions in the munitions industry.

"The commercial employment bureaus of the country have no supply of unemployed technicians. . . . Many disturbances and suspensions which war material factories have had to suffer and which it was not always possible to remove quickly, but which, on the contrary, often lead to long strikes, may be attributed to the energetic propaganda of the employment bureau."

Von Igel's close connection with the enterprise is indicated by a number of items. For example, there is a notation to the effect that H. Hanson had established a Liebau branch office in Detroit, an entry of $60 paid to a Dr. Max Niven of Chicago in February, 1916, for the "labor fund" and an inquiry addressed by a bureau official to Von Igel, asking whether the Bosch magneto works manufactured fuses for shells, the bureau having evidently been applied to for workmen for the Bosch plant. The reply, in the negative, stated that the company was "universally known for its friendly attitude for the Germans."

JOHN DEVOY AND "IRISH REVOLUTION."

Several lines of communication between the German diplomatic service and the Irish revolutionary movement are indicated in the captured documents. John Devoy of New York City, now editor of the Gaelic American, a violent anti-British paper, was one of the active agents of this connection. Significant entries appear here and there; references to messages from the German embassy at Washington and the German consulate at New York; mention of a secret code to be employed in communicating with him and of a "cipher Devoy"; also a notation, the details of which remain undiscovered, concerning "communication re manufacture hand grenades."

Devoy it was who acted, for a time at least, as go-between for the German secret service dealings with Sir Roger Casement, executed by the British for treason. There are several references to money and messages for Sir Roger Casement, or, more briefly "R. C.," and one record of a check for $1,000 for Casement, evidently handled by Devoy.

LETTERS TO BERNSTORFF.

Devoy's intimate connection with the German cause is disclosed in two letters to Ambassador von Bernstorff, the texts of which follow:

New York, April 8, 1916.

The following communication from confidential man John Devoy was duly transmitted:

"Letter dated March 22, delayed by censor, seems conclusive that first messenger arrived safe with proposal to send supplies and that cable was suppressed. Second also safe. Third, with change of plans, due about April 15."

John Devoy further requests that the following telegram be dispatched to Sir Roger Casement:

"No letter now possible. All funds sent home. Sister and M.'s family well."

Should Sir Roger be absent or ill, then J. D. requests that the telegram be delivered to John Monteith.

K. N. St.

To His Excellency,
the Imperial Ambassador,
Count von Bernstorff,
Washington, D. C.

New York, April 15, 1916.

Herewith inclosed a —— report received by us today from John Devoy. Kindly order further steps to be taken.

The important parts of the report were sent there today per telegram. [8 copy.] K. N. St.

To the Imperial Ambassador,
Count von Bernstorff,
Washington, D. C.

AS TO THE ARREST OF ROGER CASEMENT.

In view of the involvement of these prominent Irish-American leaders in the Casement plot and its German ramifications, it is little to be wondered at that they should have endeavored to shoulder upon the American government the responsibility for the arrest of Casement. The Gaelic American, Devoy's paper, and the sympathetic German-American press charged this government with having, on the strength of information obtained from the seized Von Igel papers, advised the British government of the revolutionary plot and Casement's part therein.

The department of state and the department of justice promptly refuted the charges. When the Von Igel papers were seized in New York the district attorney and his assistants busied themselves in a search for information to sustain the indictments which they had obtained against Von Igel, and overlooked for the time being the great mass of other evidence which pointed incriminatingly to others.

WANT COHALAN SENATOR.

Department of justice officials admit that the papers relating to Casement were sent to Washington the night before Casement's arrest was reported, but they were not received by the attorney general until the afternoon of the day upon which the British authorities picked up the Irish leader, and were not presented to the state department until 9 o'clock that evening. Meanwhile, Casement had spent several hours in an Irish prison.

It is not improbable that the signature at the bottom of the extraordinary message which follows is in the "cipher Devoy" referred to in the Von Igel papers. New York Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan has long been prominent in Irish-American circles, though he has never been directly identified with violent action.

That Judge Cohalan, however, is held in high favor by the pro-German element of this country is evidenced by the fact that Viereck's Weekly, in making selections recently for the most important political offices in this country, puts him forth for the position of United States senator from New York.

"HELP IS NECESSARY."

The communication as translated into Von Igel's record is typewritten, line for line, below a cipher, except for the signature, which remains untranslated from the original cipher figures. It is dated New York, April 17, 1916, numbered 385-16, and inscribed at the top "Very Secret."

"New York, April 17, 1916.

"Judge Cohalan requests the transmission of the following remarks:

"'The revolution in Ireland can only be successful if supported from Germany, otherwise England will be able to suppress it, even though it be only after hard struggles. Therefore help is necessary. This should consist primarily of aerial attacks in England and a diversion of the fleet simultaneously with Irish revolution. Then, if possible, a landing of troops, arms, and ammunition in Ireland and possibly some officers from Zeppelins. This would enable the Irish ports be closed against England and the establishment of stations for submarines on the Irish coast and the cutting off of the supply of food for England. The services of the revolution may therefore decide the war.'

"He asks that a telegram to this effect be sent to Berlin.

"$132 8167 0230.

"To His Excellency
"Count von Bernstorff,
"Washington, D. C."

CODE MESSAGE TO MOEBIUS.

Along this same line is a code message by wireless to Banker Max Moebius, Oberwallstrasse, Berlin, which is interesting chiefly as showing the code method of important communications practiced by the German official plotters in this country. The code translation was found with the copy of the message among Von Igel's papers. The original is a German dispatch which, being translated into English, sounds like an innocent business transaction—viz.:

"National Germania Insurance contract certainly promised. Executor is evidently satisfied with proposition. Necessary steps have been taken.

"HENRY NEUMAN."

Not so innocent and harmless as it looks, for what the message really means is this:

"Irish agree to proposition. The necessary steps have been taken."

PLOTS INVOLVE TROUBLE IN CANADA.

Canada was also the object of solicitous interest on the part of Germany's representatives in America, as was startlingly proven in the plot to blow up the Welland canal. Another lesser but not unpromising enterprise against Canada was foregone by Von Igel because the volunteer plotter was too old, "though he has the best of good will" and also because of his known connection with the Gaelic-American and the Indian revolutionists. Such is the indorsement upon the letter, signed only "X," who thus sets forth his qualifications for fomenting disorders in Quebec:

"As honorary president of the first Independence club started at Montreal about the time of the Boer war, and of which the Hon. Honoré Mercier, now minister of colonization in the government of the province of Quebec, was one of the vice presidents and later president, I am well known among the members and journalists in that organization . . . There is now in the place of the Independence club a secret society based upon its principles, aiming at the total separation of Canada from the British empire. . . . It includes all the former members of the Independence club and men high in Canadian political life. The adherents are for the most part French and Irish Canadians. . . . I am in daily connection with one of the leading men in the separation movement, the Hon. J. Hall Kelly, who is a member of the legislative council of the province of Quebec and also a member of the government."

IMAGINATION IN MEXICAN INTRIGUE.

Information carefully and extensively set forth in the secret documents of the German officialdom was sometimes wide of the facts. For example, a lengthy memorandum of March 1, 1916, transmitted by the secret agent, Capt. Boehm, dealing with the Mexican crisis, appears to have been largely the work of some fervid and projective imagination.

The memorandum purports to outline President Wilson's expected message to congress. It predicts that the president will attribute Mexico's anti-American activities direct to German money and incitement; that he will call upon congress to support him in radical measures [the prophet even attempts to paraphrase the language to be employed in the message]; that congress will indorse the president's stand, following which upward of 150 German spies and agents provocateurs were to be arrested and the ambassadors of the central powers to receive their passports.

CAPT. BOEHM LEAVES.

For all this, Capt. Boehm's authority is thus indicated over his own signature:

"The following memorandum was just given to me by an acquaintance returning from Washington. The 'acquaintance' is a skillful journalist who has good connections. I cannot vouch for his reliability, but I know that he hates the present administration and fights it. His informant is a former secretary of the American embassy at Rome now in Washington."

Capt. Boehm himself was too loose of tongue for the good of his service, it would appear from a report of the German military information bureau dated March 21, 1916.

"Capt. Boehm decided to leave after reports received here were submitted to him to the effect that members of the press were informed as to his personality and the purpose of his being here. Too great confidence in the members of the American Truth society . . . was probably the cause of his becoming quickly known here."

So the notorious American Truth society, which so strenuously denied its pro-German associations, figures as indirectly linked up with Germany's secret representatives. This society is still extant, and Jeremiah A. O'Leary, its moving spirit, is now the editor of Bull, recently shut out of the mails for publishing seditious matter.

ENTER VIERECK: GEORGE SYLVESTER.

Many inventors, some of them obviously cranks, are represented either by correspondence or notation as having plans involving the use of sundry devices of destruction. One entry of the sort merits special attention because of the notoriety of the individual involved. Here it is, translated from the German record of correspondence:

"June 15, 1915. Sender, G. S. Viereck. Contents, inquiry as to bombs; supply offer. Told to send further details."

Possibly the further details are indicated in another entry of four months later.

"Sender, Viereck. Contents, offer of picric acid."

Picric acid is a constituent of many high explosives. Mr. Viereck is something of a high explosive himself, having been editor of the virulently pro-German weekly Fatherland of New York, now changed in title (but not in purpose) to "Viereck's Weekly."

Just what interest Dr. L. A. Dessar of 25 Broad street, New York City, had in German aerial warfare is a matter for speculation.

In the Von Igel archives appears a letter from R. L. Scoville of Sewickley, Pa., and New York City urging the merits of the Semple aerogrenade. Dr. Dessar evidently forwarded the letter where he thought it would do the most good, viz, to Von Igel.

JOURNALISTS ALSO DEEPLY INVOLVED.

Journalists, lecturers, and publishers were liberally employed by von Igel and his associates for the purposes of German propaganda. Among those thus tainted with the stigma of dishonorable professional conduct are two magazine writers and war correspondents, James F. J. Archibald, now in Washington, and Edwin Emerson, said to be in Africa.

The following curious entry appears in von Igel's official records.

"PURE WAR EXPENSES."

Edward Emerson	$1,000
Fair Play (Mr. Braun)	2,000
Fair Play (Mr. Braun)	1,500
Marcus Braun	1,000
J. Archibald	5,000

Concerning the identity of the last entry there might be room for doubt but for a signed receipt from J. F. J. Archibald acknowledging the sum of $5,000 from the German embassy for propaganda work. What return Archibald ever made in service is not clear, except that certain war correspondence for which he contracted with New York newspapers was so obviously prejudiced on the side of the central powers that they declined to accept it.

That Emerson also overdid the cause to which he sold his pen and his professional honor [the record indicates that he was paid $1,000 for "traveling expenses"] is suggested by the fact that he was expelled, or alleged to have been expelled, from Berlin for a violent attack upon Ambassador Gerard. Emerson has had a picturesque career in many parts of the world, and once called to a new York newspaper a picturesque but imaginative account of his own death in the Far East under painful and interesting conditions. He was born in Dresden, of American parents, and is now traveling under American passport obtained by false representations.

FAIR PLAY WELL PAID.

"Fair Play," that misnamed organ of Teutonic inspiration, appears to have been subsidized quite disproportionately to its value, since it received in all $4,500 in the course of a few months in 1915. Marcus Braun, who appears as its editor, is known as a political leader among the Hungarians of lower Second avenue, in New York, and has been variously connected with the fringes of the publication world. He is supposed himself to be a Hungarian. His associate in Fair Play was one J. P. Bryan.

Even with such liberal support "Fair Play" did not fill the bill, for in January, 1916, a letter was written by F. Schroeder, a German newspaper correspondent in Tokio, to the German diplomatic representatives lamenting the lack of a genuinely influential weekly in New York devoted to Teutonic interests, and suggesting that one Borsodi might be the right man to conduct such a publication.

VIERECK AND OTHERS.

Frequent hints of George Sylvester Viereck's journalistic activities appear, and there are a few notations of "Pearson: Subject, Press," which may refer to Pearson's Magazine, of which the editor, Frank Harris, is strongly pro-German, or may indicate a secret agent named Pearson, who is the subject of other entries.

The lecture platform is represented by Ray Beveridge, the California artist, and sister of Kushne Beveridge, the prominent sculptor. In one entry Privy Councilor Albert acknowledges receipt of $2,000 from the embassy to finance Miss Beveridge's lecture tour. German war pictures were also to be furnished, though the alleged scope of the lectures was to be comprised in topics allied to Red Cross work.

Other figures of more vague import drift into light here and there in the Von Igel papers or the Bureau of Investigation reports. Col. E. C. Woodford, an old British hater, appears to have received sundry sums of money for services unspecified. The following letters found in the Von Igel papers refer to Col. Woodford:

New York, April 4, 1916.

His Excellency, Mr. Von Igel,
New York, N. Y.:

According to a letter received here today, the imperial embassy is of the same opinion as myself—that money should not be paid to Woodford.

Please act accordingly and inform Woodford, if he should show up here again, that Berlin has received the letter regarding the sum to be paid and has besides again been asked by telegraph whether money should be paid.

Until answer is received from Berlin nothing more can be paid.

[Signed] Pannwitz.

Col. Woodford appears, however, to have the following letter to have realized the sums promised:

New York, April 13, 1916.

His Excellency, Mr. Von Igel:

Please pay the remainder of two hundred and fifty dollars to Woodford, who is to receive $500 according to order [from Berlin].

Please have the inclosed receipt attested. [Signed] P.

ALL FROM ONE GERMAN AGENT.

All these, it must be remembered, are but a small portion of one German agent's records. They represent but one chamber, as it were, in an enormous and complicated maze of underground plotting. Other entries appear too vague to indicate anything more definite than some connection with or interest in enterprises already notorious—payments to the Welland canal conspiracy; correspondence with Dr. Walter Scheele, accused of being a bomb manufacturer; reference to the Maverick and the Annie Lorie, blockade runners; side lights on Japanese propaganda, Mexican plots and Canadian lines of secret information; even hints that officers high in the military service of the United States were being improperly used for German military enterprises.

How far the plot goes will probably never be known. The spider, Von Igel, had scuttled away to his place of refuge in Germany. His nest is destroyed. But the strands of the web that he wove may still stretch over every city or town which you who read this inhabit.

HOLLAND A WAY STATION.

It has long been an open secret that Holland is merely a way station for shipments of contraband into Germany. Here is official confirmation from the Von Igel records, which would seem to indicate a suspicious and confidential relation between the "Holland commission" and the German diplomatic officials accredited to that country, or possibly a belief by the Germans that they could not successfully get the munitions to their own country. The message in code, with interlinear translation, is entered as "A 2492" and headed "German embassy, Washington, D. C., April 6, 1916." It runs as follows:

"Telegram from Berlin by way of roundabout way for Carl Heyer: Present sale Holland 300,000 shells [artillery] and 200 tons powder. Please get in touch with Holland government. Sender, war minister, foreign affairs representation. Hamburg."

While chiefly concerned with military affairs in Europe, the records of a supposedly friendly nation are keeping an interested watch on our own activities in that line. A secret code message of April 11, 1916, reads "13232 48720 48919," addressed [illegible] to this effect:

"Herewith respectfully send an extract regarding the troops stationed in California and the armament of the coast fortifications."

SENATE SHOWN GERMAN CHECKS PAID TO PAPERS

Bernstorff and Austrian Envoy Bought Much Propaganda.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—More revelations concerning German and Austrian intrigue in the United States, especially as regards the subsidizing of foreign language newspapers in the interests of those countries, were made in the senate by Senator King of Utah today.

"We will soon have to recognize a state of war with Austria, Bulgaria, and Turkey because they are aiding Germany and using their influence against us," he said.

"Many more revelations will come of the intrigue and criminal conspiracies of Germany and also of Austria-Hungary for the purpose of embroiling this country in a war with other nations. Efforts have been made to stir up the people of this country against Japan. I think we will learn the source of much of that activity."

Subsidized Many Papers.

Senator King did not reveal the source from which he obtained his information and the photographic copies of checks, receipts, and letters to and from the Austrian and German embassies, which he displayed in the senate and which will be printed in the congressional record.

The documents which he read showed conclusively that both embassies maintained a systematic system of subsidies for foreign language newspapers, especially Roumanian, Croatian, and Polish, for the purpose of using whatever influence these papers had with their readers to support Germany's propaganda in the United States.

Signed by Bernstorff.

The documents were signed by various persons connected with the embassies, including Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador; Count von Hatzfeld, counselor of the German embassy; Baron E. Dwelinek, charge of the Austrian embassy, and A. Riszwidowski, connected with the Austrian consulate at New York.

One Polish newspaper, known as "Telegram Codzienny," was granted a subsidy of $700 in November, 1915, the documents showed. As many as 12,000 of these papers were printed and distributed by a W. Mazur, and he drove out of existence two similar papers established by the "Rossophiles."

Austrian Sends Check.

Concerning a Roumanian newspaper known as Desteaptate Romane Baron Dwelinek wrote from Lennox, Mass., his summer home, to the consul general at New York:

"In reference to the above report the imperial and royal consulate general will please find inclosed a check for $400, with the request to send here a receipt for the supplementary amount of $200."

Another press subsidy letter read by Senator King follows:

"IMPERIAL AND ROYAL AUSTRO-HUNGARIAN EMBASSY.

"Washington, D. C., Jan. 10, 1916.

"No. 30,152. CONFIDENTIAL.

To the Imperial and Royal Consulate General in New York City:

"With regard to the motives cited in the above report for the benefit of Mr. Radocds the imperial and royal embassy feels to be induced to subsidize the 'Illist [Illustrovanis List] for February and March with $100 for each month. Should Mr. Radocds not be able to become self-sustaining by April 1, the embassy would be eventually willing to advance him $150 per month up to July 1 of this year. Before, however, the latter circumstance would be known to Radocds, corresponding inquiries should be made regarding his further results and his financial condition.

"A further support of the 'Ill List' from April 1 should be possible on the grounds that the plan of the fusion of the coalition papers referred to is meeting with unexpected difficulties.

"The Imperial and Royal Chargé des Affaires, E. ZWIEDINEK."

Thousands for "Fair Play."

Senator King exhibited several checks and receipts from the Fair Play Publishing company of New York for sums ranging from $1,000 to $2,000, paid that organization by the German embassy. Marcus Braun was named as the editor of the paper, although the checks were signed by a J. P. Bryan. Altogether about $6,000 was paid by the embassy to this organization.

Secretary of State Lansing, in an official statement today, absolved members of congress from any suspicion in connection with the message disclosed yesterday which former Ambassador Bernstorff of Germany sent to Berlin asking authority to expend $50,000 to "influence congressmen through the organization you know, which can perhaps prevent war."

As a result of Secretary Lansing's statement the excitement of senators and representatives over the revelation calmed considerably and there is less likelihood of an official investigation into the matter. In fact, the administration is understood to be opposed to any congressional investigation.

Lansing's Statement.

Secretary Lansing's statement, which explains the purpose of the government in making public the Bernstorff communication, was as follows:

"If there is any misunderstanding I wish to say very emphatically I do not see how the Bernstorff message in any way reflects upon congress or any member. Apparently it was the purpose to employ agencies to influence them, of which they would have no knowledge, and in case they were influenced would be entirely innocent. I do not know what the organization was. This exposé is apropos of German methods of peace propaganda, and there is no intention of casting suspicion on members of congress."

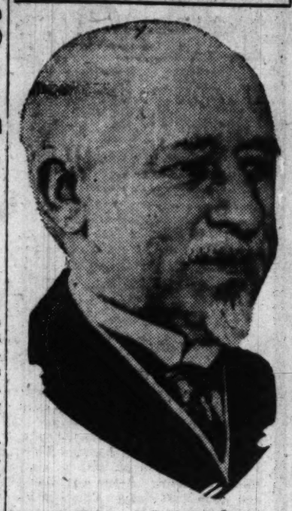
House May Make Inquiry.

If there is to be any congressional investigation it will be on the house side, for members of the senate, almost without exception, construed the Bernstorff statement to mean that the "slush" fund was to be used to create sentiment throughout the nation which would have its effect on congress, and Secretary Lansing's explanation served to strengthen this feeling.

The house has before it, nevertheless, definite statements by Representatives Heflin of Alabama and Howard of Georgia that thirteen or fourteen members of both houses have been acting in a "suspicious manner" as regards pro-German propaganda. In view of the fact that in a recent speech Representative Heflin named the men whom he thought had been acting suspicious it is possible that one or more of these persons may demand an investigation.

ABOVE BOARD

G. A. R. Man Explains His Connection with Pro-German Embargo Conference.



Col. Jasper T. Darling

DARLING DENIES DIRECT HELP OF VON BERNSTORFF

Thinks Embargo Conference Used to Spread Propaganda.

Although he expressed the belief that he had been deceived as to the real character of the American embargo conference, especially in view of recent disclosures and the marshaling of the pro-German activities of the organization in THE TRIBUNE yesterday, Col. Jasper T. Darling, president of the defunct organization, reiterated his belief that it was not a direct beneficiary of German money.

"I still think," said Col. Darling, "that there was no German money behind the embargo conference. If there has been, the organization would have had more money at its command. I do think, however, that the German embassy used its influence upon the real leaders of the movement, but this was probably done without the direct use of money.

Had to Close Office.

"During the election campaign last year we had more money, but just prior to it we had to close up the office, leaving no one there but W. D. Falk, nominally the treasurer, but actually the auditor. During that time Gustav Jacobsen and William Boldenweck made separate trips to Milwaukee, Cincinnati, St. Louis, and La Salle, Ill., looking for subscriptions, and when they returned the offices were again opened. I understood that their trip was productive.

"However," continued Col. Darling, "I am now convinced that German propaganda was at the bottom of the efforts of the conference. This conviction came to me forcibly today. The story in THE TRIBUNE this morning, in which was contained my statement of last night, together with other facts convincingly marshaled before me in connection with the state department's disclosures concerning Ambassador von Bernstorff's activities, convinced me finally that my previous somewhat vague forebodings were justified."

The Animating Force.

"I now firmly believe that this propaganda, however it may have been brought about, was the animating force in the foundation plan of the American embargo conference."

Following the sending of the avalanche of telegrams favoring an embargo last year, the offices of the conference in the City Hall Square building were swooped down upon by Mr. Clabaugh's men, one of whom, according to Col. Darling, spent two or three weeks there.

Has Honor Emblems.

Mr. Darling, who is 69 years of age, a veteran of the civil war, and one of its youngest soldiers, proudly displays in his home many emblems of his service for his country and testimonials of appreciation from comrades in the G. A. R.

"I can see now," he said, "how it suited their purpose to have some one at the head of the organization whose Americanism could not be successfully assailed.

"I was invited to attend one of their meetings at a loop hotel on the night of the Eastland disaster, and went there alone, seating myself in the rear part of the room. The meeting became involved in a snarl and I was called upon to speak by some person unknown.

Source of Cash Unknown.

"After the presidential election the conference ceased most of its activities except for the effort being ostensibly made to get it out of debt. When this burden of debt had become well nigh unbearable to me I was told that it had been met. Just where the money came from and who paid it I have never known.

"My duties had no connection with the financial end of the enterprise, and beyond the annoyance of being constantly in need of money I knew nothing about that end of it. Whatever the apparent need of funds might be, I now recall that when the time came they were always forthcoming.

"If a closer scrutiny in the light of later disclosures is made of the organization, I am ready to do all I can to aid in getting at the bottom of things.

"It is the only course for an honest man in any circumstances, and now that the country is at war and it is shown that its enemy for years had been plotting here to divide and destroy us, it becomes doubly the duty of a patriotic citizen to denounce anything that has the color of enemy work."

RECONSIDERED

Draft Appeal Board Hears of Bribery Charge and Withdraws Exemption.

REPORTS from an investigator that a retired farmer, John Gleim of La Salle county, was willing to pay $5,000 to insure the exemption of his son, John Jr., were included in the evidence considered yesterday by appeal board No. 3. Gleim, who had been granted an extension of time to November, on his agricultural claim, was denied exemption when the board reopened the case to consider additional evidence.

La Salle board No. 1, in a special communication to the board, stated that Gleim with other young farmers had done little or no farming before this spring. They also accused Ira S. Brooks, consulting agriculturist of La Salle county, with rendering the farmers in his district all possible help in escaping army service.

Appeal board No. 3 was the only one to meet yesterday.

John B. Farwell, chairman of board No. 3, praised the spirit and results of the volunteer investigators from the Chicago Association of Credit Men.

"None of them has charged a cent for his services," said Mr. Farwell. "Many have contributed the use of their automobiles and have given all their spare time, including Sunday, to the work. They have already investigated 2,000 cases and have 800 more before them."

COHALAN MAKES EXPOSE DENIAL

New York, Sept. 22.—Supreme Court Justice Daniel F. Cohalan of this city issued a statement tonight in reply to a reference to him contained in the exposure by the committee on public information at Washington.

"How much England has had to do with the publication of the unsigned statement of an unnamed third party of my alleged views I do not know," he said. "But I do not know and I cannot understand how my name was connected with any papers of Mr. Von Igel, as I never met or knew him and never heard of his existence until the time of his arrest. I never sent or requested the sending of the remarks which are attributed to me."

George Sylvester Viereck, editor of Viereck's American Weekly, which he called The Fatherland before the United States went to war with Germany, in a statement disclaimed tonight all knowledge of the entries concerning him contained in the exposure.

KORNILOFF WAS TOOL IN REVOLT OF LOKOMSKY

Inquiry Reveals Careful Preparations for the Uprising.

PETROGRAD, Sept. 22.—Revelations made today regarding the Korniloff rebellion elucidate the fact that Gen. Korniloff was a tool in the hands of his chief of staff, Gen. Lokomsky, and they also show the extreme carefulness with which the conspiracy was prepared.

The official army organ on the Roumanian front describes how the conspirators attempted to neutralize the army commissaries and officers at the front whose devotion to the provisional government had been shown. Gen. Korniloff convoked at headquarters a congress of all the commissiaries and the presidents of the army committees, at the same time summoning to a separate congress the commanders of the military districts who as nominees of the provisional government would probably remain faithful.

Korniloff's Speech Alarming.

Gen. Korniloff appeared before the congress of commissaries and after expelling the reporters delivered an alarmist speech, describing darkly conditions in the front and rear. Piskoff, he said, would soon be taken and the road to Petrograd would be open. When the congresses had ended and the members were enroute to their positions the revolt was begun.

A sensational account is given by an arrested Petrograd politician, M. Dobrinsky, who implies that the origin of the rebellion was the creation of the coalition cabinet against the resistance of Bolshiviki extremists and pacifists.

Vladimir Lvoff, a supporter of the plan, according to M. Dobrinsky, was sent to negotiate with Gen. Korniloff. Gen. Korniloff showed himself to be unsurprised by Lvoff's mission and expressed himself in favor of a democracy, saying:

"The Romanoffs will return to the throne only over my corpse."

Cabinet Too Extreme.

Gen. Korniloff said he already had undertaken to crush expected Bolsheviki disturbances and was sending troops to Petrograd. Gen. Korniloff's proposed cabinet, M. Dobrinsky says, seemed even too extreme in the make up of radicals, so a cabinet with Gen. Alexieff at its head was discussed. At the same time it was decided to convoke the duma.

This account, if true, confirms former Minister Avskentieff's statement that the rebellion was due to the mismanagement by Lvoff of his mission.

By a decree of the provisional government, M. Nikitine, minister of posts and telegraphs in the Kerensky cabinet, has been appointed minister of interior. He will also retain his present portfolio.

Loyal Russian Officers Would Fight in U. S. Army

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 22.—Officers in the Russian army, loyal to the cause of democracy but discouraged by the uncertain conditions in their own country, are begging for permission to come to the United States and enter the American army to fight Germany, according to Marion McAllister Smith, an American merchant of Petrograd, who arrived here today on a Norwegian steamship.

Bread, Land, Liberty, Is the Program of Russian Radicals, Says Bennett

Following is the tenth article of a series by Mr. Bennett describing conditions in Russia.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
(Special Cable to Chicago Tribune.)
[Copyright: 1917: By The Tribune Company.]

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 22.—In my last dispatch I took up in a general way the many political groups that exist in Russia today and described in detail the four leading social revolutionist parties. We now come to a group of six Social Democratic parties.

To the question, "Who are the Social Democratic party?" somebody once replied: "The discontented of Russia."

As nearly everybody in Russia is discontented, it will be seen this party has a great future.

Bread, Land, Liberty.

In a general way, its program is bread, land, liberty; and, as voiced by the Soviet Social Democrats, that program reads: "Only a revolution which will give bread to the workmen, land to the farmer, liberty to the entire nation will be able to inspire the masses with enthusiasm and the unshaken belief in their own forces."

This party says it will be happy if among the well to do classes it shall find considerate elements ready to make sacrifices for the realization of that minimal program to which democracy consciously restrains its aims. But it adds, pointedly, that "if these classes should try to walk along with or go against the masses, the deplorable results would persuade us that without the masses no revolution can be made or saved.

Renounce Part or Lose All.

"The well to do classes in a moment of horrible and nearly fatal danger within the country and at the front must show sufficient common sense and will power to renounce a part in order not to lose all. When the well to do classes walk hand in hand with the masses the forces of revolution grow invincible. Thus the social basis must be enlarged, and on it the revolution must rest."

These Social Democrats comprehend in a loose way the Bolshevikists, the Menshevikists proper, the Menshevikists Internationalists, the Jewish bund and the Edenele. All are Karl Marxists and all occupy back seats now, compared with their place earlier in the revolution.

The Menshevikists take their name from the word meaning "least," and hence often called "Minimalists," meaning that they stand for a minimal program of socialism.

Split on War Policy.

In the beginning there was no fundamental difference of faith between the Menshevikists and the Bolshevikists. They split on the foreign and the war policy, but in the large their aims remain practically the same.

The Menshevikists are pure Karl Marxists, and they believe the socialistic state will come by natural evolution.

What is pretty certain is that the Bolshevikists are "in bad" with everybody except themselves while they consider themselves the only simon pure revolutionary patriots.

Premier Kerensky and his new cabinet of five must deal with socialistic groups of all tones of opinion, as well as all the other elements, from anarchist to ultra-conservative, that enter into the political life of the new republic of Russia.

Bolshevikists Fight Kerensky.

I have dealt with some of these socialistic groups and other elements in my previous articles. In this one I shall seek to give an explicit definition of the purposes and ideals of the Bolshevikist party, which at the present moment stands ranged in opposition to Kerensky's latest schemes to save the revolution, and several of the other groups.

The Bolshevikist party is number two in the Social Democratic group, and holds, first of all, that the Russian revolution is not yet finished and must be carried through by the proletariat dictatorship.

The Bolsheviki hold that peace will be obtained only by a struggle of the international masses.

Lenine is, or was, their big man. In the last few days I have heard six reports about him—namely: that he was in hiding in Russia, but writing under the name of Melin; that he is a fugitive in Finland; that he is hiding in Stockholm; that he is hiding in Berlin; that he is safe in Switzerland, and, finally, that he is dead, and that his colleague, Zaderblum, is using his passport.

The third party in these Social Democratic groups is the Menshevikl, sometimes called the Menshivikl revolutionists, and sometimes the Menshivikist defenders. This party is for peace without annexations or indemnities.

Jews Have Own Party.

The fourth party in the Social Democratic group is the Menshivikist Internationalists, sometimes known only as Internationalists. Like the Menshiviki proper, it stands on a platform of modern socialism.

It now calls all to the country's defense, but wants no offensives, and is for immediate peace. Hence, it is for the Stockholm conference. The leaders are Trotsky, Axelrod, Panin, Marteroff, Lounatcharsky, and Martinoff.

Party No. 5 in the Social Democratic group is the bund or Jewish workmen's party, though many gentile workmen are joining it. In a general way it is Menshivikist in its domestic policy.

Last and sixth in this group is the Endinine party, the word meaning union. It is for war to victory. It is led by a fanatical German hater and an old revolutionary teacher who said he would never return to Russia until the czar was in prison. He has kept his word.

GERARD, HILLIS, TO SPEAK HERE AFTER COLONEL

Col. Roosevelt's meeting at the stockyards pavilion Wednesday night is to be followed by a series of great patriotic rallies, according to announcement made yesterday at the offices of the National Security league. The Rev. Newell Dwight Hillis and former Ambassador to Germany James W. Gerard are listed as two speakers who are to follow Col. Roosevelt into Chicago. The dates have not been set for either meeting.

"Dr. Hillis recently returned from the European battle fronts with an abundance of material demonstrating German inhumanities," said H. H. Merrick, president of the Chicago chapter of the league. "He has photographs of grewsome examples of Teuton butchery and bestiality and his address on the war and its conduct is reported as one of the tremendously sensational things of the day. We are congratulating ourselves on obtaining Dr. Hillis."

Officers of the league are making preparations for one of the greatest crowds that has ever attempted to hear Col. Roosevelt speak. At headquarters it was stated that the committees in charge have been overwhelmed with proffers of organizations of foreign born who wish to attend as units.

Six Arrested in Hotel Raid.

Three couples were arrested late yesterday afternoon by Detective Sergeants McMahon and McCarthy of the Central station in a raid on the Fifth avenue hotel, 35 South Fifth avenue. They will be arraigned in the Morals court tomorrow.

FOUR MINUTE MEN TO HEAR GENERAL AT LUNCHEON

Maj. Gen. William H. Carter will start the "Four Minute Men" off this week with an address to be delivered at a luncheon tomorrow in the Morrison hotel. During the week the speakers will appear in all motion picture theaters and deliver four minute talks against sedition and the propaganda being sowed by pro-Germans. It will be pointed out that on the spur of the moment the United States has prepared 27,000 officers for the army, has built sixteen cantonments; the navy has been manned and is protecting the coasts, and that all governmental functions are working with the greatest effect.

BIG LINER SINKS IN 4 MINUTES; CAPTAIN IS HERO

An Atlantic Port, Sept. 22.—The big Atlantic transport liner Minnehaha, sunk by a German submarine Sept. 7, went down in four minutes after being torpedoed, according to Harry Clark, a veterinary surgeon, who arrived here.

Tales of heroism by Capt. Frank Claret, commander of the Minnehaha, and other officers were related by survivors, Mr. Clark said. Chief Officer Albany died while aiding members of the crew struggling in the water, after he had given his life belt to a disabled fireman. C. A. Wills, purser, was crushed to death between a life boat and the side of the ship.

FIRST OFFICER CAPTURED GOES TO RUPPRECHT

GENEVA, Switzerland, Sept. 22.—Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, commander of the German army on the northern end of the western front, according to a dispatch from Munich, has issued an order that the first American officer captured on his front shall be taken immediately to his headquarters.

Reports that the German military authorities had offered a reward to the first German capturing an American soldier were denied on Sept. 20 in a statement from the Wolff bureau, the official German news agency.

The diary of a Prussian sergeant captured previous to Sept. 15 mentioned that a German general on the western front had offered for the first American, dead or alive, 400 marks, two weeks' leave, and the iron cross of the first class as a reward for his captor.

RUSSIANS HEAR U. S. PLANS TO BUY SIBERIA POINT

PETROGRAD, Sept. 21.—[Delayed.]—The Russkia Volia says a strange rumor was circulated yesterday that the Russian government intends to sell the peninsula of Kamchatka, on the northeastern coast of Siberia, to Americans. The report said that Americans were offering several billions of rubles for the territory. The project is prompted by the financial difficulties of the treasury and the desire of the government not to increase the national debt.

MAY ASK CONCESSIONS.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—There have been rumors that the United States might ask for railroad base concessions in Kamchatka as security for loans to Russia, but it is believed no plans have been perfected yet.

Flooding of South African Diamond Mines Is Serious

DIAMOND mining in South Africa is now practically at a standstill. The cost of pumping out and sinking new shafts in the famous Roberts Victor and other flooded mines, when war ends, will be stupendous. Skilled labor will be scarce and high. And heavy war duties must be assessed.

Inevitably must the prices of diamonds increase accordingly—never again, perhaps, to fall so low as prevail today.

This crisis finds us prepared. Gradually we have accumulated a collection of perfect blue Roberts Victor diamonds such as is seldom shown west of New York.

Each gem has been personally selected. Its brilliancy and beauty are enhanced by a wonderful mounting especially designed for it.

The prices, ranging according to size, from $65 to $1800, make purchase now a profitable investment. But—selection should be made soon.

Cadillac: Easiest Handling Car in the World

Ease of handling is a vital thing in car enjoyment. Even if you don't drive yourself, you still get the benefit of easy handling in smoother, quieter action.

And to the owner who drives—or whose wife drives—handling ease is ninety per cent of the enjoyment a car can give.

You do not have to "pet" a Cadillac Eight to get the best out of it. It has no ugly tricks of manner which you must remember—or make a mess of driving.

A woman with her delicate arms can steer a Cadillac as easily as she waves a fan. The gears slip in and out at the slightest touch—without a sound.

The clutch never grabs and jerks the car. It takes hold gradually and the pedal works wonderfully softly. What the Cadillac brake can do will amaze you. It so multiplies the power of your foot that an easy pressure will stop the car quickly.

Come in and ask to drive the New Cadillac. After one experience no other car will ever satisfy you.

The Cadillac Eight is the Easiest Handling Car in the world because it is the most intelligently designed, the most accurately built. That is why 50,000 Cadillac Eight owners say it is the most satisfying car to own.

The 1918 Enclosed Bodies.

For the owner-driver we have the two fashionable types—the three or four passenger Victoria (convertible) and the five or seven passenger Brougham. Both previously established, both in demand—as correct and comfortable.

The Limousine (illustrated above), Landaulet Limousine, and the Imperial Limousine provide three types for seven passengers. The Town Car and Town Car Landaulet are the smart styles for five passengers.

Foster Custom Built Bodies afford a further variety, a definite exclusiveness and a style authoritativeness which alone can produce a truly aristocratic car.

MEANS ARRESTED AS MURDERER OF MRS. MAUDE KING

Warrant Issued as New York and Concord Evidence Agrees.

notified him that it would not be necessary for him and his jury to attend, but as I have sufficient evidence to hold Gaston B. Means for the murder of Mrs. King, I have had a warrant issued for Mr. Means returnable before A. B. Palmer, police justice of Concord, next Monday morning."

Means Awaits Train.

Mr. Clement, Special Agent Ambrose of the federal department of justice, and P. C. McDuffie, counsel for Mrs. Anna L. Robinson, Mrs. King's mother, accompanied by a TRIBUNE representative, boarded the train which carried the delegation from the New York district attorney's office at Salisbury, N. C., this morning and made the rest of the trip to Concord with it.

Mr. Clement and Mr. Dooling at once began a conference. At the station here Gaston Means was standing on the platform when the train pulled in. A powerfully built man, some 5 ft. 10 in. tall and weighing more than 225 pounds, he watched with interest the New York delegation as it left the train. A moment later he passed within a foot of Mr. Dooling and surveyed him closely.

The officials motored to the St. Cloud hotel, where a conference which was to last for four hours began. Taking part in this were Mr. Dooling, Mr. Clement, Capt. Jones, Dr. Schultze, and Special Agent Ambrose.

Dooling Outlines Evidence.

Mr. Dooling at Mr. Clements' request gave him a comprehensive outline of just what the evidence actually in his possession relating to Mrs. King's affairs shows. He also gave Mr. Clement a mass of evidence which showed there was a strong motive for the murder of Mrs. King.

Capt. Jones told Mr. Clement he had been able to demonstrate by tests that it "was an absolute physical impossibility for Mrs. King to have inflicted upon herself the wound from which she died with a pistol held in her own hands."

This was a direct contradiction of Gaston Means' testimony at the first coroner's inquest that he heard a shot, turned, and saw Mrs. King falling with the revolver in her hand.

Dr. Schultze followed with testimony that was fully as significant.

Say Its a Case of Murder.

Mr. Clement and Mr. Dooling agreed that a prima facie case of murder had been established against Gaston Means. They also agreed it was important to the state to have in its possession the revolver from which the shot was actually fired and the clothing worn by Mrs. King when she was killed. This pistol was handed to Gaston Means after the first inquest. Mrs. King's clothing is also in possession of Gaston Means.

Through the coroner a demand was made upon Means for the delivery of this physical evidence to the North Carolina authorities. This demand was promptly and peremptorily refused by Means on the advice of his counsel and his father, Col. William G. Means, who is also a lawyer and actively engaged in protecting his son's legal interests.

When news of this refusal was brought to Mr. Clement it aroused his indignation and was the closing touch to determine him to exercise the authority vested in him and swear out a warrant himself.

Means Surrenders to Sheriff.

The warrant procured, it was turned over to Sheriff Caldwell to execute. In ordinary cases of murder, where the accussed posses no great amount of influence citizens of Concord say the usual procedure is for the sheriff to take his warrant, find his man, arrest him, and lock him up.

Did anything like that take place in the case of Gaston Means? It did not. Here is what happened:

Sheriff Caldwell took the warrant. He did not know what to do with it. Gaston Means was then sitting in the office of his father—all morning he and his brothers in automobiles or on foot had been constantly parading up and down the main street of Concord, particularly before the St. Cloud hotel, where they knew the officials were conferring.

The sheriff did not go over to Col. Means' office. He told newspaper men Gaston was there and then debated the question of what he should do next.

Apparently Gaston was quickly notified of the issuance of the warrant, and he waited for the sheriff until his patience became exhausted. At the end of an hour the sheriff not coming to him, he went to the sheriff. Cordially greeting the sheriff, Gaston informed him that he had come to surrender.

TWO ITALIAN WARPLANES FIND U. S. SOIL UNKIND

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—Two Italian airplanes which, with a third, started on a flight this morning from Langley field at Hampton, Va., to Washington and back, suffered mishaps here which prevented their return tonight.

The Caproni biplane, which brought nine persons, broke a wheel and smashed a plane in landing after an exhibition flight with newspaper men as passengers, and a Fiat battle plane, short of gasoline, landed in a marsh on the Virginia side of the Potomac river. The Caproni plane probably will return tomorrow, but the Fiat could not be extricated from the mud and will be dismantled and shipped back.

The third machine, a fast Pomilio battle plane, left Washington on the return trip shortly after 4 o'clock, reaching Hampton safely less than two hours later.

The airplanes were piloted by Italian military aviators, sent to this country to instruct American flyers. Their arrival here and exhibition flights were watched by thousands, including government officials and army and navy aviators. The pilots executed many maneuvers now common on the European battle fronts. One circling low over the White House strewed flowers along the lawn.

Missing Woman Sought.

Detectives last night began a search of hospitals for Mrs. Lena Kasper, 43 years old, wife of Haye Kasper, a wealthy farmer of Upland, Neb. Kasper came to Chicago yesterday to find his wife, who had left home for an operation and disappeared.

Little Boys Help Smoke Funds by Starting Contribution Box.

THREE little boys at Eldora, Ia., who had no money and wanted to help send smokes to the United States soldiers in France, hit on a novel scheme which is explained in the following brief note which they sent with their contribution:

"Enclosed find a draft for $0.81 for the 'Smokes for Soldiers fund.' We boys put up a box on a tree by our house. The people pass by it on the way to the county fair. We asked them to put in some money for the 'Smokes for Soldiers fund.' We got this much in two hours. We are little boys, but we want to help.

"Yours truly,
"CHARLES GREEF, age 12,
"ROBERT GREEF, age 8,
"MERTON KNAPP, age 7."

WIDOW GIVES HER ONLY SONS FOR LOVE OF COUNTRY

"America, Here's My Boy," was the utterance of Mrs. Genevieve Puffer Reid when the war broke out. Then she sent her eldest son, 22 years old, to the Fort Sheridan training camp, where he was awarded a lieutenant's commission. A few days ago her younger son, aged 18, asked his mother's permission to enlist in the Royal Flying corps. Now he is training at Camp Borden, Toronto.

Mrs. Reid is a widow, and for many years has been supporting herself, and even managed to give her two sons and a small daughter an excellent education. Despite the sacrifices she has made to rear her fatherless children, she consented to the enlistments of her sons unhesitatingly. Her patriotism is reflected in her son's letters, for his last words in her latest letter are as follows:

"Dearest, I must close with a word of love for my brave mother, who has made two sacrifices for France, and may you be rewarded, for yours is the harder part."

30 YOUTHS HELD FOR REFUSALS TO GO TO ROCKFORD

Officials of the local bureau of investigation of the department of justice yesterday admitted that the department was now holding more than thirty young men within the draft age who refused to join their contingents when ordered to proceed to Rockford. They will be held pending orders from the war department to Maj. Gen. William H. Carter of the central department here. It is generally understood that all will later be turned over to the military authorities either here or at Rockford and that there is possibility that they may be court martialed as deserters.

Coroner Hoffman early yesterday caused the arrest of two butchers, whom he overtook at the city limits, on charges of purchasing and selling uninspected and unstamped meat.

Those arrested are August Hawk of Barrington and S. Karsten, 1246 George street.

Edward J. McGee of Barrington yesterday sold the hides of a cow and a calf, which had just died, to Hawk. When McGee discovered Hawk also had taken the carcasses he notified the coroner.

Fifty Surprises

In the Latest Mitchells—See Them

No matter how well you know fine cars, scores of features will surprise you in the Mitchells, we believe.

These are examples of the extra values which efficiency methods can give. And they are fine examples. All are produced complete—chassis and body—under John W. Bate, the efficiency expert. And in a model plant, where up-to-date methods have cut labor cost in two.

Wanted Extras

We have taken pains to learn what features men and women want. And they are all in the latest Mitchells.

There are 31 features rarely found in cars. These include a power tire pump, dashboard engine primer, reversible headlights, etc.

There are shock-absorbing springs, found on no other car. They make the Mitchell the easiest-riding car. In two years—since we adopted this feature—not a single spring has broken.

Double Strength

But the greatest Mitchell feature is the 100 per cent over-strength. In the past three years we have doubled our margins of safety.

Safety parts are vastly oversize. Castings are almost eliminated. Over 440 parts are built of toughened steel. We spend $100,000 yearly on radical tests and inspections.

The result is a lifetime car. Two Mitchells that we know of have already been run over 200,000 miles each.

There are surprising luxuries and beauties. In the past year we have added 25 per cent to the cost of finish, upholstery and trimming.

There is heat-fixed finish which stays new. There is extra-grade leather which lasts. There is a light in the tonneau, a locked compartment, handles for entering, and countless dainty touches.

There are all the attractions our experts found in 257 show models—all in a single car.

GOV. FERGUSON IS OUSTED BY TEXAS SENATE

Court Sustains 10 of 21 Impeachment Charges Brought by House.

Austin, Tex., Sept. 22.—The senate high court of impeachment, which has been trying Gov. James E. Ferguson for the last three weeks, this afternoon sustained ten of the twenty-one charges in the bill returned against him by the house committee of the whole.

The vote on the first article—that he used $5,000 of state funds to settle a personal obligation—was sufficient to convict. A two-thirds vote was necessary. The ballot was: Ayes, 27; noes, 4.

Formal Judgment Tuesday.

Next Tuesday at noon the senate as a high court will formally pronounce its judgment. Conviction carries with it, it is understood, disbarment from future offices, but this condition possibly may be ameliorated.

Tonight the governor is completely severed from the position to which he was twice elected by the people. Acting Gov. William P. Hobby, an editor of Beaumont, assumes the full power of office. His tenure will extend to January, 1919.

Following are the votes on some of the more important charges sustained:

No. 1, that he used $5,600 of Canyon City Normal insurance money in the Temple State bank for personal use; vote, 27 ayes, 4 noes.

No. 2, that $20,000 of Canyon City Normal insurance money remained in the Temple State bank more than a year without drawing interest but to the profit of the governor; 28 ayes, 5 noes.

Official Misconduct.

No. 11, that his refusal to tell who loaned him $156,500 in currency constituted official misconduct, 27 ayes, 4 noes.

No. 12, that he diverted from the adjutant general's fund money paid on the Canyon City Normal building in 1916, 27 ayes, 4 noes.

No. 16, that he sought to coerce and influence the board of regents of the University of Texas, 22 ayes, 9 noes.

No. 17, that he sought to violate the law by removing regents without adequate cause, 22 ayes, 8 noes, 1 present and not voting.

SACRIFICES HER LIFE TO SAVE BABIES' LIVES

Frequently the expression is used, "She devoted her life to charity." Mrs. Fred Linn, wife of an automobile supply dealer of Norwood Park, not only devoted her life but sacrificed it for charity.

Mrs. Linn was a worker with the United Charities. She had been employed up to three years ago in the general offices. With her marriage she ceased active connection. After her baby was born she heard that the United Charities was short of workers, and she offered herself. She was put in charge of the northwest district office during the vacation of the district superintendent.

Two weeks ago Mrs. Linn was taken ill. On Wednesday she died. Dr. Hugh T. Patrick pronounced it an unmistakable case of infantile paralysis. Eugene T. Lies, head of the United Charities, declared Mrs. Linn had probably contracted the disease from interviewing mothers of children who were afflicted.

Infantile Paralysis Cases Mount to 139

There are now 139 cases of infantile paralysis under observation in Chicago, Health Commissioner Robertson reported yesterday.

Five new cases were reported during the day.

Dr. Robertson said the situation is no better than it has been for the last week.

Norwood Park Kiddies Give Garden Produce Exhibit

More than 100 children of Norwood Park participated in an exhibit of garden produce and of fruit and vegetable preservation in Norwood Park Community center last night. The community has maintained 300 home gardens and a community garden of thirty-five acres. The community is allied with the Illinois Farmers' institute and with the Chicago board of education.

"IF AT FIRST—

You Don't Succeed Try Again," Is Maxim of Pair, Both Divorced, Who Marry to Establish "Ideal Home."

OTTO G. RYDEN and Mrs. Grace Wilder Morrison have started out with the purpose of establishing "the ideal home." They were married yesterday by the Rev. Henry Hepburn for this high ambition.

The bride's 13 year old son, Wilder Morrison, and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm D. Wilder, were present at the impressive ceremony at 908 Airdrie place, as were Miss Hulda Johnson, a niece of the bridegroom, Dr. Loren Wilder, and other relatives. When the honeymooners return from New York, they will occupy a home at 1606 West Lunt avenue, Rogers park.

Both had been disappointed and divorced. In 1915 Mr. Ryden, who is a lawyer, found an empty home in Evanston after his wife had telephoned she was leaving for Long Beach, Cal., with her three little daughters, Ruth, Louise, and Helen Jane. She got a divorce last year.

Mrs. Morrison's domestic unhappiness was precipitated by the discovery of her husband in a theater with "the other woman." She obtained a divorce last January.

"But this is going to be the one, true marriage," said the bride. "Our tastes are in common and we have the same opinions on subjects and won't quarrel over them."

Conservatives in Sweden Hit by Argentine Expose

The Swedish electoral campaign closed today with elections in Stockholm.

STOCKHOLM, Sept. 21.—[Delayed.]—It will be several days, under the complicated system of proportional voting, before the results are known, but it is already evident from the few elections that have been held that the influence of the Argentine disclosures will deprive the conservatives of the control of the lower house.

RAILROAD MEN PLAN XMAS FOR PALS IN FRANCE

The employés of the Northwestern railroad are not going to forget their fellows who have gone to France. Company E of the Thirteenth engineers, a Chicago regiment, is composed entirely of men formerly of the Northwestern. To furnish these men with Christmas presents, consisting of candy, pipes, tobacco, and other comforts, is the aim of the men left behind. They have started a Christmas fund, under the leadership of Mrs. G. A. Holmes, wife of Capt. Holmes of Company E, and Mrs. E. H. Shaughnessy, wife of Lieut. Shaughnessy of the same company.

Wed That They May Go Into War Work Together

In the knowledge that they have both set out to do their bit, Miss Louise Knight Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. D. Harris of 5315 Dorchester avenue, and Lieut. Harold E. Potter of New York, were married last night in St. Paul's Episcopal church. Mrs. John R. Thompson, Jr., was maid of honor. The bridesmaids were in red, white and blue and the ushers, all army officers, were in uniform. When the engagement was announced, Miss Harris and Mr. Potter decided the wedding should take place when they were prepared to enter service. Since then Mr. Potter has taken his commission and the new Mrs. Potter has entered service as a Red Cross nurse in the Michael Reese hospital unit.

STELK REPORTS $108,048 PAID TO ABUSED WIVES

Judge Stelk yesterday made a report of his eight months on the bench of the Court of Domestic Relations, expressing the opinion that the court has increased in efficiency and that much has been done to curb the sale of liquor to drunkards and also to break up "the affinity business."

Judge Stelk's report to Chief Justice Olson shows $108,048.72 collected in non-support cases. He explains that he has insisted upon collections in aid of poverty stricken wives and in many instances has caused payments to be made to the clerk of the court and then turned over. He admits there have been criticisms of this method but proves its worth.

"Part of the increase in fines," says the judge, "is due to the fact that I became interested in breaking up the affinity business and selling liquor to drunkards. I am absolutely opposed to pampering the vicious element. I am not afraid of losing a vote or two."

JOHN D. HOOD MISSING WEEKS; AMNESIA FEARED

Departure of Son with Troops May Have Caused Shock.

Since Aug. 28 John D. Hood, attorney at 39 South La Salle street, son-in-law of William F. Cochran, secretary of the Booth Fisheries company, has been missing. Since his disappearance the detective bureau has been working on the case. There have been no clews obtained as to his whereabouts.

There has not been found the slightest reason for a voluntary seclusion. As far as is known, Mr. Hood's business accounts and relations are in good order. He has no known enemies. He was in excellent health and was a disciple of temperance. On Aug. 28 he did not have enough money in his possession to tempt violence.

Shock Causes Amnesia.

Physicians declare that amnesia is induced by shock. On Aug. 28 Mr. Hood's son, Davidson, a member of the First Illinois infantry, left for Camp Grant at Rockford. His father saw him off. Mr. Hood was proud of his boy, and had expressed himself favorably when the lad had joined the army.

Father and son had been "pals"—they had spent their vacations together. Their attachment was stronger than is usually the case. There is a possibility that the leavetaking may have caused a temporary condition of amnesia.

Wife Gives Up Hope.

Mr. Hood is prominent in business and social circles. His father, John D. Hood, was one of the founders of Lake Bluff.

Mrs. Hood and her daughter, Virginia, are staying at the Cochran home, in Lake Bluff. Until yesterday the disappearance of Mr. Hood was not generally known. His wife had hoped that he would return. When she realized that his absence could no longer be construed a reasonable one she put the matter in the hands of the detective bureau.

Hoyne Will Oppose Pardon for J. J. Halpin

If former Chief of Detectives John J. Halpin succeeds in getting his pardon from the Joliet penitentiary, it will be against the recommendation of State's Attorney Hoyne. "I will not recommend the pardon in view of the character of Halpin's offenses," Mr. Hoyne said. "In the matter of undesirable pardons, I have the utmost confidence in Gov. Lowden, and I expect to get proper aid from him at all times. I have implied no criticism of the governor, and I was misquoted in the morning newspaper which stated I had evidence of specific instances of bribery in connection with pardons."

American Troops in France Fast Nearing Veteran Stage to Instruct Coming Armies

—BY JOSEPH PIERSON.
(Special Cable to The Tribune.)
[Copyright: 1917: By The Tribune Company.]

PARIS, Sept. 22.—Having just returned from a week's tour of the American camps in France, part of the time the guest of Gen. Pershing, the information I obtained regarding the condition of all our expeditionary forces that have arrived in this country is probably as complete as has been obtained by any other writer.

The tour was made by automobile, under special permission granted by the French government which still maintains control over the zones occupied by the American army, an no effort was made to prevent me from securing complete detailed information in all camps regarding the condition of privates and officers.

Mail Complaint General.

No army officer accompanied me and at every camp the commanding general opened wide his doors.

The only complaint I heard was general and concerned the unjust delay in mail coming from the United States to the army. Soldiers, officers and members of the staff of the commander in chief were unanimous in denunciation of the disorganized mail system which had kept from them mail which should have reached them long ago.

Washington Blamed for Delay.

Very few men were found who had received any mail at all from home, although many have been in France more than two months. Others, here longer, received recently a few small pieces of mail posted in the first two weeks of July in America. Paper mail is very slow arriving at army addresses from the United States.

The same situation prevails in Paris, where members of the headquarters staff have been complaining for weeks about long delays in the receipt of mail, sometimes exceeding two months.

An effort was made to trace responsibility for the delay, and it appears to rest with the war department at Washington. Army postmasters in France assert they dispatch mail to men in the camps as rapidly as it arrives, but that bags are exceedingly slow in reaching their offices here.

Sammies Are Contented.

In all other particulars the United States army is more contented than on the Mexican border. One is impressed by the vast school of war being everywhere conducted in order to fit the army units here now as instructors for armies to come. It is college life on a vast practical scale. There are lectures on complicated problems of modern artillery and aviation, and there is enthusiastic interest in the hard, actual work of war trench building, grenade throwing, and gas. In many branches pupils passed their French instructors, but in theories and finesse, great factors in today's conflict, much is to be learned, and American officers are bending every energy to learn every bit of modern war science.

Each day is filled with a swiftly developing new perspective. Lectures begin early in the morning and continue until after nightfall, and counsel is broken here and there by practical field demonstrations with scarred weapons of conflict, and by heroes of the Marne, of Verdun, of the somme, and of other bloody fields where knights of modern France hurled gauntlets in the face of militaristic "kultur."

Study Like Racing Hounds.

"This is the marvel of the world," a leading French artillery instructor said. "I never knew our two nations, on opposite sides of the world, were so near together. I have never been in America, learning my English in England. I teach, straining every nerve to make my pupils even superior to myself in artillery problems. Whatever pride the higher knowledge I heretofore may have had among men, I have lost entirely. I impart my knowledge, eager that it may lead these fine Americans to step up beyond me. Your officers, high and low, pursue the science of war like hounds racing through the forest, keen on the scent of their quarry, alert, accurate, and not too fast to know their route. I am sure they will make great instructors for your new armies. This has been one of the greatest privileges of my life."

No Raise in Prices.

When cities in which some American camps are now located learned they were to be hosts of the new allies of France merchants met and agreed not to raise prices. You may be sure there is none of this sentiment in Paris. One may obtain articles from one-fourth less in these cities if accompanied by an American officer. The hotels ask you if you are an American. If you are not the bill will be more.

Everywhere the American organization is proceeding apace. Vast supplies of materials, stoves, gasoline, fuel, food, and clothing are being gathered for the winter. New barracks are being erected for the coming armies and billets are being arranged in widely enlarged zones. Vast bakeries with white bread are in operation at central cities. American sentries are beginning to halt you along the road. One gives us a package of American cigarets not obtainable in Paris. Another, towering above his French comrades at the post, cranks your automobile.

He Can Parlez a Little.

"Damn it, sir," he said, "excuse me, but I am glad to set eyes on a new American. I get the army edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE occasionally, but they change me around so much because I can parlez French a little—damned little, too. They're good fellows, so we get along.

"Some professor I'll make, you think, when the rookies come. Don't fret, I'll be there. I'm learning this here war game. Well, I'm keeping you, besides you are wasting gas, which is valuable in this here country.

"Good by."

JAZZERS QUIT CABARETS TO HEAR WAR TALK

War upset another cherished tradition of Chicago night life yesterday. North Clark street faced right about from the jazz band, the cabaret and the beaded mahogany, to march on Moody church at La Salle street and Chicago avenue.

By 8 o'clock the church was packed and a line of humanity stretched from the doors for a block away. Special officers were called to hold the crowd back. By 8:30 the press had become so great an overflow meeting was held.

Everett O. Sellers, superintendent of the evening department of the church, had just returned from a three months' visit in the field. "Hut Life with the British Army," was his theme last night. He said Americans had not the slightest conception of what war means. He said this war is making men better. He will speak at a number of churches throughout the city. The lectures are free.

Will Cut Western Wheat Prices to Equalize Rates

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—To alleviate hardships imposed on some western states by the operation of rate differentials the government is about to make the base price of wheat at San Francisco and Los Angeles $2.10 a bushel and $2.05 at Pacific northwest ports, as compared with the $2.20 price at Chicago.

'CAPTAIN' HART MADE HIT WITH GIRLS, NOT U. S.

Stanley M. Hart, accused of having posed as an army captain at Butternut Lake, Three Lakes, Wis., in order "to make a hit with the girls," was held in $2,500 bail yesterday by United States Commissioner Foote. He was ordered returned to Wisconsin for trial and when he gets through with the federal authorities there he must face a charge of giving a worthless $500 check to M. S. Fournier, proprietor of "Fournier Camp," where Hart stayed nine weeks.

"He told every one, especially the girls, he was an army captain on furlough," said Fournier, "and he got away with it, too.

"He asked me to build a cabin for him and I did. When the work was finished he gave me a check for $500. When I presented it at the bank I was told he had no account there."

Actor Says His Arrest Was Ruse by His Wife

George W. Gerbich, an actor, accused of deserting his 6 year old child in Cleveland, was given a continuance until tomorrow by Judge Crowe yesterday. Gerbich says he was arrested on a ruse by his wife, who wants to obtain divorce service on him. He told the court he was similarly accused in Buffalo but was released. Gerbich is appearing in the farce, "Parlor, Bedroom, and Bath."

GIFTS AND GLEE AS FAREWELL TO MEN OF DIST. 60

Honor men of exemption district No. 60 will be off to Camp Grant today with a rousing farewell. Last night most of the Twenty-sixth ward turned out and gave the 115 men of the quota a party that has not been surpassed in any of the other Chicago districts.

The party was held in a large hall at Lincoln and Lawrence avenues and there gathered a crowd which filled the room. The early portion of the evening was devoted to speeches. Ald. Lipps of the Twenty-sixth ward making a patriotic address to the young men. M. K. Walker, chairman, and Frank P. Eales, clerk of the exemption board, were on hand and directed the entertainment. Light refreshments were served and then a five act vaudeville entertainment was furnished.

Each of the honor men was presented a fountain pen engraved with his name and also a large photograph of the 115 men grouped. The men will leave this afternoon at 2 o'clock and a large delegation will see them off.

All of the real estate and one-half of the personal property is left to Judge Cooper, who is appointed executor. The rest is divided among relatives, with the exception of $5,000 to the Chicago Home for Crippled Children, $500 to the Iroquois Memorial hospital, and $500 to Fred Schwartz, personal bailiff of Judge Cooper.

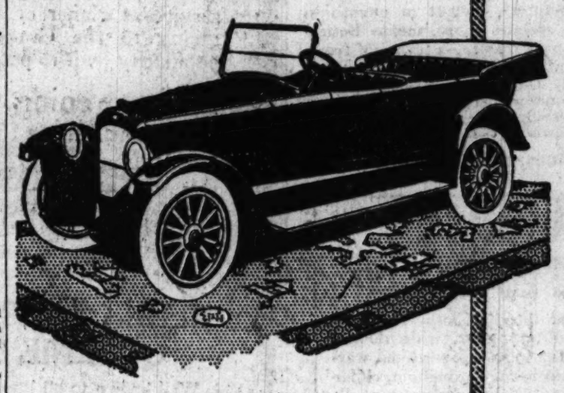
NASH SIX
PERFECTED VALVE-IN-HEAD MOTOR



Two important facts have been registered since the introduction of the Nash Six.

First—the buying public believed Nash Motors would produce a remarkable car.

Second—they found in the Nash Six a car that fully realized their expectations.

Probably no other car in the history of the industry has received a more remarkable welcome.

The one feature that seems to make the biggest impression on everyone is the Nash perfected valve-in-head motor.

LARGEST CROWD ON HAND TO SEE HONOR MEN GO

Today's Trains Will End Second Movement to Rockford.

A half holiday yesterday brought out the greatest crowd yet gathered at such an occasion here to witness the departure for Rockford of the 756 national army men on the Great Western special from the Grand Central station. A crowd of similar proportions might have bade farewell to the second trainload when they pulled out of the union station over the Burlington had not arrangements been so thoroughly perfected to discourage leave takings at the train that only a comparatively small number forced their way into the trainshed.

1,800 Men Leave.

In all, 1,800 men from fifteen divisions left during the day, including 439 from divisions on the north side who were picked up by a special on the Chicago and Northwestern which left the Clybourn station at 8:30 a. m.

Today two trains will leave the Union station over the Burlington, marking the end of the movement of the first 40 per cent contingent from Chicago. The first will leave at 8:45 a. m. and will carry 748 men from divisions 25, 38, 47, 68, 74, 76, and 78. The second will leave at 2 p. m. and will carry 755 men from divisions 26, 11, 34, 60, 60, and 80. Then there will be no exodus of national army men until Oct. 3, when another contingent will be started.

While the men leaving yesterday were not as noisy, taken as a whole, as their predecessors, there were more men who felt the pangs of parting and were unable to maintain a carefree pose to conceal their feelings.

Numerous Entertainments.

Farewell entertainments were as numerous yesterday as ever before.

The exemption board of division 42 planned to have all farewells over with before the men boarded an elevated train at the Sheridan road station, but friends and relatives of the boys refused to let them go at that time and hundreds from the district were at the Grand Central station.

The men from district 66 paraded the streets yesterday on their way to Rockford, with large streamers, "From Rhine street, Chicago, to any place on the River Rhine." Another sign was, "We will fight like Sixty-six."

One of the most impressive ceremonies given any division will be that for the 1,51 men of division 10. They will attend the 7:30 a. m. high mass at St. Bridget's Catholic church and will march to the train with the blessing of Father M. O. Sullivan.

Farewell Affairs.

Joseph Biggs of 613 Cass street will give a breakfast in honor of the men of Division 47 at the board's headquarters at Chicago avenue and the lake shore. Motor busses will take them to the Union station for the morning train.

Two boxing bouts and a vaudeville program were part of the entertainment for men from division 60. Every man was given a fountain pen. Men from division 74 were given a banquet at the Englewood club, 8341 Harvard avenue. The contingent from division 76 was entertained at a dinner in the Auburn Park Masonic hall, West Seventy-eighth street and Emerald avenue, Judge Charles N. Goodnow speaking.

Woman Found Dead by Gas.

Mrs. Elizabeth Coover, 3640 Palmer street, was found dead in bed by her husband yesterday when he returned from work. The gas in the room had been turned on. Mrs. Coover had been in poor health. She was 63 years old.

CHICAGO FLYER BRINGS NEWS OF YANKEE HEROES

B. A. Molter, Hurt in Fall, Home on Leave.

Bennett A. Molter, a former Lake View High school student, brought back to Chicago yesterday word of some of the Chicago youths who are flying in France. He is the only American flier in escadrille No. 102 of the French aviation corps, but has seen many of the American aviators at the front.

Molter is on a leave of twenty-one days, after spending nearly a year and a half in the escadrille. An accident in July was responsible for the leave. He was returning from far behind the German lines, flying at 100 miles an hour at an altitude of 16,000 feet when he noticed a German plane over him.

Injured in Fall.

He started downward. When he reached an altitude of 12,000 feet he endeavored to gain control, but found that the engine had "quit cold." It was a case of volplaning to the French lines, with the German chasing him. He succeeded in getting over and broke his fall in a field of wheat. But when he was pulled from under the machine he had a broken rib and deep gashes in various parts of his face. Molter wears a tiny French star given by the French to aviators wounded while in active service.

"The Chicago boys I have seen most frequently," said Molter, "are Len Reno and Andrew Gundlach. Both are excellent flyers. We are not in the same escadrille, but have been in the same sector in Belgium this summer. We call Gundlach "the skipper." He had been four years in the navy and was paid off in China at the close of his enlistment. But he spent only a few days at home before he was on his way to France. There he entered the French aviation service, which he likes better than the navy. More excitement.

Guard Observers.

"Our escadrille is used solely for reconnaissance, and we go back of the German lines long distances at times. We drive single seat planes and protect the machine taking observations and photographs. Our escadrille has a record of twenty-eight German planes, with a loss to us of only three pilots."

Molter will spend several days in Chicago before returning to the east. He visited with H. O. Reno, father of the flyer who was reported lost, but who was found later when he endeavored to cash a check. He had spent several days in a hospital.

It is possible that Molter may be transferred to the American aviation corps to assist in training aviators for the American army.

Colored Men for National Army to Mobilize Oct. 3

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The first colored drafted men will be sent to national army cantonments on Oct. 3. Secretary of War Baker made this announcement today.

TASK OF FITTING MEN TO JOB OPENS AT CAMP GRANT

Card Index Shows What Rookies Can and Will Do Best.

BY PARKE BROWN.

Camp Grant, Rockford, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Moving the "square peg" man of the national army to the rectangular, equilateral opening is already in progress. And the "round" ones are being transferred to places they fit exactly.

It is an immense job. As the selected men arrive they are assigned by districts to specific companies without regard to the fitness of individuals for the specific form of work. It is impossible by this method to put more than a small number of men into the jobs for which they are best suited.

Army work today is highly specialized. There are openings for the college professor and the street laborer, the mechanic and the inexperienced youth.

Meeting the Problem.

To meet the problem the war department has established its personnel division which is conducted in cooperation with a body of experts headed by Dr. Walter Dill Scott, formerly of Northwestern university. That organization of forces is represented at Camp Grant by Capt. Lawrence H. Whiting, former football star, who has been assigned as personnel officer at headquarters.

Two weeks ago he began his work. The history cards made out for the first arrival were being turned in at that time. These cards gave a tabloid record of every soldier's experience and training, and a statement of his own wishes concerning his final assignment.

Thousands of these cards now have reached Capt. Whiting and the transfer of men from the ranks to specialized service has been started. A score of transfers already have been made.

A Case in Point.

Perhaps the most striking example of these shifts is one that gives headquarters the services in this very work of a man who was trained as an assistant of Dr. Scott—Edwin G. Boos, now assigned to assist Capt. Whiting.

But to show how well the system is working the case of Fred W. Allen, assistant teller of the credit division of the foreign department of the First National bank, Chicago, may be cited. The quartermaster's office called on headquarters to produce a man skilled in banking methods to aid in pay roll work. Private Allen was assigned and today headquarters received a letter from the quartermaster's office recommending him for promotion.

"And this method covers all branches of army work," said Capt. Whiting. "For instance, if you want 100 teamsters at once you go to the card file.

"We will be called upon to produce chemists, miners, moving picture operators, homing pigeon experts, sappers, sawmill operators, and a thousand other kinds of skilled workers," said Capt. Whiting. "But with this system we shall be able to do it."

He and other staff officers say that with few exceptions every man who enters the national army will be put into a place for which he is fitted and which he likes.

The 3,913 men who came in today, including 1,800 Chicagoans, were swallowed up by the big camp as if they had been a mere handful.

TRANSFERS

Reichmann Is Sent to Depot Brigade at Rockford Camp.

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Col. Carl Reichmann, whose nomination as a brigadier general was held up in the senate when he was accused of pro-German utterances, was transferred today from the One Hundred and Seventy-first infantry brigade to the One Hundred and Sixty-first depot brigade at Camp Grant, Rockford.

Speculation was caused by his transfer from an active command to depot troops, but there was no explanation indicating whether the fight on Reichmann influenced action. He changes places with Brig. Gen. Lyman W. V. Kennon.

Fifteen second lieutenants of the quartermaster corps, national army, were ordered to report to Gen. Carter at Chicago for assignment to duty with motor supply trains at cantonments. They are:

Second Lieuts. Francis C. Garibaldi, Edward L. Holman, Nelson B. Baxter, Barton P. Root, William W. Taylor, Harry A. Shay, Roy H. McKinney, Charles B. Benjamin, Stuart Russell, Colburn F. Buck, Rozel O. Burris, Morris M. Western, Gerald Grant, and Ralph M. Overton.

Capt. William F. H. Godson, Eighth cavalry, was ordered to duty in the office of the inspector general of the central department at Chicago.

First Lieut. Charles P. Small was ordered to the Eye and Ear infirmary, Chicago, as aviation medical examining officer.

Majs. Hiram C. Castor and J. T. B. Jones and Capts. David W. Shand and R. H. Stoddard of the quartermaster corps, Illinois national guard, have been drafted into the federal service and will be assigned to active duty.

CAMP LOGAN TO BE MODEL AND SICKNESS PROOF

Floors for All Tents and Examinations in Plans.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—The men of Camp Logan will not lose any time in the hospital if the war department and the health authorities of the camp can help it. Plans were made public today that will safeguard the men individually from almost any disease and safeguard them as a whole from any epidemic.

The first step will be the flooring of all the tents in the camp. The announcement that the work was to be done brought many expressions of satisfaction from the officers in command.

"It will mean that the men will live in a place that is protected from water when it rains," Gen. Henry D. Todd, division commander, said. "This will do much to prevent such diseases as rheumatism and the like."

The next step, which will go a long way toward preventing epidemics, is a general physical examination of the men by the division health authorities. Every man will be given a thorough overhauling, and if there is the least doubt about his physical fitness he will be sent back.

The postoffice authorities of the camp have again asked the Chicago newspapers to publish the correct method of addressing letters to the men at the camp. There has been much confusion due to misdirected and incorrectly directed letters. This is the correct form.

Rank (private, corporal, lieutenant, etc.), and name of company and regiment, Camp Logan, Houston, Tex. This form will insure prompt delivery.

FOOTBALL GIVES WAR STUDENTS A TOUCH OF WAR

Fort Sheridan, Ill., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Several men were slightly injured this afternoon in a football game between companies 7 and 8, Third regiment, Second reserve officers training camp, but their names were ordered withheld by Col. Ryan, commanding officer.

There was some talk among the men of abolishing football because of the likelihood of injuries, but Col. Ryan said tonight he had no intention of curtailing the sport.

John Barrett of the Bureau of South American Republics, was a camp visitor today.

Another visitor was Sergt. William Dugan of the French flying corps, who witnessed today's review of the First and Third regiments. Sergt. Dugan will talk to the men tomorrow night on his war experiences.

Heavy woolen underwear and olive drab uniforms will be issued to the candidates next week.

something new

AIR-IN

"The Coat with Lungs" is a raincoat with a brand new idea. First of all, it's a real raincoat—it will keep you dry and comfortable in a down-pour. But an AIR-IN doesn't look like a raincoat, because it's made to look well when the sun is shining. In appearance an AIR-IN resembles a smart, snappy top-coat—it has the fabric look. Ten feet away it looks like a stylish top-coat, because it is made in a variety of fashionable fabrics and in the newest styles.

Before buying a light over-coat investigate the AIR-IN—the real rain-or-shine coat.

Air-in
"The coat with lungs"

Besides its smart appearance, the AIR-IN has two great points of superiority.

The First Big Feature

The special AIR-IN construction makes it a ventilated raincoat. Under the plait in the back of every AIR-IN are a series of vents or openings which open or close as the wearer moves or walks. Inside these vents are thin folds of perforated rubber sheeting which let in the air but keep out the rain. The expulsion of heated air and admission of fresh air through these vents keeps the body temperature even and normal. The wearer of an AIR-IN will never experience any uncomfortable perspiration under the arms or around the neck and shoulders or that feeling of "stuffiness" that some raincoats give.

The Second Big Feature

An AIR-IN is really rain-proof—not just shower proof. Between the outer fabric and the inner lining there is a thin film of rubber which makes an AIR-IN absolutely waterproof. You are sure to keep warm and dry in an AIR-IN because all seams are double sealed with cement and overlaid with tape.

You will get a world of wear from an AIR-IN because it doesn't look like a raincoat. There are several popular models ranging from the newest belted trench coat to staider styles for the more conservative.

Special Introductory Prices ranging from $13.50 to $25.

U. S. TROOPS IN FRANCE WILL BE ARMED TO TEETH

Infantry to Have Trench Knives, Machine Guns, and Cannon.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—American soldiers will be literally armed to the teeth when sent to the trenches against the Germans.

In addition to the usual rifles, bayonets, and pistols with which the men are now armed, there will be added to the fighting equipment of each regiment 480 trench knives, forty to each company; 192 machine guns, sixteen to each company, and three one pounder cannons.

Details of the men's fighting equipment were given in a statement by Secretary of War Baker today outlining the new army organization for overseas service. The new organization increases the ratio of artillery to infantry from three to nine, as at present, to three to four. A corresponding increase is made in machine gun strength. In addition, there are sections of sappers and bombers who have important parts to play in the new warfare.

The strength of the new organizations will be:

Division	27,152	Infantry Co....	256
Infantry brigade	8,210	Machine gun Co.	178
Artillery brigade	5,068

3,755 Men in Regiment.

Each infantry regiment will have a strength of 103 officers and 3,652 men. There will be one headquarters and a headquarters company of 313, three battalions of four rifle companies each, totaling 3,072; one supply company of 140, one machine gun company of 175, and one medical detachment of fifty-six men.

The rifle company has 250 men and six officers. It is composed of a company headquarters and two officers and eighteen men and four platoons. Each platoon has two sections of riflemen of twelve each, or twenty-four men; one section of bombers and rifle grenadiers of twenty-two men, and one section of auto rifle of eleven men and four guns.

The 178 men of the machine gun company will be armed with twelve heavy machine guns and four spare guns.

Organization of Divisions.

The organization of the infantry division in detail is as follows:

1 division headquarters	164
1 machine gun battalion of four companies	768
2 infantry brigades each composed of—
2 infantry regiments, 1 machine gun battalion of three companies	16,420
1 field artillery brigade composed of—
3 field artillery regiments, 1 trench mortar battery	5,068
1 field signal battalion	282
1 regiment of engineers	1,686
1 train headquarters and military police	337
1 ammunition train	962
1 supply train	472
1 engineer train	84
1 sanitary train composed of—
4 field hospital companies, 4 ambulance companies	849
Total	27,152

Regimental Headquarters Units.

Each regimental headquarters will consist of 7 officers and 294 men. There will be a headquarters platoon of 93, a staff section of 36, an orderlies' section of 29, a band section of 28, a signal platoon of 77, including a telephone section; a sappers' and bombers' platoon of 44, a pioneer platoon of 55 for engineer work, and one pounder cannon platoon of 33 officers and men.

The transportation equipment to each regiment will be twenty-two combat wagons, sixteen rolling kitchens, twenty-two baggage and rations wagons, sixteen rations carts, fifteen water carts, three medical carts, twenty-four machine gun carts, fifty-nine riding horses, eight riding mules, 332 draft mules, two motorcycles with side cars, one motorcar, and forty-two bicycles.

There will be fourteen machine gun companies to the division. Each of the four infantry regiments will have one, each of the two brigades a machine gun battalion of three companies, and the division will have a separate machine gun battalion of four companies. This gives the division a mobile machine gun strength of ten companies which can be used as special needs require, while each regiment still has its own machine gun equipment in one of its component companies. And in addition there are forty-eight sections of auto riflemen, each section carrying four light machine guns.

A statement outlining the new organization of units in the national guard necessitated by the change is promised soon.

SHRAPNEL

Capt. Walter V. Cotchett, U. S. A., retired, yesterday was ordered into active service and assigned to the central department as aid de camp to Maj. Gen. William H. Carter.

Otto F. Toman of Chicago, who enlisted in the United States marine corps on May 4 last, has qualified as an expert rifleman in the shooting trials conducted recently on the range at Port Royal, S. C. Young Toman is the son of Mrs. Anna Toman of 9114 Harper avenue.

Maj. John Ridlon of the medical reserve corps was yesterday ordered into active service as traveling instructor in orthopedic cases at officers' training camps and national army cantonments. He is the father of Hugh Ridlon, the aviator who recently returned from France to recover from injuries.

Nine stenographers, twelve clerks, fifteen cooks, forty bridge carpenters, and other artisans are among those needed by the First regiment, Illinois Engineers, now known as the One Hundred and Eighth United States Engineers. Enlistment may be made with Capt. Paul Davison, United States army recruiting office, 526 South State street. Detailed information will be supplied by the Citizens' Unit, which has offices at 210 South La Salle street.

Stanley Wanzer is one of two Chicago boys in the Wisconsin-Michigan division of the first officers' training camp who obtained a commission in the cavalry. He was a junior at Wisconsin university when the camp opened. He is the son of Howard H. Wanzer of the firm of Sidney Wanzer & Sons, and resides at 6524 University avenue.

In restating its principles and its duty to the government the Hamilton club has adopted a "war platform" in which a general demand is made for national unity, for either full hearted aid or diplomatic restraint on the part of aliens, for the support of representative government, for action against pacifism, for control of resources, and for a prosecution of the war until peace is forced.

RAINBOW DIVISION TO BE REVIEWED BY BAKER TODAY

Fleet of Birdmen Will Soar Above as Troops March.

BY RICHARD C. BURRITT.

Camp Mills, L. I., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Twenty-five thousand troops selected to fill the famous Rainbow division from America's finest soldiers of the federalized national guard will be reviewed tomorrow morning by Secretary of War Newton D. Baker. It will be the Rainbow's first divisional parade, and the first division to be reviewed by Secretary Baker, who plans to visit all the large training camps in the United States.

Unless orders are countermanded, a fleet of student birdmen from Mineola, L. I., where a training school is established, will fly in review above the marching division.

REILLY'S BUCKS WIN PLAUDITS

CAMP MILLS, GARDEN CITY, N. Y., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Tramp, tramp, tramp. Far down the broad ribbon of road that bisects Camp Mills a company of infantry swings out into the thoroughfare. In the golden haze of an afternoon sun their uniforms of olive drab make a long, thin streak.

Nearer the rise in camp where we stand there's another rub-a-dub-dub, then another, and still another. Out of the company streets that comb in precise angles the great tented plain of Camp Mills move other columns as serene as the first.

Veteran Is Enthusiastic.

The army officer who stood with me watching the regiments on "divisional hike" was one of Uncle Sam's regulars when those whom he was observing, like myself, for instance, toted air rifles and wore paper cocked hats and pinned bed sheets with safety pins and strung them on a clothes line in the back yard and called it a tent. He has known and observed the soldiers of the world, from Petrograd and Potsdam to Patagonia and Peru. Set deep beneath shaggy brows, his eyes grew luminous and took on a light that was almost holy, so bright was it with love and admiration.

"These bucks of the 'rainbow division,'" he began, and stopped. A band crashed into a patriotic air. "Gad, what a division!" he blurted out presently. "Uncle Sam has nothing else like it on either side of the Atlantic. The regulars have been so expanded and filled with recruits that the name 'regular,' as it used to be spoken of, is something of the past.

"Every unit in this division was picked because it represented the best that the national guard afforded. When the 'Rainbow' gets actual fighting experience, nothing in the world can touch it.

"Here's the cream of the country. There never will be another division half so good, for so many high class men can never be distributed again within the confines of one army division."

The O. A. V. subsided for a moment—Reilly's bucks were passing.

Tramp, tramp, tramp. There go the boys from Danville, headed by the tall, powerfully built, gentle mannered major of the First battalion, Curtis Redden. Not far behind comes Tom Hammond, captain of the Danville battery. Back in the days when Redden and Hammond combined their brain and brawn to "give the enemy hell" on Ferry field, at the University of Michigan, they never in their palmiest times displayed the pep that you see here now.

Tramp, tramp, tramp. Here comes Frank Course, captain, and the bucks of Battery B, Capt. Richardson and C Battery, the battery the newspapers dubbed the "Gold Coasters," but which now snape off your head if you so much as mention that it has a single millionaire buck private. Behind C is Battery D and Capt. Tom Kelly, a square shouldered fellow with a deep throated voice when calling his "One, two, three, four." There's Capt. Lawrence Robbins of Battery E, and, following, the University of Illinois battery, with Capt. Benedict, who'll tell you for hours at a stretch that the One Hundred and Forty-ninth field artillery is the best the sun ever shone on, but that Battery F is even better than that.

Watch Maj. Noble B. Judah Jr. of the Second battalion, who passed just behind Battery C. Maj. Judah and Capt. Odell, his adjutant, wear this kind of a look: "The First battalion is a world beater—but wait until the Second passes by."

"Jews Will All Be Irish.

'Way down the road march the bucks from the corn belt—Iowa men. They're closing in behind some huskies from Ohio and Alabama, all infantry. The famous "Fighting Sixty-ninth," now the One Hundred and Sixty-fifth, infantry of New York is far up the road, hiking easily.

BOATHOOK FOILS SUICIDE.

Max Hapanovich, 33 years old, a laborer, 1444 Tell place, tried to end his life by jumping into the Chicago river at the Madison street bridge yesterday, but his effort was futile. Traffic Policeman Nels Hanson pulled Hapanovich out of the water with a boat hook.

CHICAGO MARINE FINDS FRANCE'S WELCOME WARM

Mrs. Edith Degenhardt of 546 East Fortieth street yesterday received a letter from her son, John, who is now in France, serving with the marine corps. He enlisted at the outbreak of the war and was sent to Paris Island, S. C., for training, and thence to France. Here is an excerpt from his letter:

"I have taken the opportunity of writing a few lines, although we are very busy with our drills. The country here is beautiful, and the people are happy at seeing American soldiers. There is a scarcity of tobacco, and I wish that you would send some reading matter, also.

"The French people give us fruit and other eatables as we pass on the roads. On the whole, I am quite contented and glad that I am 'doing my bit for Uncle Sam.'"

BECKER'S BOND PARTNER SNARED, ASSERTS HOYNE

"See Pike About Turner Collecting" Lands Another in Net.

State's Attorney Hoyne's detectives yesterday arrested Edward W. Turner in connection with the graft charges against Francis A. Becker, Twenty-first ward Thompson boss.

Turner is declared by Mr. Hoyne to have been a former partner of Becker in what was ostensibly a real estate and bonding business but really a combination formed for the collection of tribute.

Turner's arrest was brought about by the finding among papers seized in recent raids on Becker's home and office of a memorandum reading, "See Pike about Turner collecting from saloons and houses."

"Double Crossed," Says Turner.

Mr. Hoyne declared Turner and Becker had operated under the name of E. W. Turner & Co., as professional bondsmen, in the Bush Temple building, directly across the street from the East Chicago avenue police station. Mr. Hoyne alleges the bond business thrived on prisoners held in the Chicago avenue police station on petty disorderly charges and intimated in some cases raids were arranged, especially for the purpose of collecting bond tribute which was divided later with policemen.

Turner, when released, said to newspaper men:

"I never was connected with Becker, but because we both belonged to the same organization (meaning the Thompson organization) I didn't expect Becker to work against me. I found out Becker was double crossing me one night when a certain raid was pulled.

"I went to the station to go on the people's bonds and the desk sergeant told me they would not be booked and so I could not bond them. A little later Becker came around with Thomas 'Spike' Hennessy. Becker then had them booked and Hennessy went on their bonds."

Mr. Hoyne believes the memorandum, "See Pike about Turner," to have been a notation with which Becker wished to refresh his memory about a duty he had to perform.

Turner in City's Employ.

A list of campaign contributions discovered by Mr. Hoyne is headed by Turner with a gift of $300. Others gave $25 and less.

Turner is an employé in the office of City Controller Pike as "inspector of piers, docks, and beaches," at a salary of $150 a month.

"Becker will not be permitted to contest to escape prosecution," Mr. Hoyne said yesterday. "I have reason to believe he would talk if promised leniency, but no promises will be made to him for any statement he may make."

Another witness obtained against Becker yesterday, but whose name Mr. Hoyne would not reveal, was, he said, a client of Willis Melville, the attorney under indictment with Becker. This man, according to the state's attorney, said he was in Melville's office when the stenographer told Melville "the first deputy's office" was on the wire.

Melville, the witness declared, got on the wire and said:

"Tell Martin to keep a stiff upper lip. We can't all be in this, you know. We've got to stand pat. It's fifty-fifty with us. Tell him not to give them anything if he goes over there."'

"Martin," Mr. Hoyne said, is Edward Martin, secretary to First Deputy Superintendent of Police Westbrook.

Bullet Wound Fatal.

Russell Dale, 10620 South Seeley avenue, a manager for the Tungsten Valve company, died yesterday from a bullet wound alleged to have been inflicted Friday night in the Harmon automobile service station, 2241 Wabash avenue, by Arthur Eugenes, 30 West Forty-fifth place, a Negro automobile washer, following a complaint by Dale that his car had not been given proper attention.

Select a Heating System that Postpones This

At the present high price of coal it is no joke when we come to the last of the coal-pile. But don't be too hard on the coal man—select the heating system that postpones this, one that gets more heat out the coal, one that doesn't WASTE coal. The Dunham Home Heating System is that system. It never lets the fire get any hotter than is necessary to keep the house between two pre-determined temperatures. If the weather warms up, the Dunham System automatically opens the check damper and shuts down the fire. As the thermometer drops, the Dunham automatically closes the check and opens the dampers that give more draft.

The Dunham lets the heat die down at bedtime and raises it again at getting-up time—a uniform temperature is maintained during the day—all of this absolutely automatically, without anybody going near the cellar to regulate the dampers. You merely set the Dunham Thermostat (in the living room) as you would an alarm clock. The Dunham means saving of fuel by day and night—it means comfort when you return from afternoon calls or an evening at the theatre. With the Dunham System no radiator will ever hiss, gurgle or hammer, no water will drip or spurt. The Dunham is a heating system that is ever equal to the weather, automatic in its damper-regulation and one that prevents waste.

Don't wait till zero weather is upon you—investigate now. Ask your architect or heating contractor about the Dunham System.

Free Booklet. Property owners, tenants, real estate men, heating contractors, architects and builders should read our latest book, "Dunham Heating for the Home." It tells why. Write, phone or call.

This device is one of the fundamentals of the Dunham Home Heating System. It is known the world over to heating engineers as the device that revolutionized Vacuum steam heating. Leading architects everywhere use it.

There is Now a way to know Best Quality LEATHER SOLES

HERE is an announcement that is highly important to every MAN and WOMAN in America who wears shoes—to everyone who sells them. Armour has taken guesswork out of shoe buying for both the dealer and his customer. A way has been found to visualize and identify sole value, to indicate quality and wear-resistance.

All leather is not good enough to use for soles bearing the Armour Oval Label. For instance, that cut from neck, belly and legs—about 60% of the hide—is not at all suitable.

As a matter of fact, only about 40% of each hide is really top grade sole leather, properly speaking.

Unfortunately, soles are sometimes cut from other parts than the back. And, with edges blackened and grain hidden, even an expert cannot tell whether the leather is close-knit and fine-textured or spongy and porous.

Only wear will disclose the sole's guilty secret. But, with shoe values as uncertain and shoe prices as high as they are today, you want, more than ever, to know that you are getting full value for your money.

This is why Armour is now embossing the famous Oval Label—the top grade-mark—on each pair of first quality Armour Leather Soles.

This famous Armour Trade Mark is stamped on best quality leather soles for men and women

Look for this mark when you buy shoes—either men's or women's. Remember, when you find it you may be sure the sole is cut out of the solid, tight-knit leather from the middle of the back where Nature grew the hide heaviest to protect the animal.

But the name, Armour, in the Oval Label signifies even more. It is a proof you are buying oak-tanned soles—Armour-prepared for you to walk on, by the best process of tanning that man has yet discovered.

Of course, Armour Leather Soles cost shoe manufacturers more than inferior parts of the hide. But their use is an indication that such manufacturers are striving for utmost quality throughout. The other parts of such shoes are likely to be better also!

Shoes of leading brands—probably the make you now wear—are made with Armour Leather Soles. Ask your own dealer for them.

This is the first time in history that any producer of leather soles has ever declared his responsibility for his product to the public.

ANECDOTES OF GOLF TOLD BY GEORGE O'NEIL

Miss Hadfield Shows Women Players Have Nerve.

BY GEORGE O'NEIL.

A NIBLICK HELPS.

That the best women players are not inferior to their brothers in nerve and pluck was beautifully illustrated by Miss Frances Hadfield in her recent match with Miss Elaine Rosenthal at Flossmoor.

GEORGE A. O'NEIL.

In playing the fifteenth hole Miss Hadfield pulled a brassie shot in behind the willows to the left of the course and the ball unfortunately ran into the brook. Her next shot must of course be directly over the willows, which at this point rise to a height of about thirty feet. Perhaps she did not give this matter sufficient consideration; at any rate, instead of taking her ball well back to drop for the next shot she actually dropped it within fifteen yards of the bank of the brook. The trees shut off her view of the hole and she was obliged to take her direction from a general view obtained from the end of the row of trees. Stepping back to her ball, she took a niblick, pitched the ball straight up over the trees, and laid it up for a putt.

LUCK BEATS SKILL.

Ned Sawyer cites one of his shots as proving that sometimes luck is better than skill, but perhaps it illustrates equally well the fact that a well hit ball will keep a true path in spite of serious obstacles. The incident in question occurred in the western amateur finals at Glen Echo in 1906, when Sawyer was playing against Warren Wood.

A severe rain during the play of the last nine holes had made the course wet and soggy. Going to the eighteenth hole Ned was one down and one to play. His second shot stopped short at the edge of the green. Wood's iron shot landed ten inches short of the hole—leaving a deep gouge—and rolled ten feet beyond. He holed his putt for a 5.

Meanwhile Sawyer's third shot stopped eighteen inches short of the hole and directly behind the gouge made by Wood's ball when it landed. Sawyer says: "I felt too tired to figure out the best method of playing the shot and took the hardest and most uncertain one. I played with my putter through the trough of the gouge and up to the mound beyond, straight into the hole. As the ball passed along the ridge of the mound it looked like a wheel rolling on a tightrope, but it held its way as firmly as if it had been held to it by a gyroscope."

AROUND THE END.

In the finals of the national amateur championship at the Chicago Golf club in 1905 an interesting situation arose in the afternoon round. The contestants were Ned Sawyer and the ever popular Chandler Egan, one of the soundest and best of American golfers. They were playing the sixth hole. Egan had driven his tee shot to a point just behind a long, high bunker lying directly between the tee and the hole.

Sawyer was well off to the left with an easy second for the green. Egan lay too near the bunker to get a ball over it and up to the green, while any shot short of the green would practically have conceded the hole to his opponent. Extraordinary measures were positively necessary. Egan therefore took his brassie, faced as if to shoot far to the left of the hole, and carefully sliced a beautiful long drive. The ball sailed forty or fifty yards out of bounds, then turned like a thing of life and came back into the course, finishing up on the putting green on even terms with the ball of the surprised opponent.

ANOTHER WIDE SLICE.

The dog-leg seventh hole at Beverly has been the scene of many thrilling episodes. One that will be recalled by all who witnessed it occurred in the finals of the western open championship in 1918. George Simpson, playing against Chick Evans instead of keeping wide of the elbow played straight for the hole, but failed to get through the trees. His ball fell directly behind a tree, making it necessary to play his second shot as a sprink.

Being in the rough, as well as behind a tree, George took from his bag a deep faced brassie and played a high, wide slice through the trees on the right, out over the trees on the left, and back again into the course and upon the green, allowing him to finish the hole in par.

ANCIENT HISTORY.

In the western open at Midlothian in 1901 Larry Auchterlonie found that in order to tie David Bell, the home professional, he must finish with two 4s—a far more difficult task in those days of the gutta ball than it is now. On the

A COLD RAINY DAY AT THE CLUB

CHEVROLET WINS 100 MILE GRIND IN RECORD TIME

New York, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Louis Chevrolet, driving a powerful Frontenac Special, triumphed in the 100 mile race for the Harkness gold trophy at the Sheepshead bay speedway this afternoon and incidentally shattered the world's competitive record and the American record for that distance.

Chevrolet's time was 54 minutes 28.98 seconds, or at a rate of slightly more than 111 miles an hour. Ralph De Palma in a Packard special power car with an aeroplane engine, was second, three miles behind the victor. The collapse of his two front tires at the fifty-six mile mark cost De Palma a lap and the race. Up to that time he had been fighting for the lead with Chevrolet and with the fiery Frenchman was leading the field by a full lap.

Futurity to De Palma.

De Palma, however, had consolation in the Futurity handicap at ten miles in which he scored a thrilling victory over Chevrolet, overhauling the Frenchman and snatching the lead and the race from him in the final lap. In that final De Palma drove as if possessed and the electrical timing device checked his speed as being at the rate of 116 miles per hour.

De Palma's time for the ten miles was 5:11⅘, or at the rate of 97 miles per hour. In view of the fact that the race was run from a standing start, the time was considered remarkably fast.

Of the eighteen cars which started nine finished, their order following: Chevrolet and De Palma, second; Eddie Hearne, Duesenberg, third; Ralph Mulford, Frontenac, fourth; Dan Hickey, Hudson, fifth; James A. Benedict, Benedict, sixth; Ira Vail, Hudson, seventh; Dave Lewis, Hoskins, eighth, and Otto Henning, Mercer, ninth.

Resta Forced to Quit.

Dario Resta, who was counted on to furnish opposition of the stiffest kind for De Palma and Chevrolet with his Blue Peugeot, suffered a bitter disappointment when he was forced to quit in the sixteenth mile because of a broken camshaft. At the time of the accident which put him out of the race Resta was well up with the leaders. He did not start in the Futurity handicap.

More than 50,000 persons, the greatest crowd that has ever been within the big speedway, literally fought for a chance to see the speed kings whirl around the giant saucer.

With the exception of one lap in the early stages of the race, Chevrolet led from start to finish in the battle for supremacy in the 100 mile contest. At no time, however, until De Palma's tire trouble caused him to drop back was the Italian-American more than 100 yards behind Chevrolet.

COLT ESCOBA WINS FUTURITY

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 22.—Escoba, star colt, bore the south to victory today in the Breeders' futurity, running away from a field that included George W. Loftus' great Papp, and set a new record for the Lexington track. Escoba's time for the distance, 170 feet less than three-quarters of a mile, was 1:10 3-5. Atlanta was second and Gypsy Queen an added starter, finished third.

Fourth race, 2 year olds, Breeders' Futurity, $2,700 added, Futurity course—Escoba, 123 [Knapp], $21.50, $9.10, $5.10, won; Atlanta, 115 [Connolly], $4.70, $3.50, second; †Gypsy Queen, 115 [Gentry], $22, third. Time, 1:10 3-5. Papp, Zeverest, *Right Angle, Jack Hare Jr., Herald, and Viva America ran. *Coupled. †Added starter.

WHITE SOX VS. GIANTS

Sanborn Opens Discussion of Chances of the Two Baseball Machines Which Will Struggle for the World's Title.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

This is the first of a series of articles by Mr. Sanborn, dean of American baseball writers, comparing the chances of White Sox and Giants for the world's series. The outfields will be discussed Monday.

STARTING with a perfectly sane and unprejudiced mind, let's talk over some of the dope on which several million American citizens of all ages and genders are endeavoring to settle in advance the impending battle between Chicago's White Sox and New York's Giants for a wad of kale and incidentally the title of champions of the universe.

Everybody knows it is perfectly impossible to inhale an overdose of any kind of dope and remain sane, so there is no guessing where we shall finish. Nearly everybody is aware that baseball dope, while the least harmful to its victims, is most uncertain in its results. So after the world's series has been all settled, without pitching a ball to a batsman, Old Lady Luck is liable to crook one of her little fingers and upset the whole thing. And she can do a lot more in a short series than in a season's campaign.

Nevertheless there are those who believe it is possible to figure out the winner of the world's pennant to a "moral certainty" in spite of their reluctant memories of 1906, when the White Sox outgeneraled and routed a superior foe, or of 1914, when Boston's Braves humiliated the great Mack machine and never have been heard of since.

In order to reach some sort of a foundation, let's take the general impression the American league is 20 per cent stronger than the National. Nobody knows where it started and nobody can prove it, but it is heard on all sides as a portion of the following arguments: "The Giants are easily 20 per cent stronger than any other team in their league, so that puts them on a par with the White Sox and makes it an even bet, don't it?"

Few even think of questioning the statement that the Johnson circuit is that much superior to the Tener family, and it seems to be based on past performances. Previous dope seems to warrant the assertion, for the National league has won only one world's series from the American league champions since 1909, and that was the 1914 upset of the great Mack tribe.

To be on the safe side, let's split it and take it for granted the American league is 10 per cent stronger than the National on the whole. At first flush that would appear to make the Giants favorites in the coming contest, if they are rated 20 per cent better than their class. However, some of that is offset by the fact the White Sox seem to be quite a few per cents better than any other team in the American league. That makes it an even proposition again, don't it?

Taken as a whole the Giants appear to have outbatted the White Sox by a considerable margin this season, as the New Yorkers have accumulated a team swat average of .261, while the Comiskeyites have hit for a grand average of .253 up to date. But, allowing for the 10 per cent difference in class of the two leagues, the Giants' superiority with the stick becomes more apparent than real.

The Rowlands are third in the American league, while the Manhattans are second in the National in team batting, so neither team has won its league championship with the stick alone. If swatting were all there was to the national pastime, Detroit and Cincinnati fans would be fighting for world's series tickets now.

The White Sox have stolen more bases than any of their own competitors, yet it is well known they have made a lot of mistakes on the bases this year. The Giants are third in base running in their league, according to the figures, yet they have been renowned for the number of runs they make out of the slips of their opponents.

Apparently there is no light to be gained from generalization, so we might try sizing up the individual elements in the equation by comparing the men who are likely to oppose each other in the big doings. This will be done in stories to come.

"TO RED CROSS"

Lexington, Ky., Sept. 22.—Kenneth D. Alexander, Lexington millionaire, whose horse, Escoba, won the $11,000 Breeders' Futurity here this afternoon, tonight cabled from France, where he is fighting on the battle front: "Give entire winnings to national Red Cross."

Des Moines Wins First of Series from Hutchinson

Des Moines, Ia., Sept. 22.—Des Moines, winner in the first half of the split season, won the first game of the series with Hutchinson for the entire season's championship of the Western league today, 3 to 1. The locals bunched hits off Graham with errors for their runs.

Notes

Philadelphia twice more today.

Outfielder Barber wired the Cub office yesterday he would be on hand ready to play in Sunday's games.

The Morans will wind up their season's work in Chicago with a double header, starting at 1:15 this afternoon, and will have to win both games to stay in the pennant reckoning.

With runners on second and first in the fourth of the first game Umpire Harrison called a balk on Hendrix just as the pitcher was delivering the ball to Stock. The batsman hit a fly to Wolter, retiring the side, but the umpire's decision preceded the out, so Stock came back to bat and, with runners on third and second, hit another fly to Wolter, retiring the side again.

12 TEAM BOSSES TELL YOU WHO'LL WIN WORLD FLAG

New York, Sept. 22.—The world's series will just have to settle itself so far as managers of the big league clubs are concerned. They all voted today when asked for their opinions regarding the probable winner of the series, but the managers who expressed an opinion picked the pennant winners in their own league and let it go at that. Two from each league refused to hazard picking the winner.

Fielder Jones, the crafty old fox who piloted the White Sox to an American league pennant and a world's championship over the Cubs in 1906, can't see anything but the White Sox.

Sox Smart Team—Jones.

"They've got the smartest baseball club I ever saw," Jones said. "Any man on the club is likely to break up a game, and they are capable of doing it with a variety of plays. They play smart baseball. If the Giants win I will say they're the greatest team in baseball."

Christy Matthewson believes it is a toss up, and may the best man win.

John McGraw refused to discuss the chances of his own team. He said he wasn't allowed to talk for publication, but did not mention his recent brush with the baseball writers.

Hugo Bezdek was not so secretive. Right out he declared that the Giants would win and laid it onto McGraw's generalship.

Sallee is the gentleman that'll do it in the opinion of Wilbert Robinson of the Dodgers.

"Unless a batter is used to Sallee, he can't hit that crossfire," Wilbert said, picking the Giants.

Donovan Likes Rowlands.

Bill Donovan leaned toward the White Sox, but said he didn't want to make it too strong, because he hadn't seen the Giants in action.

The superiority of the White Sox pitching staff will give them the series, in the opinion of Clarke Griffith, manager of the Senators.

Hugh Jennings decided to lay off this time and called it a tossup.

George Stallings is planning to argue it out with any one that wants to talk. He believes the Giants have the greatest baseball club in the world and is certain they can prove it.

Connie Mack guessed—it may be a good thing to play the first games in Chicago.

Lee Fohl can't see anything but White Sox, but he hated to talk about it, because he hasn't seen the Giants.

Barry Pays Compliment.

Jack Barry paid the Chicagoans and the American league a compliment when he merely said there are three clubs, possibly four, in the American league who can beat the Giants. These are, he said, Chicago, Boston, and Detroit, and possibly Cleveland.

Clarence Rowland declared the White Sox pitching will turn the balance.

Miller Huggins disliked to talk, but favored the Giants.

The Giants will win if Pat Moran's guess is correct, because they recently trimmed the Phillies.

Fred Mitchell of the Cubs refused to pick a winner.

L. B. Clarke High Amateur in Lincoln Park Contest

L. B. Clarke was high amateur in the 100 target race at the Lincoln Park Gun club with 95 breaks. Fred Bills was high pro with 94. Forty-five shooters competed.

CUBS DEFEATED IN BOTH GAMES WITH PHILLIES

Drop Opener by 2-1, Then Submit to a 4 to 1 Licking.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

Pat Moran's Phillies kept the Giants from cinching the National league pennant yesterday by winning both ends of a frapped double header from Chicago's Cubs by scores of 2 to 1 and 4 to 1.

Eppa Jeptha Rixey held the Mitchells to three hits in the first encounter and would have shut them out but for his one base on balls in the fifth inning. It paved the way to a worthless tally. The Phillies ought to have scored only one run off Claude Hendrix in that battle, but a passed ball by Dilhoefer let in the one that counted most.

Walker Walks Too Many.

Joe Oeschger kept the Cubs down to one run in the second game, although he was hit pretty freely. Manager Mitchell started Walker against the Phils in this encounter, but the ex-Pelican was so wild he had to be extracted after the fifth round with the score 3 to 1 against him. Vic Aldridge, the only living athlete except Ed Walsh, who can strut standing still, was substituted and got by with only one unearned tally registered against him in three rounds, then gave way to a pinch hitter and let Prendergast finish.

The Phillies scored their first run in the second of the first game without a base hit. Luderus led with a walk, went to second on Evers' sacrifice, to third on Killifer's out, and home on a passed ball. Three clean hits scored the winning run in the third. Paskert led with a single. Bancroft sacrificed. Stock and Cravath singled, scoring Paskert. Whitted was safe on a fumble by Merkle, which filled the bases, but Hendrix retired the next two without letting in more runs.

Cubs Score in Fifth.

The Cubs counted their lone tally in the fifth. Merkle singled and Schick walked with none out. Pechous forced Merkle at third and was in turn forced at second by Dilhoefer. On an attempted double steal they ran Dilhoefer to death and let Schick register.

The Cubs got the jump in the second game with one run in the opener. Flack singled. Kilduff popped out. Wolter singled. Doyle was robbed of a hit by Paskert's one handed stab, but Merkle combed a double to right, sending Flack across. That was all for the Mitchells.

The Phillies tied the count in the fourth on a single, a fumble by Doyle, and a double. They took the lead in the fifth on three singles, which were good for two runs and the finish of Walker. The final run was scored off Aldridge in the eighth on a muff by Merkle, a steal by Paskert, and a single by Bancroft. Scores:

Sox Backers at New York Want 10 to 7 on Series

New York, Sept. 22.—Betting on the world's series hasn't much of a start in New York. Only a few bets are being made on the curb. One wager of $1,000 at even money was reported, but Chicago backers are demanding odds of 7 to 10.

Notes

Boston, Mass., Sept. 22.—Tomorrow will be a day of needed rest.

A crowd of nearly 9,000 was out to see the game, regardless of the fact there was nothing left for which to fight.

J. Collins made a great running catch of Gardner's drive to right in the eighth. It was too good a catch for a guy to make after celebrating.

Young Jourdan turned out some snappy plays as first baseman. Young Mr. Hasbrook is waiting for a chance to do likewise.

Joe Jackson will be excused from the Washington series and will remain in Boston to take part in the Tim Murnane benefit game next Thursday.

President Frazee of the Red Sox sent a telegram of congratulations to Charles Comiskey today, saying that no one deserved a pennant more, and imploring the Chicago magnate to keep the world's championship in the American league.

After the game the Sox were given a banquet ordered by Owner Comiskey, and Manager Rowland spared no money to get the best Boston had. It was held at a downtown tavern, and besides the members of the team, the traveling scribes were present and a number of the Boston baseball writers. The lid was off for the evening so the boys could make merry. Tomorrow training rules will be back in effect.

OFFICE AT SOX PARK FLOODED WITH BIDS FOR SERIES TICKETS

President Comiskey's office at the White Sox park was camouflaged like a postoffice yesterday. Requests by the thousands for world series reservations—and Secretary Harry Grabiner believes there are between 3,000 to 4,000 so far—rolled in steadily all day. Every possible means was employed to get word to the White Sox office that the precious ducats were desired above anything else in the world.

Grabiner started the task of opening the mail, but soon discovered it was more than a one man job. He called for help, but even his assistants were swamped. When he was ready to quit for the day Grabiner was heard to remark:

"My, how the mail rolls in."

In addition to the unusual batch of mail, which was delivered by auto truck, requests for seats came through telegrams, telephone, and it is believed the wireless would have been used if the government restriction had been lifted.

Tickets Ready Wednesday.

Orders were given the printers yesterday for the tickets and it is believed they may be ready for distribution by Wednesday. Mail applications will be given preference in the order of their receipt. All checks must be certified and addressed to C. A. Comiskey, White Sox ball park, Thirty-first street and Shields avenue, with an inclosed self-addressed envelope.

No limit has been placed on the number of seats to be sold to one person, but those asking for four or less will get first choice. If the applicant wants more than four an investigation will be made before the order is filled. To prevent the seats falling into the hands of scalpers every possible check will be made. The names and addresses of all applicants will be recorded and Comiskey will send out investigators all over the city in the hopes of buying such seats. Then they will be traced back to the original purchaser after which the names will be published in the daily papers.

Lots of Unreserved Seats.

Of the 32,000 seats, about 15,500 are in the unreserved class. These are in the pavilion and bleacher sections. Ducats for these spots can be purchased only on the day of the game. The remaining 17,500, divided 16,000 grandstand and 7,500 boxes, will be reserved. Applicants must buy seats for all three games and the holder can have the same seat for each contest. If the third game is not played the money will be returned.

Tickets cover the games, not the date. The first two games are set for Chicago, Oct. 6 and 7, but if weather prevents they will be postponed. The third game, which is game No. 5 of the series, is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 12.

Box seats sell for $3 a person and lower grandstand, reserved, for $1.50. These are the only reserved seats.

BENZ HIT HARD EARLY IN TILT; THEN STEADIES

Veterans Take Rest; Jackson Drives In Only Run.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Boston, Mass., Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Our new champion White Sox played ball today just as one would expect a team to play the day after winning a pennant and the day after celebrating the victory. As a result Boston's Red Sox won easily, 4 to 1, and nobody cared.

With several regulars missing in the lineup and with others still a bit dazed from the pennant heights or something the Sox didn't look like champions, but they are, nevertheless, so didn't worry over their showing. All they could think about was the fact they are champions.

Substitutes Replace Stars.

Manager Rowland began at once his plan of saving the stars for the big show which is to come later on, and sent Joe Benz to the slab to hurl, an event quite novel to the tall spitball flinger. Young Jourdan was sent to first base to give Chick Gandil a needed rest, J. Collins went to an outfield job so that Hap Felsch could heal a wounded thigh, Risberg went back to shortstop so that Buck Weaver couldn't break another finger, and Bird Lynn went behind the bat so that Ray Schalk could have the unique experience of watching a game from the bench.

This outfit gave the Red Sox quite a battle after they were thoroughly awakened, but it took three or four innings to make the boys realize they were in a game instead of celebrating the winning of the pennant. In those few innings the Boston batters swatted the ball all over the field and scored enough runs to win, but from the third on Benz and the other new ones had their dander up and held the locals to nothing.

Mays Pitches Good Ball.

Carl Mays, who was on the slab for the Red Sox, pitched ball as if out to right all the wrongs done by the White Sox during the season. He allowed the Chicagoans only five hits and after the first inning they never had a good chance to do any business.

As a ball game it was only an exhibition, for there was absolutely nothing to fight for and yet there was a crowd out twice as big as on the previous day, when the Red Sox still were in the pennant race. Boston fans like an exhibition and have grown sick of pennants.

Right at the start it looked bad for Benz, because Harry Hooper hit one to the farthest corner of the field for three sacks. This blow jarred Benz, who was in no condition to be jarred after an evening of feasting and celebrating. He walked Cooney and then Hoblitzell slammed a base hit to right, sending Hooper home. With the help of a great peg by Leibold, which nailed Cooney at the plate, Benz was able to get out of that mess with no further damage being done.

Red Sox Steal Tallies.

In the next Gardner singled and stole second at once. Scott bunted and Lynn threw to third too late for the play. Then Scott stole second while Benz wasn't looking and Agnew drove a long fly to Jackson. Gardner came home after the catch, and when Jackson's bad throw went to the grand stand Scott also got home.

In the third inning, after two were out, Risberg kicked an easy grounder and Gardner was safe at first. He started running at once, and as he did Scott hit one in a line to the wall in left center, sensing Gardner all the way home. There were a few more hits off Benz after that, but not one that did any damage. He had fully recovered from the celebration and the dizziness of a pennant elevation and pitched speedy ball.

Jackson Drives In Run.

The lone tally for the Sox was obtained while they still were in their bewildered state of mind. In the first inning Leibold led off with a single and stole second as McMullin fanned. E. Collins then boosted to Lewis, but Jackson swatted a long fly to deep center and Shorten lost the ball in the sun. Jackson got a two bagger and Leibold sprinted home.

The Sox got only two men to first base after that, in the ninth, when with one out E. Collins and Jackson recovered their normal eyesight and got a regular single a piece, but the side was retired before those hits caused any damage.

PIRATE ROOKIE DELAYS CLIMAX FOR THE GIANTS

Ponder Blanks New York After Coming Champs Win First Game.

New York's lead of eleven and a half games over Philadelphia means that if the Giants win only one of their remaining ten games to play the Phillies cannot beat them even if they win all their possible twelve games.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Sept. 22.—Ponder, a recruit pitcher, stopped the march of the Giants toward a clear claim to the National league championship by holding the league leaders to two hits and shutting them out, 1 to 0, in the second game of a double header. New York won the first game, 2 to 1, after an eleven inning pitchers' battle between Cooper and Perritt. New York must win one more game before being sure of the championship, should Philadelphia win all its remaining games.

The first game looked like a shutout for New York until the eighth, when Kauff singled, stole second, and scored on Zimmerman's single. Pittsburgh had scored a run in the first on hits by Bigbee, Carey, and Boeckel. In the eleventh Boeckel threw wild on Thorpe's grounder and the latter reached second on the error, third on Kauff's sacrifice, and scored on Zimmerman's third safe hit.

Ponder, recently obtained by Pittsburgh from Birmingham, outpitched Demaree, who was wild, in the second game. Demaree gave way to Anderson in the sixth. The only run of the game came in the fifth on a pass to Caton, a single by Mollwitz, and Bigbee's sacrifice fly. Scores:

BROWNS BEAT YANKS TWICE.

New York, Sept. 22.—St. Louis defeated New York in both sections of a double header, 4 to 2 and 3 to 0. In the first game Shawkey's wildness cost him the game, three of his five bases on balls being converted into runs. Loudermilk, making his return to the majors in the second game, shut out the Yankees with four hits. Gerber's all around work featured. In seven times at bat he hit a triple, a double, and three singles. Second Baseman Pratt of St. Louis turned his ankle sliding into third base in the second game and was forced to retire. Scores:

Charles Dean New President of Central A. A. U. Division

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

Because of the faithful services he has rendered since 1905 Charles A. Dean of the Chicago Amateur Swimming association last night was elected president of the central division of the A. A. U. at the annual meeting of the board of managers at the Hotel Sherman.

Charles D. Lynch of the Detroit Yacht club was elected first vice president by unanimous vote. Carl F. Rothfuss of the St. Paul A. C. was chosen second vice president. C. T. Booth of the Minneapolis A. C. third vice president, and Charley Wilson, formerly track coach at Princeton and Purdue universities, the Illinois A. C., and now in charge of athletics at the Joliet steel works, was elected fourth vice president.

Martin Again Handicapper.

Frank A. Martin, the former First Regiment A. A. pole vaulter, was re-elected handicapper and Capt. Ollie D. Steele official steward. L. B. Reitman was reelected secretary and treasurer and Fred L. Steers chairman of the registration committee. Dr. E. P. Swatek of the I. A. C. and George A. Schneider of Cleveland were elected to serve on the registration board with Steers.

Dean won the presidential honors, which will command a deal of his time during the ensuing year. He is taking over the duties of former President John Ritchie, who has joined the colors and who is now in France. Ritchie sent words of cheer from the trenches, and his letter was read by Vice President Lynch, who presided at the meeting.

Formerly Secretary-Treasurer.

Dean started his labors with the A. A. U. when he was elected secretary and treasurer. He served in this capacity until 1914. At the annual meeting in 1915 he was elected president and in the following time served as chairman of the championship committee. He is the only A. A. U. official who has acted as referee of all branches of amateur athletics.

After a deal of discussion the following clubs were admitted to membership: Magyar A. C., Cleveland; Hyde Park A. C., Chicago; Duluth Boat club; Gaelic Park A. A., Chicago; Chicago Hockey association, and the Logan Square A. A.

Upon the motion of Everett C. Brown, chairman of the legislative committee, it was voted that the Central A. A. U. send a letter of best wishes to Joe Ritchie, who is now in France with the engineer corps. Messrs. Brown, Ligner, and Reitman have received letters from the former president.

Recommend Rules for Camps.

By a unanimous vote the Central A. A. U. recommended to the national body that books of A. A. U. rules be sent to every camp and battleship and if meets are held strictly in accordance to these rules that the A. A. U. recognise any records which might be made. Reports of the various committees were read and approved.

Lewis Omer, formerly director of athletics at Northwestern and who is now sports director at Rockford, made a short speech in which he said the representatives of the various clubs in the Central A. A. U. could do the boys in camp a lot of good by sending athletic paraphernalia of any kind to the camp. He said these athletic weapons can be shipped to France in large boxes and will furnish a sort of recreation for the boys who are to defend the colors.

As soon as Mr. Omer had finished his speech Mr. Brown, as president of the South Shore Country club, and Athletic Director Blankley of the Illinois pledged themselves to start a fund at their respective clubs to furnish the boys with the necessary equipment.

The Hudson Super-Six

As It Is Affected by New Prices

Suppose We Look at It This Way—

You are offered your choice of a great variety of automobiles.

All you are asked to pay for the car of your choice is the difference between what the car sells for and the price of a Hudson Super-Six.

Here are cars which sell at $1500 to $1600. Until recently they were priced at between $1200 and $1400.

But now they sell for more because recent increase in material costs has forced selling prices up to their present levels. So the only difference you must pay for a Hudson Super-Six is less than $100.

Could you, under such circumstances, give even a second thought to such a car? Wouldn't you be like the more than forty thousand who have already bought Super-Sixes? Hudson was their first choice.

Or let us suppose you already own one of those cars that has recently advanced its prices. And to emphasize the point, suppose before you had even taken delivery of the car some one offered you a brand new Hudson Super-Six for your car if you would give him not more than $100 to boot. There wouldn't be any hesitancy on your part in that case, now would there?

That is the situation as it stands today. The other cars have had to advance their prices so much that it has entirely readjusted the basis of values as they were known only a few weeks ago. It has brought former cheaper cars up to about the Hudson price. It has advanced higher-priced cars than the Hudson so much that the difference between them is now $500 to $1000 greater. So far 51 makes have been advanced in price. The advances range from $100 to $700, according to make and model.

The Hudson has so far escaped the necessity for advancing its price. That is due to a fortunate turn in affairs which finds the Hudson factory supplied with a quantity of parts that were bought last year before material prices had shot up to their present unequaled heights. The other companies exhausted their supplies in the spring and had to enter the market when it was at its highest.

The Hudson prices can't stand long. Soon they, too, must advance. But the situation it offers is unique. It is a great opportunity for those who take advantage of it.

You must already know a lot about the Hudson Super-Six. There are so many in use that wherever you go you will meet Super-Six owners. Ask them if you want to know what kind of a car it is. You will find it is the car which every one admits is the greatest performer. It is the one that has full rights on the road if its driver cares to exercise those rights. You will find it is the car that meets every abuse that the hardest driver gives it and still it seems never to be out of condition.

Such is the kind of a car you can get at prices which were established last year if you will buy now.

OAK PARK DOWNS HARRISON TECHS IN TWO COMBATS

Heavies Victors by 10 to 0 and Minors Triumph by 12 to 0 Score.

BY PREP.

Chicago league and suburban high schools introduced the 1917 brand of football in half a dozen strenuous battles on different fields yesterday. Oak Park, which tuned up against its all-star alumni last Tuesday, taking a defeat in that process, pried off the lid with a bang by whitewashing Harrison Tech, both majors and minors, in two keen contests at the Oak Parkers' grounds.

Oak Park heavies downed Harrison, 10 to 0, the main factors being Harrison's slipshod handling of the ball when within scoring reach, and Quarter Back Uteritz's long, accurate kicks for the Thistlethwaite crowd. Oak Park's 135 pounders were too fast for Harrison lights' defense, and sped off with a 12 to 0 victory.

In the third period Uteritz on his five yard line booted fifty-five yards to Dolezal, who fumbled on Harrison's forty yard mark. Ritchie of Oak Park scooped up the ball for a forty yard lope for a touchdown. Uteritz kicked goal. In the same period the little Oak Park quarter turned another kicking feat which gave his team three more points. He punted to Besta on Harrison's two yard line. Three downs netted the Techs three yards, then Vaughn kicked out to Uteritz, who signaled for fair catch on Harrison's forty-three yard mark, preferring the fair catch to the uncertainties of a try at returning against the strong Tech backs.

Uteritz Makes Place Kick.

On the next play he shot a clean place kick between the bars from a difficult angle way to the left of the goal posts, forty-three yards distant. Besta and Center, Harrison's backs, were the best ground gainers in the game, plowing through Oak Park whenever they took the ball, from one tackle to the other. Timme, Oak Park's full back, starred on defense, making the majority of tackles.

O. P. Minors, 12; Harrison, 0.

Oak Park's minors showed power in the first half, but lacked the punch for touchdowns when near the goal. Toward the end of the third period Caruso and Steger tore off spectacular dashes, being aided by two passes Steger to Swanson, and had the ball on Harrison's four yard line at the call of time. Caruso went over on the first play of the fourth quarter, Sinden missing the kick. Steger disconcerted Harrison by another pass to Swanson, beginning another dash down the field a minute later. He circled ends through the broken field for forty-five yards, again putting the ball in scoring distance, and Caruso went over with the final score. Sinden again missed goal. Right End Nelson and Backs Ryn and Pertle were mainly conspicuous for Harrison. Lineup:

La Grange got its start to victory when Right End Green snatched a fumble in the third period and took the whole Downers Grove team off guard for a seventy yard race to touchdown. In the fourth quarter W. Decou had good performance and on a delayed smash slashed his way through the field twenty yards for another score. Lane just missed scoring in the first period, when it had the ball five yards from Tilden's goal, but the south side school held. Lane threatened in succeeding periods also, but Tilden's stone wall when near the home goal mal withstood the attacks.

M. J. O'Brien's victory over W. B. Huey featured semi-finals for the Directors' cup, O'Brien winning at the home green when Huey foozled a short putt. In the other half of the bracket E. H. Raedel defeated G. W. Springer, 3 and 2. In the ball sweepstakes, G. Patterson won with 85—13—72. Blind bogey honors went to B. G. Sykes, who guessed 101—18—83. Dr. Davis followed with 99—15—84.

D. J. Lewis won the ball sweepstakes with 94—26—68. J. F. Chambers, 90—13—77, and A. L. Lewis, 86—9—77, tried for second place.

MAROONS DELVE IN MUSTY TOMES TO GATHER HOPE

Hark Back to 1908 for 'Champ' Team from 17 Man Squad.

BY MAROON.

The fact that Coach Stagg gave the University of Chicago a championship in 1908 with a squad of seventeen men, two of them so small they looked like lightweight high school players, is the one and only consoling hope for Midway students this fall. The 1917 squad totals eighteen men. Not over two additions are expected before school opens in two weeks.

The small squad would not be so discouraging to the south side rooters, if in the number was the nucleus of a good team, but with only four men on hand who ever played in a varsity game and the remainder of the squad well sprinkled with men who have spent the first week of their lives in football suits, the problem that confronts Coach Stagg is the greatest of his career.

Envy State School Squads.

In all state schools the new team will be composed of second squad men of last season, in most cases men who were given a thorough test in spring practice last April. A second squad is an unknown thing at Chicago and spring practice for the varsity men was called off because of the elaborate military drill schedule which filled Stagg field at all hours of the day, even when the ball team was trying to play a conference game off in one corner.

The veteran squad on the Maroon team is composed of three guards and one end, and the guard positions usually worry a coach the least. Carl Breloe, who probably will be elected captain to fill the vacancy left by Frank Pershing, who is now crating guns at the Watervliet arsenal, is a fixture at right end, unless the backfield squad fizzles out and the stocky little wing protector is called into the offensive quartet.

Higgins to Be Shifted.

Charlie Higgins, the all conference guard, is almost certain to be shifted to a new position. One plan is to play him at full back on offense and loose center or tackle on defense. The outcome of the scrap for back field berths will decide where Hig is used. Bondzinski will fill his old berth at left guard, but Gorgas will probably move from the other guard position to center or tackle.

From an untried little bunch Coach Stagg must pick his other seven regulars and first string substitutes. Elton, a sophomore full and half back; Kahn, who may be used at full, half, or tackle; Jackson, a tackle, brother of last year's captain; and Rouse, a fleet quarter or half back, are four sophomores who would make the varsity any year, and all have had considerable experience.

Men who have never played before must be chosen for the four remaining positions. Blocki and Chappell, quarterbacks, Hinkle and Bradley, ends, Reber, center, Feuerstein, halfback, and Mellen, a squad man from last year who is now on crutches, are about the only possibilities. Higgins, Rouse and Kahn are in Ambulance Unit No. 13 and may be called at any moment.

Chicago Football Leaguers To Open Their Season Oct. 7

Morgan Park Prep Team Holds Alumni to Draw

Morgan Park High and an alumni eleven played a scoreless tie in the preps' first game. W. Joor and McKeever of the high schoolers got off to good gains by bucks off tackle, but the alumni kept them from penetrating too far down the field. The alumni once worked the ball to within two yards of the school team's goal, but on the next play the high schoolers forced the ex-stars back for a loss. Lineup:

GEORGE O'NEIL TELLS ANECDOTES OF LINKS

seventeenth he sliced his tee shot into a muddy pit beside the brook. The situation seemed hopeless, for the problem was a double one—not only how to get the ball out of the mud but also how to play it after it was out—but Larry cut the Gordian knot and solved both problems with one of those old fashioned niblicks that so closely resembled a scoop shovel. With a careful but mighty blow he pitched ball, mud and all, on to the green—fortunately within a few inches of the cup, for a piece of mud larger than the ball itself was sticking to it. This shot won him the championship.

Duck Club Gives Sendoff to Two Soldier Members

Erwin Roeder and George Bignal, two additions to Uncle Sam's fighting forces, were tendered a farewell party last night at Ferugolo hall, 4359 West Harrison street, by members of the Duck club of that vicinity. Roeder is a member of the Seventh regiment, while Bignal has been called for service in the new national army. Both were presented with wrist watches by their clubmates, M. J. Stapleton making the presentation speech.

PURPLE ROOTERS NONE TOO HAPPY OVER PROSPECTS

Outlook Is for Ordinary Line, with Fairly Good Set of Backs.

BY EVAN STONE.

After a week's practice in the Purple camp the rooters are still speculating on the prospects of the season. The reason is that while some idea of the Purple has been gained, the strength of the opponents is quite a matter of guesswork, because each team will be composed so largely of men unknown by previous play. The strength of a team made up of veterans and sophomores who have a high school reputation can be calculated, but this is not so of teams composed largely of conscripts from the campus.

Coach Murphy of Northwestern may be able to round out a team that will be no worse than several aggregations that have represented the school. Barring accidents, Northwestern promises to have a fair back field, with a line of only ordinary ability.

Accidents Weaken Team.

Because the squad is small, a few accidents will materially weaken the Purple. Already a broken ankle has placed Brightmire out of it and left only three veterans in the back field—Underhill, Kohler, and Ellingwood. "Brighty" played a fast game last year and, with his experience, was expected to take the regular job as pilot.

The addition to the coaching staff of Neil Matthews, former tackle and captain of Pennsylvania, is hailed with satisfaction because it is realized Murphy would have his hands overfull trying to teach a novice squad the fine points of both line and back field play, besides planning the attack and defense.

Murphy Sees Interesting Games.

Coach Murphy believes the conference will see interesting, well contested games this season, but is dubious about next year. He finds that many of the candidates on his squad expect to be called into service within the next few months, and that most of the others are contemplating enlisting.

"If the war keeps on," the Purple mentor is quoted, "I'm afraid football will be discontinued. There won't be men enough left in colleges who are physically fit to make up a team. War enthusiasm is steadily growing, and by next year it is likely all our athletes will be fighting on the battlefield. No one is going to dismade them from achieving the honor of fighting for Uncle Sam."

BADGER STATE CHOICE AS NEW BOXING CENTER

Shift Due to Wisconsin or Ohio When Game Dies in New York.

BY RAY PEARSON.

What's going to happen to the boxing game after Nov. 15, when the final curtain is rung down on the sport in the state of New York?

There are a lot of people who do not think the stoppage of the mitt swinging sport in the Empire state is going to be particularly pernicious, but to the big majority it is a cinch the affect will be most harmful. "Why shouldn't it be?" is asked, and it's mighty hard to find an answer to combat that question. Those who do not think the sport will be seriously damaged by the punch landed by Gov. Whitman point to precedent, which shows that boxing centers constantly change and that when one state closes down the lid there always are other places ready to take a place of prominence in pugilism.

War Makes Big Difference.

If one looks back through the history of the sport he finds that this in the main is true, but conditions today are far from what they have been in the past and due consideration must be given to this fact. When in the past was there ever a war like this world conflict in which the United States as well as European countries are engaged in a battle to the finish with the central powers?

When in the past, we must ask, have we faced the taxation of the present necessary to carry on our part of the world war? When have we been forced to pay such prices for foodstuffs, for coal and other necessities? Answer that and we are perfectly willing to abide by the contention that the pugilistic game is just as strong and has a promising future ahead, regardless of the demise of the sport in New York.

Promoters Hard Hit.

There is no effort on our part to present a pessimistic view of boxing conditions, present or future, but while we are about it it is necessary to state that, with the huge increase in all other things, taxation, foodstuffs, etc., there has been no increase in the price of admission tickets to see the boxers perform. These same boxers also are going along pulling down just what they can exact from the promoters. Some of the performers are prospering, while others are not. As for the promoters, they are having a mighty hard row to hoe, and there are few of them who can look over their records for the last year and show any gain of proportions on the profit side.

To say the least, conditions in all lines are uncertain, and naturally boxing is affected along with other things. And, naturally, to have the lid clamped down on the game in New York will prevent a large number of boxers from getting what was possible in the way of coin there. While the shows in Gotham haven't been wonderfully successful financially since the legislature's action of several months ago, they have served to meet the purpose of keeping the eastern metropolis in the spotlight.

Wisconsin May Be Center.

But now when the boxing business is stopped on Nov. 15 some other haven will have to be found for the boxers. Judging by indications, Wisconsin will become the boxing center of the country, unless that honor should happen to be taken away from the Badgers by the state of Ohio. There is much that can be said in favor of Wisconsin. In the first place, ten round, no decision bouts, the same as were permitted in New York, are legal, while in Ohio there is no state law which permits boxing.

In the Buckeye state it is purely a matter of local control in the various cities, but the sport has been carried on so well it is likely no effort will be made, at least in the near future, to pass a bill in the legislature legalizing the game. The last effort resulted in failure. As long as the promoters in Cleveland, Canton, Akron, Cincinnati, and other cities can go along and conduct the bouts as they have been conducted it is not believed there will be any interference with the mitt swingers.

Badgers Keep Sport Clean.

But, naturally, unlegalized sport is uncertain and for that reason the Badger state has the edge on Ohio. The Wisconsin commission surely has kept boxing clean and undoubtedly will continue to exercise the same careful control as in the past. So it looks pretty rosy for Wisconsin in the future, while gloom is falling over New York.

NEW BASS FLIES.

THE trout season of 1917 is now a matter of history, but the lover of fly fishing need not put his fly rod in storage as the streams of the middle west are now in good condition for fly fishing for bass—a sport that is getting more attention from anglers every season. It is fortunate that just as the trout season closes our streams are at their best for bass fishing—truly the red gods are good to us, brothers of the angle!

It was not so many years ago that bait fishermen were somewhat skeptical as to the willingness of the bass to rise to the fraudulent feathers. When Dr. Henshall made his historical remark, "I consider him (the bass), inch for inch, pound for pound, the gamest fish that swims," he also said, "he will rise to the artificial fly as readily as the salmon or the brook trout, under the same conditions," which statement brought forth cackles of derision from the fishwise-helmers of that day.

Anglers of two generations ago were pretty much "sot" in their ways and as a result fly fishing for bass never became popular in granddad's time. Later, the prevalent use of artificial baits and the improvement and refinement of bait casting tackle completely overshadowed fly fishing. Now you will find more anglers toting fly rods on their trips and using them and catching fish with them than ever before.

It seems almost uncalled for to say that fly fishing for bass is a scientific, fascinating, and productive means of catching fish, but a great many bait casters still remain out of the fold—the longer they wait to be convinced the more good things in life they are passing by. Last summer we saw a youthful angler of sixty summers catch his first bass on a fly rod.

"I suppose," he remarked regretfully, "that I've missed a million dollars' worth of fun in the fifty years I have been fishing." And a mere million dollars is a conservative estimate in our opinion.

As is to be expected, present-day anglers, living as they do in a novelty loving and inventive age, have originated many strange, not to say remarkable, variants of the ordinary feathered hook—of the making of bass lures there is no end.

Let us first turn our attention to the so-called "buga." The first of this tribe was the Mississippi bug, first introduced to the small mouth bass of the upper Mississippi some years ago. Chicago fly fishermen had theirs tied by Miss Westwood and the fly is now known as the Westwood bug. It is an unhandsome, raggedy-man critter of natural gray and white hair from the tail of a deer and in the water it bears a more or less imaginary resemblance to a crawfish. With or without a spinner it is very deadly—so killing in fact that some well-meaning fussers object to it.

Another bucktail fly is the South Bend. It has a bulky body of closely cropped bucktail and hair wings and hackles of uncut hair in contrasting colors.

The McCarthy Illinois river bug is also of bucktail. If we were asked what it represents we would guess a helgramite. It is provided with a flexible weed guard which is necessary in fishing the Illinois and other weedy waters.

Still another of the bucktail persuasion is the Hildebrandt bucktail shiner tied in imitation of a small shiner minnow and still light enough to handle on a fly rod.

The Wyman flies are decidedly novel. The one shown here has a thin red and gold body, a feather tail of star spangled banner coloration and hackles of elk hair—too stiff to ever become bedraggled when wet.

Last year Chicago fly fishermen, fishing the upper Mississippi, discovered that the small mouth bass of the big river would rise to the surface—when in ye mood—so Ref's bug was produced to accommodate these fish and many big "killings" have been made with this fly throughout the country. It has a cork body, feather wings and hackles and streaming tail of bucktail hair and resembles nothing that swims, flies or crawls.

Finally we come to the fly rod wiggler, a bait, you could hardly call it a fly, that is a miniature of the wobblers so popular with bait casters. It is light enough to cast easily with a fly rod and comes scootin' through the water, when retrieved, like a scared minnow with a bass in hot pursuit.

One can hardly complain of lack of variety when you add these novelties to the six or seven hundred standard bass flies—surely we have a lot of leeway in getting together an assortment for the time when we must solve the big question: "What are they hittin' today?"

NAGS AT COLUMBUS BATTLE TO A FINISH IN TROTTING RACES

Columbus, O., Sept. 22.—It took thirteen heats to race off three events on the week-end card of the Grand Circuit meeting. Battles to the finish marked the sport in the 2:15 pace, 2:08 trot, and 2:09 pace. The first seven heats of the afternoon saw a different heat winner each mile. Two of the events were hot betting affairs, finally won by the original favorites, although things looked blue for the talent at one point in each battle.

Directum J. was heavily played to win the 2:09 pace and Tommy Murphy was up when the first heat was called, instead of his regular driver, Fahin. Murphy finished no better than fifth the first heat, but breezed away with the next three and the race.

FOR PLAYERS OF WHIST

By A. R. Metcalfe

A BEAUTIFUL deal is reported from the north shore, illustrating a defense never before published.

THE BIDDING.

First round—North 1 spade, east 2 diamonds, south 2 spades, west 4 hearts.

Second round—North 4 spades, east 5 hearts, south pass, west pass.

Third round—North double, east pass, south pass, west pass.

North had the opening lead.

West secured but nine tricks and lost 200 points.

After seeing the dummy, north thought if the declarer was able to get his diamond suit working north and south would be run over with an armored tank. Accordingly north made a fine play at trick two by leading the diamond, with the purpose of exhausting the diamonds in declarer's hand before the latter could draw the trumps.

This play was not made as an attempt to bluff west into going up with the ace of diamonds, as north was quite certain west would do no such thing. But had west held three diamonds south would have trumped at trick four and defeated the contract.

This clever strategy of north left the dummy at trick five with five good diamonds, which could not win a single trick, although the declarer had full command of the trump suit.

Had north failed to go in with the ace of trumps at trick three west would have secured eleven tricks. Had south trumped at trick nine west would have secured ten tricks.

Had west led anything but diamonds at trick two the declarer would have fulfilled his contract.

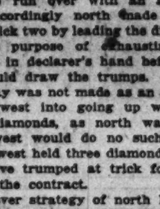
An interesting deal follows, with comments by the sender: "The following hand might be termed the pons asinorum of auction. More discussion, more psychology, more angles showed up than could reasonably be conceived on any one deal."

THE HANDS.



North dealt. The bidding:

1st Round.	2nd Round.	3rd Round
North—1 spade	2 No-Trump	3 No-Trump
East—Pass	Pass	Pass
South—2 hearts	3 Clubs	Pass
West—Pass	Pass	Pass

The deal occurred at the Fifty-first Street Whist club. Besides the players, about a dozen kibitzers or onlookers participated. The result of the hand was 50 penalty against north and south. At the conclusion of the play, north and the kibitzers promptly denounced south for going to three clubs.

South happens to be one of those players who thoroughly understands the potential value of hands containing no five card suits; especially when the opening bid of one spade indicates strength and the second bid of two no trump emphasizes the condition of the hand.

The amusing feature of the whole controversy was that south would have made six clubs or five hearts if allowed to stay on his bids, but south was the only player analyzing the hands.

CHICAGO TENNIS OFFERS THIRTY AMBULANCE MEN

Call Through "Tribune" Brings Candidates for Service at Front.

Thirty tennis players under or over draft age, exempted, or drawn in such late quotas for the liberty army that their chances of action in France appear slim at present constitute Chicago's answer to the call for volunteers in the every ambulance sections.

The call to Chicago's racquet wielders has drawn clubmen from Lake Forest and prep school students from Wingate, in southern Indiana. The call for volunteers was prepared by Western Lawn Tennis association officials and given circulation by THE TRIBUNE, and promptly the next morning the applications and requests for information began pouring in and have been continuing steadily.

"Tribune" Brings Applications.

Since that time the officers of the Western association—Secretary J. C. Stewart and President Harry Waldner—have spent their evenings and other spare time taking care of the volunteers' applications, giving information, and trying to line up the National Tennis association officials in New York and, through them, the war department at Washington to arrange the examinations for Chicagoans in this city, instead of in the east.

Thirty-seven or a few more men will be in each section. The hope of the Chicago tennis contingent is that this city will be represented by a complete section. Each section will include twenty-four ambulance drivers, a chief mechanic and two other mechanics, two orderlies, two clerks, a cook, and an assistant cook. It will be officered by a first lieutenant, first sergeant, sergeant, and corporal.

Many Walks of Life.

The list of those already volunteered ranges from school instructors to chauffeurs, with bookkeepers, a soccer player, efficiency engineer, and some college students thrown in for good measure. The latest application came yesterday. It is from a lawyer. It asks the aid of THE TRIBUNE in placing one more fighter for democracy where he can do the most good and is typical in its plea for action of the letters of numerous other volunteers who sought to be enrolled. The letter follows:

"CHICAGO TRIBUNE" SPORTING EDITOR: I am applying herewith for an opportunity of serving in ambulance unit recently organized by the tennis officials of the national organization. I was called in the first draft, and although I passed a good physical examination, I was rejected because of nearsightedness. As a follower of tennis for the last eight years I naturally would like to join the "tennis unit." I have been driving a car for almost a year and would like to qualify as a driver. Can you advise me as to the proper place and person to receive applications? HARRY A. ASH, 1045 North Richmond street.

FOR THE FORD

Show at Coliseum Includes Accessories of Every Sort for Just That One Make of Car.

Such captions persons as may not be satisfied with a Henry as its creator made it will find ample food for thought at the Coliseum this week.

This huge show tempia, which has housed displays of pretty nearly everything under the sun, now has something new to exhibit—a national display devoted exclusively to the things designed to change the Ford's appearance, habits, and general manner of conducting itself. The exposition opened last evening and will continue until Saturday, though the public will not be admitted today.

From hugs devices for making trucks out of runabouts to such esoteric matters as special differentials and spark plugs, every conceivable thing that can be hitched to a Ford is on view. There are special bodies, starters, electric lighting systems, headlight lenses, car locks, wire wheels, steering gears, carburetors, manifolds, tire carriers, floor mats, and similar contraptions in infinite variety.

Three exhibitors show devices for operating the Ford on kerosene. One has a method of lengthening the car's wheelbase eighteen inches and transforming the five passenger body to one of seven passenger dimensions.

Altogether, the 300 booths are occupied by 125 exhibitors from various parts of the United States and Canada. Though the show is not officially sanctioned by the Ford Motor company, a complete showing of the newest models is to be seen.

It is the first national display to be devoted to a single make of car, and the first to give its chief attention to the matter of accessories.

As an incident of the festivities the management has announced it will apply the entire gate receipts for the week to the purchase of an ambulance for service in France. This is made possible by the fact exhibitors have already paid the running expenses.

Each visitor will be asked to write his name on his admission ticket. When the show closes one of these tickets will be drawn from the pile and the name it bears will be lettered on the ambulance as that of the donor.

UNEVEN FINISH IN CORN MARKET; DECLINE IN OATS

Favorable Weather and Break in Cash Corn Are Depressing Factors.

The market for corn futures was rather irregular yesterday, with prices ranging lower during most of the session. Closing figures were best for the day and showed December ¼-⅝c lower and May fractionally higher. Favorable weather conditions over the belt, with a promise of their continuance for several days, caused free selling of corn during the early part of the session and prices were depressed materially. A weaker cash market and rumors of peace also had more or less effect. There was good buying of corn, however, led by Mincer and Bartlett-Frazier, which counted as a strong factor in the closing hour. Private predictions of cold weather next week was the basis for part of this buying.

The official long range forecast predicts rain for much of the belt during the early part of next week, to be followed by cooler weather. Cash corn was 1@7c lower, with local shipping sales 20,000 bu. Primary receipts totaled 475,000 bu, compared with 938,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts were 82 cars.

Shorts Buy September Oats.

Trade in oats futures was featured by heavy buying of September and selling of December delivery by prominent elevator interests. It was estimated that about 1,000,000 bu were changed at differences ranging from 1¾ to 2c, largely at the latter figure. Prices at the close were ⅛@½c lower. Offerings of September oats came from scattered sources, while there was active buying of the December by Bartlett-Frazier and Thomson and McKinnon. Further weakness in cash oats and the decline in corn worked against prices. Weather conditions continued to be favorable for the movement.

Cash oats were 1@1½c lower, with local shipping sales 185,000 bu, including 100,000 bu for export. It was believed, however, that total export sales amounted to about 500,000 bu. No. 3 white oats sold at a discount under September price for the first time on the crop. Local receipts were 199 cars. Primary markets received 1,225,000 bu, against 1,021,000 bu a year ago.

Wheat Conditions Unchanged.

Conditions in the wheat market were unchanged. Receipts were again light at 35 cars and the food administration agents had orders for over 500 cars. Primary receipts were 1,083,000 bu, compared with 1,712,000 bu a year ago. Local receipts for the week were 557,000 bu and shipments 151,000 bu. Some of the local receivers say they have fair quantities of wheat en route to Chicago. Weather conditions were favorable for winter wheat plowing and seeding.

Provisions Again Higher.

Provisions made further advances, with lard not relatively as firm as meats, being under considerable pressure in way of realizing sales. Packing interests were free buyers for October and January ribs and there was investment demand for other product. January pork reached a new high point of $45.80. Trade in cash product is reported as good. The advance in cottonseed oil was a help to lard. Government and foreign buyers continue in the market for meats. Hog prices were higher and receipts at western markets for the week totaled 258,850 head, against 253,000 last week and 291,000 a year ago. Local meat shipments for the week were 17,018,000 lbs, against 15,290,000 lbs a year ago.

Rye Dull and Weak.

Rye was steady to ¼c lower. Cash No. 2 sold at $1.89@1.89½ and No. 3 at $1.88. Receipts, 12 cars.

Barley ruled 1@2c lower for malting and unchanged for other grades. Former was quoted $1.30@1.42 and sold $1.31@1.41; feed and mixing quotable $1.20@1.36, with sales at $1.27@1.36; screenings were quoted 70c@$1.15 and sold 82c@$1.05. Receipts, 41 cars.

Timothyseed was firm. March sold $8.75 and cash lots at $7.25. September closed $8.10 bid and $8.75 asked; October, $7.90 bid and $8.50 asked. Cloverseed ruled steady, with cash quoted $15.00@21.00 and spot prime $22.50.

Flaxseed was 2½c lower. Cash quotable $3.50@3.53.

Superior Steel Company.

Net earnings of the Superior Steel corporation are said to be averaging $250,000 a month. The company has in 1917 retired $1,000,000 of the original issue of $3,500,000 first preferred stock.

GOSSIP OF THE PIT

THE spread between standard and No. 3 white oats widened out considerably, the former selling ⅛c over September price and the latter ⅛c under. This is the first time on the crop that No. 3 white oats have been at a discount and is taken as reflecting the limited demand. Buyers wanted standard oats to put in store, and consequently they sold on a ⅛c better basis than No. 3 whites. Warehouse receipts for 202,000 bu oats have been canceled for shipment in the last few days, and part of the grain will go to fill government orders. Local shipping sales yesterday were 185,000 bu, including 100,000 bu for export, said to be at basis of 6¾c over December price, track seaboard. It is thought that the total export sales amount to about 500,000 bu.

Crary-Johnson company have the following from a representative of a company whose business requires an accurate knowledge of crop possibilities: "The increased acreage of corn is much greater than the government or crop experts have figured. The per cent of damage in the great corn belt has been slight. I never saw such a wonderful prospect for a big crop, and I estimate the final yield at 3,800,000,000 bushels. On account of excellent pasturage no corn will be fed until a freeze up, and even then straw will be substituted."

Omcial long range forecast is for fair and warmer weather in region of the great lakes, followed by rain about Monday or Tuesday and again toward the end of the week, with somewhat lower temperature during latter period. In plains states and upper middle Mississippi valley rain is promised by Sunday night in northern sections, extending into south plains states and upper Mississippi valley Monday or Tuesday, with somewhat higher temperatures. Fair after Tuesday, with lower temperatures.

John Inglis wires Logan & Bryan from Lincoln, Neb.: "From Sioux City to Omaha, along Missouri river bottoms, corn yields are below last year's—mostly in milk stage; some very green, later than the uplands. Omaha to Lincoln, some fair corn, general average much below normal. Farmers apprehensive, as they say too cold, not maturing."

Cash corn was 3@7c lower. Local industries lowered their bids and with no shipping demand to speak of sellers were forced to make concessions. Offerings of corn from the country to arrive were larger and bids for near by shipment were about 10c lower. Local shipping sales were 20,000 bu.

Baltimore wired: "Understand the food administration commandeered enough corn in elevators to load vessel awaiting cargo. Nothing was done with neutral vessels lying in the harbor."

Receipts inspected yesterday: Wheat, 35 cars; corn, 82 cars; oats, 199 cars; rye, 12 cars; barley, 41 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 22,000 head, and for all next week, 75,000 head.

St. Louis reported new corn to grade No. 2 was offered there at $1.50 per bu, October shipment.

It is a $5,000,000 holding corporation, with seventeen underlying construction, water supply, gas, and electric companies in various parts of the country. The action was brought by two stockholders. Farmers Profit by the War.

While investors are paying for the war, farmers are placed in a position to profit by it. While the government is fixing maximum prices for coal and other commodities, it is fixing minimum prices for wheat. The minimum price is high enough to yield a large profit, but it does not satisfy some of the farmers, and they are holding back their grain for more money. Everybody else is prohibited from buying wheat and holding it for a rise, but farmers may withhold their own crops from market and associations composed of farmers can and do buy grain on a great scale and are permitted to withhold it as long as they choose.

The "war profits" tax bears heavily on investors, but it does not touch the vast majority of farmers, since one provision of the bill as passed by the senate is an exemption of $5,000 of the war profits of "each citizen and resident of the United States."

Probably many farmers can make a small payment toward the cost of the war under the income tax section of the law if they wish, but if not inclined to do so most of them can easily show that nearly all their gross receipts are used in the necessary expenses of their business and that the surplus remaining is below the exemption line. Various taxes, such as those on tea and coffee, which would affect everybody alike, were removed from the bill by the senate.

The farmers are not to blame for all these favors. Doubtless they are just as patriotic as other people, but they cannot be expected to petition congress to levy heavy war taxes on them when the lawmakers prefer to put all the taxes possible on investors. The farmers take the situation as they find it and do the best they can, and they are doing better than ever before.

Loan Expansion Reflects Easier Attitude in the Money Market.

The New York bank statement made a favorable exhibit in the matter of excess reserve there being an increase of a little over $7,000,000, which brought the item up to $32,754,720.

There was a large expansion in loans, over $30,000,000, which apparently reflected the easier attitude of the banks toward the time money market. Deposits showed a small decrease. The figures follow:

"No Danger of Oil Shortage."

A. C. Bedford, president of the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, says of the oil situation with reference to the war:

"There is no danger of a deficiency in the supply either of crude oil or refined products for the use of the United States or its allies in the war. America is producing and can produce all that will be needed for these purposes and our government should receive the first call upon all the petroleum produced either for itself or as it may designate for the use of our allies.

"The price should be sufficiently attractive to induce more and more people to drill wells, thus insuring a steady supply and offering always the opportunity of finding a great pool.

Refining Capacity Great.

"While the oil refining capacity of the country is greater than the present demand, the United States is consuming crude oil at the rate of over 320,000,000 barrels a year, while the annual production in this country amounts to 312,-000,000 barrels. There was, however, in storage on July 1 164,590,942 barrels of petroleum.

"It will thus appear that all of the stocks above ground and given the present rate of production and consumption the supply is sufficient to insure us having enough oil for at least the next five years provided the production is fairly maintained. So, while the occasion is not one for alarm, it is one for taking intelligent measures toward adequate production of what we need."

ON THE BROAD STREET CURB

NEW YORK, Sept. 22.—[Special.]—Trading on the Broad street curb was feverish and unsettled until the last three days, when the fixing of the government price on copper was preceded and followed by vigorous buying, which carried prices of many groups up to substantially higher levels.

When the market was under pressure severe losses were sustained and some new records were made, Chevrolet falling from 78 to 68, followed by an advance to 80. United Motors sold down to the new low of 16, from which it rose to 21½. Bethlehem Steel new preferred sold down to the new low record of 101¼.

The airplane stocks fluctuated over a wide range, Curtiss falling to 33½ and then advancing to 42¾, and Wright-Martin after selling at 7⅝ rose to 10⅝.

There was a good deal of business in the copper stocks in the last three days of the week, Calumet & Jerome ranging from 1⅞ to 2⅛; Butte Copper & Zinc 5⅝ to 6¼, and Acme from 2¼ to 2⅝.

Oil stocks moved with the rest of the market, declining in the first three days and then advancing. Merritt, after falling to 32½ rose to 36⅝, and Midwest Refining, after declining to 137, rose to 142.

Russian, 6⅛s after selling down to 75 rose to 81½. The 5½s advanced from 66 to 71½.

MARKET COMMENT

LARGE Wall street operators are said to have turned to cotton for a campaign on the bull side. Mills are also said to have bought heavily against big sales of goods to the United States government. Stress is laid on the late movement of the crop, the difficulty of bringing cotton north over congested railroads, and the sharp demand for September shipment, which may be repeated in October.

Friends of the American Can company are said to have been accumulating American Can recently, based on the certainty of large profits in the present year and the outlook for a continuance of satisfactory earnings during 1918. It is estimated that for the year to end Dec. 31 next earnings will equal at least 20 per cent on the common stock.

According to one market observer, the downward move in Bethlehem B shares a plain attack by room bears based on peace stories. United States Steel also sold off for the same reason.

CHICAGO BANK CLEARINGS

Chicago bank clearings for the week ended yesterday amounted to $490,220,-227, as compared with $418,957,526 for the corresponding week of last year, an increase of $71,262,701, or 17 per cent. The following table shows the daily and total clearings and balances for the week:

RELIEF WORK AT ALGONQUIN SETS A NEW RECORD

1,098 Patients Treated and Not One Death Recorded.

More cases were taken care of in THE TRIBUNE hospital at Algonquin during the season which has just closed than ever before. The number of sick babies was the greatest in the history of the institution, but there was no serious illness and no deaths. Those connected with the management of the hospital say the season has been the most useful they have known.

Total subscriptions to the hospital fund during the season amounted to $3,448.84 and $1,811.84 was given to the ice fund.

The Algonquin hospital season began June 26 and closed Sept. 1, although a few bad cases were given care a little later than this. During this period 1,098 patients were treated. The camp at Algonquin was opened to children July 6 and closed Aug. 24. In this time 545 women and children were given outings.

The cost of operating the hospital was heavier this season than ever before, but strenuous efforts were made to hold down the expense, with the result that an estimate made during the summer was never reached.

In addition to the amounts subscribed through THE TRIBUNE much other help was given. One subscription of $800 was sent directly to the hospital following a plea for help printed in THE TRIBUNE. Churches of Oak Park helped in a systematic manner, and free transportation was given patients by the Chicago and Northwestern railway, through the efforts of C. A. Cairns, general passenger agent, who often put on special coaches for the benefit of those going to the hospital.

TRIAL OF HEALEY, BARRY ET AL. TO OPEN OCTOBER 15

Trial of former Chief of Police Charles C. Healey, William (Billy) Skidmore, and Detective Sergt. Stephen Barry will start before Judge Joseph Sabath in the Criminal court on Oct. 15. Selection of the jury will start on that date, it was agreed by the lawyers before Judge Sabath yesterday.

Assistant State's Attorney Frank Johnston attempted to have the case set for trial for Oct. 1, but he was opposed by Attorney John J. Healy for the former chief.

Clarence Darrow, who successfully defended former Ald. Oscar De Priest in the first of the graft cases to be tried, will assist Attorney Healy.

More than 300 delegates, representing as many cities in all sections of the country, will attend the third annual convention of the National Association of Commercial Organization Secretaries at the Congress hotel, Sept. 24-25-26. The board of directors met yesterday to complete the program. Among those who will speak are: E. A. Brand, former assistant chief of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce; W. G. Lemon, secretary, Johnstown Chamber of Commerce, Johnstown, Pa.; D. P. Chindblom, manager, traffic bureau, Chamber of Commerce, Rochester, N. Y.

Castor Beans Bring Chicago $100,000 Order

Lloyd L. Warfield of Fort Myers, Fla., is in Chicago to buy $100,000 worth of machinery that crushes the castor bean, the oil of which is used on United States warships. "The raising of castor beans has become a large industry in Florida since the navy department has asked for 500,000 bushels," Mr. Warfield said yesterday. "While the beans can be grown successfully in the north, there is less chance for them to freeze in the south."

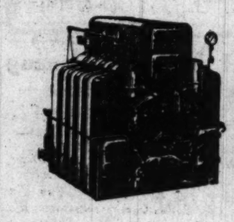
The NEWPORT
Adjustable Magazine Feed
BOILER

Is the Only Heating Boiler Known That Burns Any Size of Fuel With Economy and Gives the Greatest Heating Efficiency



Make Us Prove It

Go and see other boilers, too. The old style boilers can burn only the large sizes with any degree of efficiency at all. The self-feed type boilers—all except the Newport—burn the smaller sizes ONLY, and when this smaller size cannot be had—as is sometimes the case—they are practically out of commission.

The Adjustable Magazine Throat

is one of the many exclusive features of the Newport and makes it the choice of critical people. It permits the most economical combustion of ANY size of coal and gets the most heat out of it. As well buy an automobile with only ONE speed as have a boiler that can use but one size of coal.

NEWPORT BOILERS have 22 other advantages—real ones. All make for less work, less dirt, less expense, and More and Steadier Heat. Come and see them. Make all the comparisons you wish. Newports are equally efficient for steam, vapor, vapor-vacuum or hot water.

REPLACE YOUR OLD BOILER before the cold weather comes; be protected against higher coal prices. If you cannot call, write and we'll tell you where you can see a Newport near you. Write today.

To show the public how good hand built tires are made, we will actually manufacture EHMAN TIRES in our exhibit at the Ford Accessories Show, Spaces No. 234, 235, 184, 185. Every operation will be shown and explained in detail. There will also be a display of raw materials used, which will be in charge of our chief chemist. You will find all this very interesting.

Drivers Should Know How Their Tires Are Built

There is nothing whatever mysterious about EHMAN tires and tubes. No magic is claimed other than strict honesty in every manufacturing move made in the EHMAN factory—and lots of hard work.

The motoring public we believe has been fed up on high-sounding phrases and "patented processes" as applied to tires. Wear and then more wear is what car owners want, and that is just what is built into the EHMAN TIRE. We want you to see how we do it. The cost of these tires is on a par with other good tires and our customers report universal satisfaction.

EX-CZAR OF RUSSIA EXILED IN SIBERIA—The Russian revolutionists who overthrew the oppressive Romanoff dynasty gave the deposed czar and his family tit for tat by sending them into exile at Tobolsk, Siberia. The czar and his predecessors had caused thousands to be sent to Siberia for minor political offenses. Even in exile the ex-czar is closely guarded. Three armed guards who keep him under surveillance are shown stationed at a distance.

"Good By, Jim, Take Keer Yourse'f!"

Jim was going to war—the neighborhood didn't think much of him—but his father knew. And his father guessed the story to come. Yet these were all the words that came. Do you remember James Whitcomb Riley's story poem? That was in the Civil War. And today again, all over the land, fathers are saying to their sons, "Good by, Jim, take keer yourse'f."

Like all masters of literature, his people and his poems and his stories are for all time.

James Whitcomb RILEY

The great spirit has passed on. "There's another good pal gone over the border." The dearly beloved of all America's children and all America's grown folks who have stayed young, has passed away.

From the little child that wrote, "I felt sort of alone until I read your poems," to President Wilson, who says, "I render my tribute of affection and appreciation to him," this nation feels the great loss.

But it turns with even more eagerness to the stories and poems he left behind him. More eagerly than ever does the small boy read "The Old Swimmin' Hole"—more gladly do the mother and father read "That Old Sweetheart of Mine."

The quiet street in Indianapolis seems deserted and dead. Uncle Sam's mail service no longer has to bend beneath the burden of 10,000 letters going to that quiet house on the 7th of each October. James Whitcomb Riley has passed on, but his work is here for all his lovers.

Perhaps you think you "don't care for poetry"—yet you love James Whitcomb Riley. That's because his stories could only be told in verse—for he had a song in his heart—a song of all mankind.

Unlike all other poets, he dealt with stories of every day—things in all our lives. There is in all his work no bitter word. He is sweetness and light in these days of hatred and terror—a drink of fresh water to the thirsty and weary.

A Poor Boy of Indiana

He was a poor boy in Indiana—too full of life and genuis for schooling. He traveled with a circus, he worked on a railroad, on a steamship. He made his living in a thousand ways—until one day—an epoch-making day for this nation—he published a modest little poem in his home paper. Soon the world sat up and took notice—James Whitcomb Riley became as much a houshold word as Santa Claus.

The world knew his quality years ago. Longfellow, Lowell and Holmes bowed to his genius. Mark Twain loved his kindness and sincerity and admired his art, and William Dean Howells wonders "at the passion for the homely things of life," and George Ade says that "Riley is the only one who hobnobs with the LL.D. and the farm hand at the same moment."

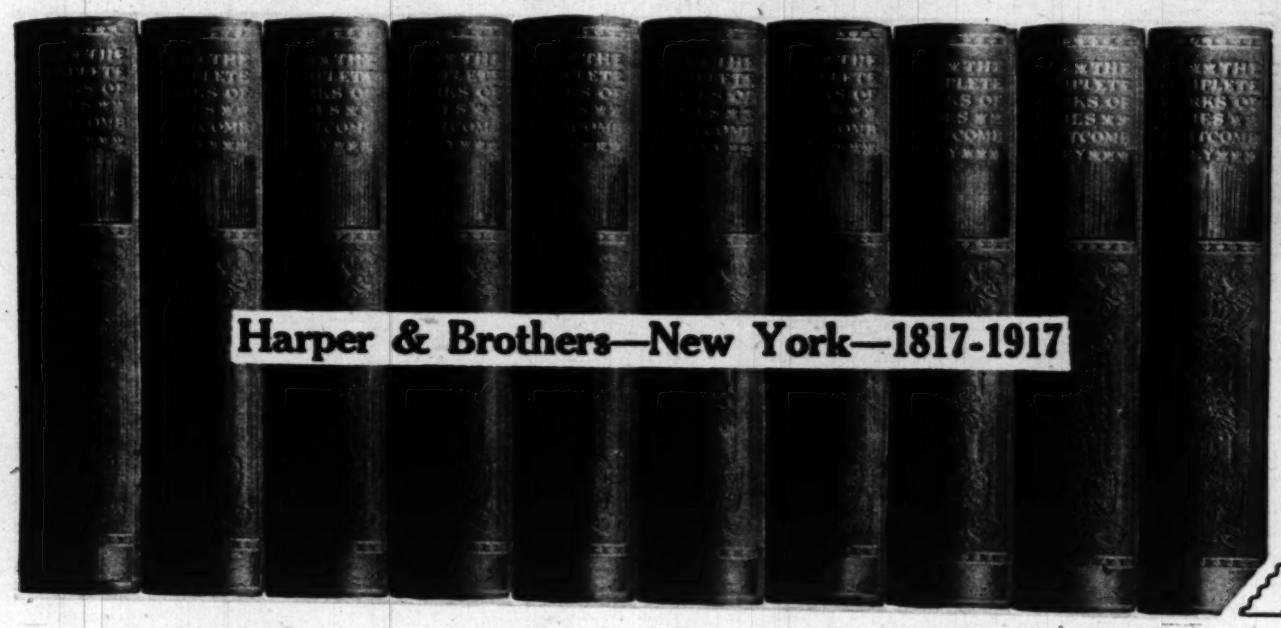
His Heirs Desire Only a Small Royalty

The heirs of James Whitcomb Riley came to us, as the publishers of Mark Twain, and said that they would be glad to reduce their royalty to a negligible amount, so that we could place the works of the People's Poet in the homes of all those who loved him—so we are able to make the books at a very low price, for the present—a price we can pass on to you.

We have planned a fitting form for these books—beautifully made—the easy-to-read, comfortable sort of books that James Whitcomb Riley would have liked.

"He was the poet of hope and cheer—the lover and friend of mankind." He is the only writer whose birthday has been made a state holiday. By the time you read this, Riley Day will be celebrated in Indiana. And Riley Day will be celebrated in your heart and your home if you send this coupon.

The generosity of the Riley heirs and the resources of Harper & Brothers give you a rare opportunity. Don't miss it. Send the coupon without money for your set on approval today.



Ch.Tr. 9-22-1.

HARPER & BROTHERS:

Please send me the complete works of James Whitcomb Riley, bound in rich cloth, stamped in gold, fully illustrated. I may keep the set for ten days for examination and return it to you, at your expense, if I do not want it. If I keep the books I will remit $1.50 a month for thirteen months.

JOE WELCH is considered by many to be one of the greatest of the Jewish character actors. "The Peddler" was a demonstration of his status as a screen performer.

RUTH CLIFFORD is one of Bluebird's be-curled darlings. She is a hard worker, whether "registering," riding, painting or reading. She started her screen career with the old Edison company.

ELSIE MACKAY, one of the latest of the stage folk to sidle screenward, has been signed up for three years by Commonwealth Pictures corporation. She is an Australian and has appeared in many first class productions, among which was "Grumpy," with Cyril Maude, in which she was the granddaughter.

ACQUAINTED ALREADY—Although the United States soldier has not been in France long enough to "parley-voo" glibly, he has found his deficiency in French no difficulty in the way of meeting French women, all of whom join in honoring and welcoming the American soldiers to France. This soldier is giving a pretty French peasant girl a ride on his horse at the American camp back of the French lines.

"WE'VE GOT THEM ON THE RUN, I TELL YOU!"—Or perhaps Gen. Haig's words weren't precisely those, but they must have been equally as optimistic and to the point in this animated conversation, in which he is telling Lloyd George about the defeat of the Germans in Flanders. In the picture, from left to right, are: Albert Thomas, French minister of munitions; Gen. Sir Douglas Haig, commander in chief of the British forces in France; Marshal Joffre, hero of the Marne, and David Lloyd George, premier of the British empire.

A FRENCH GAS ATTACK ALONG A WHOLE FIRST LINE TRENCH—This, one of the most interesting pictures received from the war fronts, besides depicting the sweep of gases directed at the enemy when the wind is favorable, shows clearly how a battle front is constructed. The gases are issuing from the front trench of the first line of trenches. (1) shows the communicating trenches; (2) shows the first reserve trench; (3) the emergency hospitals; (4) a tree lined roadway; (5) a reinforcement trench leading back of the lines and out of reach of direct fire; (6) a town razed to the ground by shell fire; (7) a roadway, probably well screened by painted hides to prevent supply columns traveling on it being seen by the enemy.

A GROUP OF TANKS ON THE FRENCH FRONT—These new and monstrous engines of war have come into general use by the French and English all along the western front, and they have proved a great factor in winning victories. They move up before an infantry charge, stride trenches, climb hillocks, and mow and crush down everything before them.

"KAMERAD!" "KAMERAD!" "MERCY, KAMERAD!"—The cry of surrender as the Germans, throwing aside their arms and holding up their hands, run toward their conquerors. This picture, snapped at dusk on a battlefield in Flanders, shows some Germans advancing across No Man's Land, asking for mercy.

[Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.]

ROUTING FRITZ OUT—After the capture of a trench it always falls to the lot of various hastily organized parties among the victors to go into the dugouts and rout out all of the enemy concealed therein. The picture shows a party of French soldiers advancing into a hole, with bayonets fixed, prepared to give the Germans a taste of cold steel if they do not come out peacefully.

A specialist has at last perfected a pure face powder that really stays on; that stays on until you wash it off. It does not contain white lead or starchy rice powder to make it sticky. This improved formula contains a medicinal powder doctors use to heal the skin. White lead poisons the skin and rice powder turns into a gluey paste that encourages enlarged pores, blackheads and rice powder pimples. In fact, this new powder helps to prevent and reduce enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. It is also astringent, discouraging flabbiness, crow's feet and wrinkles. To get this unusual powder, learn to pronounce the name correctly. It is called La-may (French, Poudre L'Ame). Because it is pure and because it stays on better than any other, it is already sold by thousands of dealers everywhere. There are two sizes. The large size is only fifty cents and the half size is twenty-five cents. THEY ALL LIKE OUR BOYS—American soldiers are meeting with a warm welcome in England and France. King George and others of the nobility go about fraternizing with the visitors every time a new contingent arrives. And the crowds fairly overwhelm the American boys with kindness. A photograph has caught here a bit of human interest, wherein a tiny London girl stood long in the streets shaking hands with the soldiers as they marched by.

THE FIRST ILLINOIS ENGINEERS IN LONDON—The regiment of Illinois engineers helped to make up a contingent which arrived in London in the middle of August on their way to France for construction work. As the American troops passed, preceded by the Stars and Stripes and the emblem of the engineers, King George and his mother, Queen Alexandra, and Field Marshal Sir John French, shown at the right foreground, stood at salute.

What is a woman's greatest charm?

A woman's greatest charm is not her beauty. It is not her complexion, or her eyes or the way she wears her hair. It is not her intellect or even her personality

A WOMAN'S greatest charm is her energy. Energy goes by many names:—it is health, vitality, magnetism, life. By whatever name you call it, Energy underlies all other charms.

Energy makes a woman attractive

The woman who conserves her energy is never out of sorts. Her conversation is animated. Her eyes are bright. When she walks, it is with easy grace. She radiates vitality. What she has to do, in her home, in her office, in her clubs, in society, she does thoroughly and well, without worry or fatigue.

Men admire her because she is never dull, never cross, never a tired-out bore. She accomplishes much more in life, is much more charming, and is happier than the woman who wastes her energy in many needless ways.

The woman who wastes her energy is seldom charming. Lack of energy means loss of beauty. Her eyes lack sparkle. Her conversation is dull. She is not attractive to other women or to men. People are not interested in her because she is not interesting.

A modern heroine's strenuous day

The day is past when a fiction heroine can be "sickly" and still be a heroine. The modern heroine's complexion is tanned by outdoor life. She can hike five miles, play a stiff game of tennis, do a hard day's shopping, and dance twenty dances in the evening without being overcome by fatigue.

Such a day of activity is impossible, however, for many modern women. Why?

How woman wastes her charms

The reason is that women waste their Energy. They are not guilty of any one big energy waste. But their supply of Energy is drained by a number of little taxes on their vitality which can be stopped.

In walking, for example, most women waste Energy. Walking is a splendid exercise. But no woman should walk in the city unless her feet are properly shod for the city streets.

A woman wastes valuable Energy by wearing leather heels.

What wallflowers lack

The popular woman has vivacity, personality, magnetism, charm—in short, Energy! You can't have energy in the evening if you pound it away all day on hard floors and pavements with hard leather and wooden heels. O'Sullivan's Heels save your energy.

Make shopping a real pleasure

If shopping wears you out, blame your leather heels. Wear O'Sullivan's Heels, and know what it is to shop without fatigue.

When HE comes home

Are you too tired to brighten his evening after his work? Household duties and the children wear you out. You waste energy by clattering about on hard leather or wooden heels. Stop this useless drain on your energy by wearing O'Sullivan's Heels.

Leather and wooden heels are totally unsuited for city pavements because they are so hard.

Every day the average woman takes 8,000 steps. That means 8,000 shocks when the hard heels hit hard sidewalks and floors. Each shock jars just a little Energy out of her system. These little energy wastes multiplied by 8,000 mean a large drain on the woman's vitality. Every time you bring your leather shod foot down, you are wasting some of your greatest charm!

Stopping the energy wastes

Every woman can stop this energy waste by wearing O'Sullivan's Heels. They are little individual shock absorbers. They absorb these 8,000 daily shocks. They take the strain off your spine.

The woman who wears O'Sullivan's Heels walks with greater ease and grace than the one who clatters along on hard, nail-studded heels. The energy thus saved is added to her charm.

You should have O'Sullivan's Heels put on your shoes at once—if you want to conserve your Energy. They are not only comfortable—they are fashionable. You'll see many worn on Fifth Avenue any afternoon. One out of every four New Yorkers wears them. You'll notice the wearers have a more springy, energetic step than those who wear leather heels.

Not only do their energy-saving advantages recommend them to many women, but they are also far more economical than leather heels. O'Sullivan's Heels last twice as long as leather heels—and they keep your shoes in shape better, and make them last longer.

The best heels for city wear

The heels best suited to modern hard pavements and floors are O'Sullivan's Heels.

They are guaranteed to outlast any other heels. They will last three times as long as leather heels and will give uniformly satisfactory service to the very last.

Because of our special process, O'Sullivan's Heels combine the greatest durability with the greatest resiliency. They are made of the perfect heel material.

Buy your new shoes O'Sullivanized. Good dealers sell the latest style shoes with O'Sullivan's Heels already attached. Have O'Sullivan's put on all your shoes at once. Every day you delay putting on O'Sullivan's Heels, you are wasting your most valuable asset—Energy.

In black, white or tan; for men, women and children. Insist on O'Sullivan's. Avoid the disappointment of substitutes.

The walk women want

You want to walk with buoyancy and grace. Save your energy if you can. O'Sullivan's Heels save energy and give your walk the desired easy grace.

THE FINDING OF MOSES By Veronese

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

"The Finding of Moses," by Paolo Veronese. Imperial Gallery, Petrograd. 6x9 feet
(Paolo Cagliari, 1528-1588.)

PAOLO VERONESE was a true Venetian, and it was the Venice of his time with all its magnificence that Veronese everywhere painted. According to Ruskin, he ranks in the forefront of the great colorists, with his pictures, like the rose, glowing with colors in the shadows and rising into paler and more delicate hues in the light.

His genius lay in a certain joyous grasp of the realities of the world, and he was probably the first artist to elevate pageantry to the height of serious art and to idealize prosaic splendors. He came on the crest of the renaissance wave, when art, risen to its pinnacle, gleamed in the dangerous glory preceding its fall. Those who came after Veronese brought about the decadence by striving to imitate his splendors and sinking into extravagance.

In this "Finding of Moses" he has treated the subject with the disregard of historical exactitude which marks the majority of his canvases. He gives the scene an Italian setting, clothes the principal characters in Venetian costumes, and then introduces various accessories.

The daughter of Pharaoh, superb in the physical voluptuousness Veronese endows his women with, stands under a group of trees, surrounded by attendants. One of them is handing her the child which has just been discovered in the Nile. In the distance the sister of Moses is seen, who, who we are told, "stood afar off to witness what would be done to him," and then, at the command of Pharaoh's daughter to get a nurse, runs to call the child's mother to come and care for him.

The creative power of this man Veronese was seemingly inexhaustible, and, painting as he did with such marvelous facility, he reveled in glorious exuberance. His favorite domain was noonday sunlight gleaming on sumptuous dresses and Palladian architecture, and in his pictures armor and shot silks, brocaded canopies and scepters and crowns, glitter in the sun.

His "Marriage of Cana," in the Louvre, Paris, which is a blaze of worldly pomp and magnificence, is one of his most celebrated pieces. It is said by some to be of all the paintings in the world the one "making the greatest impression on the greatest number of people."

In the National gallery, London, are ten paintings by him, among them his "Adoration of the Magi" and his "Coronation of St. Nicholas."

He lies buried in the church of San Sebastiano, Venice, a fit resting place for him whose genius decorated the walls of that church with such works of beauty.

Another famous painting will be reproduced next Sunday.

A MATTER of a SMILE

By H. R. R. Hertzberg

Envy Brought Hate; Hate Sought Revenge; Revenge Wrought Tragedy.

("———a wreck absolutely, body and heart, mind and soul.)

THORNLEIGH had never liked Hunter Strangeways, it is true. A man who is physically short, and ungainly, and quite commonplace, does not, as a general thing, look with friendly admiration on the modern, very much alive counterpart of a strikingly tall and handsome viking. Also, a man, whose intelligence, however keen, happens to be of the exclusively utilitarian sort, confined within the boundaries of money making materialism, is not excessively likely to sympathize with a "dreamer," an "impractical idealist," a student, and an explorer, to whom "the solid things of life"—that is, life's financial aspects—mean next to nothing whatever.

And, finally, a man whom nature has meant and made to be the lover of only one woman (so that he is capable of no more than a single great case of affection, devotion, and passion—all the greater, of course, for its singleness—during his lifetime), undoubtedly has a kind of right not to lavish a wealth of glowing friendship on the conqueror who, in unsuspecting ignorance of himself and his heart's ambition, has wooed and won that only woman.

For all of which not altogether unreasonable reasons, Thornleigh had never liked Hunter Strangeways.

In fact, he had done his best to dismiss him from his mind when he had heard of his engagement to Irene, though his best had not spelled success. For instance, unlike almost everybody else who reads at all, he had refused to read the book that made Strangeways famous. This "With the Huallpahuitchis," was an account of the author's eight years of life amidst an Indian tribe of Peru, which practiced a civilization—based on that of the historic Incas—of a rare, high, philosophical order. And he had constantly managed to change the conversation whenever the name of Strangeways had put in an appearance.

On the other hand, neither had he hated Strangeways, at first. Not even when he learned of the engagement, not even when he read of the marriage. His hate—from the moment of its birth full grown, unrelenting, and unbounded—was not born until the day of Irene's burial, ten or eleven months after the day of her wedding.

On that occasion Thornleigh had visited the Strangeways home. He could not overcome his desire to behold once more the white, Madonna-like beauty of the only woman.

As he stood by the coffin, his love for her rose to its purest, its best. It was worship; it was, strangely enough, a serene consciousness of the goodness, the whiteness of soul, which she embodied, rather than bitterness, rebellion, because of her death. Had he left without seeing Strangeways, Thornleigh would, one may believe, have been a finer, nobler man on the strength of that last sight of Irene.

But he did see Strangeways when he compelled his eyes to part from the only woman. He saw Strangeways, her husband, her widower now, the person who had been wondrously privileged to call the one woman his own, who had, therefore, lost the most precious gift of God in all the world, who—Thornleigh was for an instant sublimely unselfish enough to mourn for the other man!—should consequently be burdened with a load of immeasurable sorrow. Strangeways was standing near him, Thornleigh gathered with his first vague upward glance. Thornleigh began to force his voice into a formulation of a phrase of condolence. However, the phrase remained unspoken. For no sooner had Thornleigh a full, clear view of Strangeways' face than he saw that Strangeways was smiling.

No, it was not a hysterical distortion of the lips, not a half-crazy baring of the teeth, not a rictus. It was a smile. By no means a pleasant, or gay, or beaming, or happy, or ecstatic smile, indeed. But a smile nevertheless. A smile free from any taint of insanity, a real smile.

At once the hate took possession of Thornleigh, seized every bit of him. It was blazing fury for a little while—he almost threw himself upon Strangeways to throttle him. Then, swiftly, it turned into something like venomous ice. He left the room and the house without a word.

Alone in his apartment, Thornleigh sat motionless. The hate did not grow—it couldn't, because it already filled all of the man's heart and mind—but it conceived, developed, determined on, an unchangeable, unswerving purpose. Revenge—as terrible and as complete as human ingenuity could make it. On Strangeways, of course, on the monster who smiled. And for . . . . . Thornleigh thought it was for her sake, the only woman's revenge for the suffering which he now believed such a fiend must perforce have inflicted on such an angel. But much more probably it was on his own personal account that he craved the revenge. Since it is usually vanity, not pure unselfish indignation, that causes a lover to resent an insult to his beloved, and since the smile had robbed his nature of the nobility which was his for a space just before he saw the smile. At any rate, revenge should henceforward be the object of his life, of all his energies. He would ruin Strangeways, ruin him in every way, financially and physically, heart, and soul, and talent.

Let a man of undivided iron will, of shrewdness, and of means, choose to act the rôle of Nemesis constantly and unrelentingly, and he is practically sure to transform his purpose into accomplishment. Thornleigh played the part without a day's rest for nearly five years. Like one of those criminal monomaniacs who in the so-called dark ages were thought to be inspired and directed by the devil himself, he used every imaginable and realizable method to bring about his end. No device was too base, no act was too cruel.

Through him—unseen, unconsidered—Strangeways was reduced to poverty. He it was—in the shapes of a number of hirelings—who used a weakness which too often is the flaw in the character of gifted men to make a drunkard of the hated one. Half a dozen women served to debauch Strangeways more and more; they were Thornleigh's tools, either directly or unconsciously, at second hand. The last of these creatures—a "snow bird" herself—taught the ever-hunted Hunter the suicidal delights of feeding on the "snow" that is cocaine. The avenger's agents—they cost him a fortune in wages and expense accounts—kept him thoroughly informed concerning Strangeways' descent.

Finally, not quite five years after the day of the smile, there came to Thornleigh the news of Strangeways' death. Of consumption, partly due to —and certainly whipped into a gallop by—the "coke." In the cross between a hovel and a dive belonging to the very soiled "snow bird." As a wreck absolute, body and heart, mind and soul.

Thornleigh's blood went hot with wild, almost delirious joy. He laughed aloud and then chuckled feverish chuckles, to himself. "A case for celebration," he decided. A dinner at the club—whose chef was an artist—with enough of good wine and a couple of guests, that was the proper thing. Yes, a couple of guests to speak to . . . of Strangeways . . . the better to savor his revenge.

At the club he broached his topic while the cocktails were being served. Strangeways' decline and fall and death were related with details and with exultation in the narrator's eyes and voice.

"By heaven!" exclaimed the younger of his two guests. "You seem pleased, actually pleased!"

"Perhaps I am," said Thornleigh. "The fellow was vicious through and through. A monster."

"A monster? One of the finest, biggest hearted men I ever knew! What the devil do you mean?"

Then Thornleigh told of the smile.

His guest heard but was not silenced.

"Great God!" said he. "And you sat in judgment and condemned Hunter Strangeways just because of that smile? Man, have you never read Strangeway's great book? 'With the Huallpahuitchis'?"

"No," Thornleigh admitted. "But——"

"What has the book to do with that smile? A whole lot. It explains it. Like this: Hunter lived among those Indians, as one of them, eight years. As one of 'em. And they're a tribe of philosophers, stoics, who glory in trouble, and suffering, and sorrow. So much so, that it is their law of laws, their test of decency, to smile—to smile their best steadfastly—in all pain, all affliction!"

Mechanically, Thornleigh drank his cocktail at a gulp. It tasted exceedingly bitter. But that may not have been the cocktail's fault.

The Tragedy of Type

by Natalie Gibbs Taylor

People Just Wouldn't Take Her as An Intellectual.

PLEASE don't take the title of this story seriously. I don't. But there was a time when I did. It was to be the title of my dream book, my life story, the bitter outpouring of my revolt against the shell my soul was housed in, my own cute curly headed self. It was to be the epic of my struggle for recognition as an intellect; it was to be——

I find this extract in my diary:

"Oct. 15—The girls have been perfectly wonderful to me all day because I got the part of Phyllis in the tryouts for the dramatic club play. I suppose I ought to be glad. It's a good part, and I love to be in plays—but O, I hate the Phyllis type—that cute, feather headed doll type—and I hate those Phyllis kind of parts—those prancing, rollicking, giggly parts—I hate them! And the ironic tragedy of it all is that they tell me I am 'just the type'—as if I wasn't meant for better things than swinging my legs from the arms of chairs, giggling meaningiessly, and tossing my head so that the little curls should bob around my ears! O, hang my type! Why can't I look like one of those big, fine characters—women who sacrifice things for a great love or high principles. I'd get out of the play if it wasn't for what the girls of the house would think about it. Well, here goes for the glory of the house——"

My diary is full of passages like that. All through college when I aspired to be the soulful heroine I was given the part of the lisping ingenue. While I dreamed of the part of Gina in Ibsen's "The Wild Duck" I was given the irresistable twin in Shaw's "You Never Can Tell." Perhaps I shouldn't have minded this if I had only been allowed to be the "college woman" type in real life. But no; here I was forever the object of such remarks as: "You do wear the high waisted effect so adorably" and "If you'd only henna that wonderful hair of yours just a trifle you'd be a perfect little Billie Burke type, dear." It was always "You sweet child" or "You dear little thing."

And my book was to be the song of my soul agony, the tale of the misery into which the conflict of my outward appearance and my inward aspirations had plunged me. And, of course, as a literary achievement it was to mark my entrance into the realm of worthwhile things. And, incidentally, it would bring startlingly to the attention of my friends the intellect that they had so far ignored.

This book I was going to begin as soon as I had finished college—after a vacation, of course.

Which arrangement would have been all right if I hadn't met Dan during that vacation.

It might have been different if the first time I met him hadn't been at a dance. At dances I am always the despised Phyllis type. You see, I am not a hypocrite. If I feel frivolous enough to go to dances I don't believe in soothing my conscience by keeping up a pretense at serious mindedness. Of course there are people who can't give up being serious minded for a minute yet will not sacrifice dancing at the altar of highbrowness. So they compromise by coming to dances and appease their consciences by discoursing, between numbers, on such topics as "The Anthropoid Theory of Vertebrate Ancestry," "Government Ownership of Public Utilities," or "Absolutism versus Pragmatism." I wouldn't. Although I modestly admit that at times I can grow wildly partisan and palpitate with emotion on the above named topics, yet when I am with others on pleasure bound I coldly stifle my intellect and talk about hop steps and weather and makeup and the dancing floor and the orchestra and the frappé—which, for a Phyllis, is quite enough.

But it makes things rather tragic if on such an occasion you meet the only man you can ever love and start right out by making the wrong impression on him. Immediately after I had exhausted my intermission repertoire on Dan I began to feel sorry that I had not been one of those conscientious compromisers. You see, Dan has such a sympathetic way of listening even to inane nothings that I wished I had given him a chance to play up to something worth while. When you talk to him his fine blue eyes light up or he looks at you and smiles quickly.

And then he is so competent! When you're with him you wouldn't think of questioning any of his decisions.

It was just at the end of the intermission before the last dance, when I was beginning to feel sorry that I had wasted those precious few moments in conversational froth. The music struck up.

I looked at Dan resignedly. "I suppose we had better go in and find the others," I said.

"I'd rather stay here," he said. "Wouldn't you?"

Now, I love dancing. But at that moment the deep club veranda was so inviting and so sheltered that I couldn't bear to go in.

"I don't want to dance this one at all," I said, looking at him as if for help.

"Then we'll just stay here," he said protectingly. Then, as an afterthought, "They won't find us."

For a while neither of us spoke. Of course I realize that I might have taken the opportunity to show him how modern and worthwhile my ideas really were—but somehow it wasn't just the moment for Socialism. The pale rays of the moon filtered in through the young vine leaves that hid the veranda.

Finally I had a twinge of conscience.

"Do you realize," I said to Dan, "that this is the last dance?"

"Why, that's all right," he said, as if answering my thought, "since you didn't want to dance it."

He has a way of saying things so that they sound positively conclusive.

But still I was a little doubtful.

"I—I came with some one," I demurred.

"Why, so did I, now that I think of it," he said, as if the fact struck him for the first time. "Well, then, we'll have to go in and I'll apologize. If it were only the man you came with, why, you could ditch him, but a girl—I'll have to see her back."

The positive egotism of the man! Simply assuming right off that I would have been willing to "ditch" the other man on a five minute acquaintance with himself!

But it was with a kind of regret that I rose from my deep, comfortable chair.

"When can I see you again?" he said as we paused in the door of the ballroom. Then, without waiting for me to answer, he continued, "Tomorrow morning I'll call for you in my car and we'll decide then what to do."

That was a little too much assurance, I decided. "Why, I—I had an appointment," I said in what was meant to be a stern tone.

"O, well," he laughed back at me, "people don't keep them very carefully here!"

The last dance was just over, and as he handed me back to my partner with apologies he said to me, "Tomorrow morning, then; don't forget." And then, after his "goodby," he looked back over his shoulder and called, "You live over at the Crossing, don't you?"

All of which wasn't very considerate of me, seeing that my escort stood right there. So I nodded coldly and turned away.

But I couldn't help remembering his flashing parting smile and anticipated with much satisfaction our appointment for the morrow. Because I did like him, and I had spoken to him at the most for ten minues—so it simplified things to have the knowledge that that ten minutes had made its impression. But it was an impression that I decided our next meeting must eradicate. Of course I would be satisfied to have him keep on liking me, as he evidently did then, but I must never appear to him again as one of these butterfly types that people said I could act so well.

The next morning I dressed in a linen plaited-front shirtwaist, a dark skirt, and sensible walking shoes. A severe hairdress, with my fluffy hair brushed back as tightly as it would go, completed my makeup. It was with pleasure and with some trepidation that I thought of the contrast I made to the girl of the night before—plaited linen and black oxfords as against tulle and silver slippers laced over the instep, not forgetting my fluffy hairdress. The pleasure in my contemplation was due to the fact that now I looked as my ideal woman was supposed to look, or as near my ideal as I possibly could look. The trepidation was because I liked Dan a lot already and because—well, because I was afraid, that's all.

But then, I argued, if he was going to like me he might as well like me as myself—and I never admitted that Phyllis is myself. It's what people call me since I've had the part, because they think the name fits me better than my own—but as for myself, why, I'd rather be plain Mary, and that's what I am.

I was on the porch when Dan's racer came around the curve. I looked as unconscious as I possibly could and tried to concentrate very hard on the war book in my hand. It was the author's description of the first time that fear had come to him in the trenches, and in my state of mind it was hardly the thing I would have chosen to concentrate on.

To tell the truth, he was rather surprised. If I had lapsed back into my school vernacular I would have said staggered. Of course that didn't make me feel any more comfortable, but I knew that I looked well despite the severe style. (I had taken care to put on some rouge that morning, because stiff white linen absolutely demands a lot of color.)

He was too well bred to show his surprise long. Also, he had too much humor.

"Well," he said, after he had been seated, "I couldn't decide coming over whether it was to be golf or just a ride this morning. Now that I'm here, with all deference to your appearance, it looks as if it's going to be school——"

"No slurs on the appearance of the teacher," I interrupted severely.

"Well, if to say you look like a schoolmarm is a slur, why——"

"I don't consider it a slur," I said, speaking primly and choosing my words, "unless it is said in a derogatory tone of voice. To look like some one with a definite vocation is a compliment. Because, although I haven't chosen it yet, I mean to have a serious profession——"

"And, in order to steel yourself for it, you have to dress the part!"

"How unfair!" I exclaimed. "That's just one small part of the whole thing——"

"O, no; you'll notice that's the biggest part of it to a woman. A man will throw himself into a vocation without thinking of the clothes that go with it, but a woman—— Why, let a girl have a little ability for writing verse or pretty fiction and, instead of sitting down to her typewriter when she feels like writing, as a man would, she must get into her 'little writing smock' that she keeps for the purpose. O, don't laugh; I know a girl who does it. Why, I know a woman who professes to be absorbed in settlement work. She has a particular suit that she wears, as she expresses it, 'to go slumming in,' and she described it to me as 'black velvet, subdued but dignified.' Well, when she's in it, instead of living up to the dignity of her work, she lives up to the dignity of her suit!"

I was rather surprised at this outburst from Dan, but I was not going to ignore the opening that it gave me to express my views on women and vocations, on organized charity, on—O, it was a fine chance to show him the depth of my serious inclinations.

"And just because you know these few silly people," I began, "you would condemn the aspirations of all women. Just because you know that one shallow specimen you would condemn women in organized charity?"

I confess I didn't give him a chance to say a single word. With a cold and truly didactic severity I outlined to him my views on women, on careers, on charity, on woman's suffrage. I assailed his views, I scorned them, I condemned them——

When I was done I thought with a glow of triumph that he would feel completely extinguished. I turned to him, I had almost forgotten him in my enthusiastic tirade, to find him frankly amused and smiling.

"Phyllis," he said——

"My name is Mary," I frigidly interrupted.

"Funny, I heard them calling you Phyllis last night, I thought. Anyway, I like 'Phyllis' better. You know what you remind me of?"

I coldly looked the question.

"I suppose you remember enough of your physiography to know what 'highs' and 'lows' are. I remember, in cramming for my examination, I learned a terse definition: 'Highs—warm and clear. Lows—drop in temperature and rain.'"

"And what has that to do with me?"

"A barometer is about the only thing one could measure your temperament with. I like your 'highs,' but thank goodness when the drop in temperature comes you're not the rainy kind."

I couldn't help laughing. "O, I didn't mean to be so frigid," I said. "But I was so anxious to vindicate myself and all other women of the charge of superficiality. I just hate those shallow creatures, even the type I am sometimes, the type I was last night——." This last was said rather falteringly, but he was looking at me with that sympathetic smile of his, so I found myself rushing on—"I always wanted to be a woman."

"The only way to do that is by being womanly."

"But you don't consider Phyllis——"

"I consider Phyllis as being everything that is desirable," he said, as if that ended it all.

As I said before, everything he says has a sort of an indisputable finality.

It was Phyllis that saw him again that night, Phyllis that went riding with him in the following weeks, and golfing and swimming and walking. There was never a mention between us of my dream ideal, and if I thought any more of my book; it was sometimes with a faint sadness that I could no longer see my whole life in its light, that existence was no longer to me one long revolt against the girl that I looked like and didn't want to be. Sometimes, because the dreams of my book had been very dear to me, I went over my old arguments, my hatred of the doll woman; I even read my diary, which was full of those bitter denunciations of type and the shallowness of people who expected you to live up to it, but it was always with a growing wonder that I read those passionate outbursts, and with a bit of resentment against the youthful dogmatism of it. The Phyllis type was just as full of sympathy, just as unselfish as her more dignified sisters. What if she did substitute warmth for frigidity, a bubbling mirth for dignity, she was just as desirable. Dan had called her everything that was desirable!

But somehow I was sorry for the shadow of that book that had never been written.

There was just one occasion when I felt a ghost of that old revolt. We had been running down a hill, and when we sat down to rest in the shade of a tree Dan said, looking at me: "Do you know what you are. A Dutch doll. A blue eyed Dutch doll!"

I was really angry. "There are thousands of creatures whom you might call that," I said. "Great thanks to you for your opinion!"

But it seemed that I only amused him. Seeing the indulgent look in his eyes, I felt keenly the tragedy of type. Because I had become established as Phyllis to him, nothing that I said would be taken seriously. It was the hurt womanly pride in me that spoke—I stormed about the respect due to intelligence, I raged about recognition of intellect, I lost sight of the issue that had started me, and ranted on every subject that had the least possible connection with scoffing men, and I ended with an absolute denunciation of men in general.

And when I was done Dan said, "You pretty little fluff, do you know I'm crazy about you?"

And before I knew it he had kissed me.

It was strange that I didn't resent it—especially the epithet. When I finally looked up he said in that humorous, yet self-confident way of his, "I'm a gentleman—of course we're engaged."

Without even asking me!

"I can't leave the girl alone—in Shanghai," protested the thin woman.

"But she'll be right here in a hotel full of white folks," insisted the stout man. As he spoke his eyes wandered despairingly to the heap of luggage on which a Chinese porter was pasting Astor house labels. "Bob's certain to get here before long."

All three—the fat man, the stout woman, and the thin woman—stood for a moment in the silence of perplexity. Outside, the early October twilight was settling over the straggling polyglot city that likes to term itself "the Paris of the East." Within, in the roomy "lounge" that adjoined the hotel office, there were lights, and tourists sipping tea, and the chatter of many tongues. Close at hand, seated alone by a wicker table, idly fingering a cold teacup, was a girl—an extremely pretty girl, obviously American, with a jaunty traveling turban set down on her fluffy brown hair, with a firmly pointed chin, a straight and rather long nose, clear skin that had been slightly tanned by the winds of the Pacific, and wide, demure hazel eyes that appeared to be gazing out at the clamorous line of rickshaw coolies in the shadowy street. By not so much as the twitch of a muscle did her fresh young face betray that she was listening intently to the conversation of the trio.

"But, Rufus dear"—it was the stout woman—"you don't seem to understand. It is nearly 6 now. Unless Lieut. Carver comes soon it will be too late to get Edith back to the ship for dinner. Her aunt and uncle will be worried to death." She paused for emphasis. "We assumed some responsibility when we brought her ashore today. And you don't leave nice young girls like her unprotected on the China coast. You know well enough the dreadful code of this part of the world."

The thin woman shuddered. "Between now and 8 anything might happen!"

The fat man sighed. "Look here," he said, "this is an emergency. And I can't see but what she's got to do her part in it. I must straighten out the tangle with the Hankow line people, or we simply can't leave tonight. You two must collect the things you've bought before the shops close or lose 'em. I certainly can't let either of you knock around Shanghai alone after dark; and if you take her with you she'll miss Bob when he comes. No, it will be best for her to sit quietly here. Don't tell me that an American girl who's 20 if she's a minute can't take care of herself in a pinch!"

"You might explain it to the clerk, Rufus . . ."

The fat man glanced at the desk and pursed his lips. Probably the one person on earth least able to comprehend the Occidental motive in such an explanation would be a Malay hotel clerk in Shanghai.

"No," he said, decisively, "nothing like that. She can read a magazine or something. And if Bob should fall down altogether she could dine with us at 8—or whenever we get back—and I'll take her back to the ship myself. There's a launch out at 9:30, and our Hankow boat doesn't leave until midnight."

Miss Edith Austin, when the matter was put before her, assured them that it didn't matter in the least. She even produced a smile—a smile that faded before they were out of the room. Then she went to the window and with wistful eyes watched them ride off into the mystery laden dusk of Shanghai.

A few moments later she became aware that a certain foreigner, who had for an hour been hovering near, had come quietly to her side—a young man, who wore good clothes over a compact, athletic figure; a man with bold, attractive eyes, light waxed mustache, and on his alert young face the first indescribable marks of dissipation. She had thought him German, but his accent and his odd use of idiom, when he spoke, were more suggestive of Parisian backgrounds. She wondered, with a slight quickening of the pulse, whether he were one of the cosmopolitan adventurers about whom center so many travelers' tales of the coast.

"Pardon, mademoiselle," he said, in a soft voice, "but perhaps, if you are waiting, you would read my magazine."

"Thank you—no," she replied, facing him. It was amusing to see him hesitate, even flush a little, under her direct gaze. "He isn't used to American girls," she thought. She knew nothing of the horrible connotation that has grown at Shanghai about that phrase, "American girl."

"Perhaps it is that I intrude," he managed to say.

"Yes," she replied, calmly, "you do."

Well, that little episode was over. She was almost sorry. The remark of the thin Miss Oldham came suddenly into her thoughts: "Between now and 8 anything might happen!" If only something would happen!

For the thousandth time in her unruffled young life she fell to resenting her sex. "They pass me around," she mused, "wrap me up and lay me aside, as if I were a cloisonne vase or a—a jade teapot."

Suddenly her chin came up—a touch of color glowed through the transparent brown of her cheeks—her eyes stared at the swinging red and yellow lanterns on the rickshaws. The Oldhams would not be returning for an hour or so; Bob would be even later; there was no one. . . . She held her breath. In her eyes was the fire that passes only when youth passes.

Resuming her habitual girlish composure, she calmly buttoned her gloves, took her wristbag from the table—on which (she noted with some amusement) the adventurer person had left his now useless magazine—walked through the office to the street, stepped into the first rickshaw that offered, tucked the robe about herself, and waved a vague hand. "The Bund," she said.

And as it did not occur to her to look around, she failed to observe that an athletic appearing young foreigner with waxed mustache and bold, admiring eyes followed in another rickshaw not twenty yards behind.

She settled back comfortably, with an outward complacency that belied the turbulence within. Her pulse was beating high. "Just to the end of the Bund and back," ran her thoughts; "just to the end of the Bund."

On and on they went. At a bumpy little stone bridge the coolies pulled up and looked around inquiringly. She waved him on. "Just a little farther," she thought. The park ended here, and between the pavement and the river stood a row of warehouses. Beyond them she caught glimpses of a big river steamer with lights shining from a hundred windows. The coolie turned again; again she waved forward. They were past the stone buildings now, past the warehouses. They had left behind them the absurdly European Bund; they were in another land.

There were no motor cars here, and only a few rickshaws and carriages. The air was filled with the chatter and laughter of the most talkative race in the world. And it all smelled—a strange blend of odors that is the smell of the east.

This, surely, was China. This was the mysterious land of a thousand enchantments. She felt rather than saw that groups of the yellow men were staring at her, and her nerve tips tingled with the sheer excitement of it. Of course, now that the experience was becoming really interesting, it was time to turn back; and she suppressed a sigh as she called to the coolie.

A little way behind her, above the casual hubbub of the street, sounded a new noise—a shouting, a scream or two, loud laughter, and snatches of song. She called again to the coolie, and turned in sudden alarm.

A crowd of sailors had poured out from one of the low buildings and taken possession of the street. A brief glance was enough to assure even an extremely inexperienced young American girl that they were very drunk and in a distinctly riotous mood. At the moment they were amusing themselves by upsetting the carts and stands of the food venders and pelting one another and the bystanders with fruit and cakes. One was singing in a frenzied manner and beating time with a bottle. Three others had advanced close to her rickshaw and, for some reason of their own, were savagely thrashing a yellow man.

Edith felt herself becoming cold and faint. Looking hurriedly about, she saw that another rickshaw was drawing near through the crowd. Its occupant was a man who lifted his hat and bowed ceremoniously. She peered eagerly at him through the uncertain light, then her heart sank; it was the young foreigner who had offered her the magazine. He was smiling now in a way that was perhaps meant to be reassuring, but that in fact was subtly alarming, and was bobbing his head toward the brawling sailors as if in emphasis of her need of him.

Somehow she must get back to the Bund. Her frightened eyes sought an opening through the surging crowd that nearly filled the street. There was a clear space close to the farther curb. She urged her coolie toward it. He hesitated.

The young foreigner stepped down from his rickshaw and made his way to her side. "Pardon, Miss," he said, "but not that way. If you will permit, I will show you how to get around by another street."

She shook her head.

"Go there!" she called again to the coolie.

The barelegged Oriental wavered, glanced about, then wheeled and made an effort to obey her. But the opening she had indicated was suddenly closed by a tall sailor with a flushed face and a drunken light in his eye. His white cotton cap was pushed far back on his head, disclosing a scar that ran from his right temple nearly up to the middle of his forehead. He laughed insolently at her; then turned to shout at his companions—and she saw that his ear was a filled-out solid thing like a small pincushion on the side of his head. His nose was crooked and flattened. His lips were thick and shapeless above a heavy chin.

The coolie had stopped again, and she was calling to him to go on. Suddenly the big sailor with the scar and the pincushion ears came swiftly forward, gripped him by the shoulders and swinging his feet clear of the ground, threw him sprawling into a group of Chinese who were timidly gathering the contents of a demolished cake booth. Then the big sailor stepped in between the shafts of the ricksaw and made a speech in his booming voice, bowing extravagantly before her and gesturing with a primitive sort of grace. The others closed in about them, cheering and waving their caps and the bits of loot they had picked up. One grimacing little man brandished a cloisonne opium pipe so close that she had to draw her head back.

A young man with athletic shoulders and waxed mustaches was elbowing through the crowd. He reached a wheel of the rickshaw, gripped it with one hand, and, with an astonishingly quick and powerful thrust and swing of the other arm, swept the crowded sailors back. Then he came leaping over the step of the vehicle in a rush so sudden and so determined that the big sailor simply gave way before it. There was the sound of quick, clean blows driven straight to their mark, and the sailor fell backward over the shafts. The Parisian was after him and on him like a bulldog.

"Quick, miss," he was shouting, without for an instant turning his head. "Your coolie—try to get away!"

She looked helplessly about. The crowd had disappeared. All around the rickshaw the sailors were pressing, struggling to get at the fighters. Certainly it was better to stay where she was than to step down into that little riot. Here was a situation indeed, with which she could not pretend to cope. It had passed far beyond her experience and capacity, and was now developing much more rapidly than she could think. She felt a perverse impulse to laugh. Surely it was not so, this extraordinary bit of melodrama. Such things do not happen. She passed her hand slowly across her eyes.

In some way the fight was stopped, and there was an argument in which every one appeared to be talking at the top of his lungs. The Parisian was gesturing vehemently; the sailors were jeering at him and waving their loot in his face. All was confusion. It made her head ache.

The Parisian appeared close at her side, talking rapidly in English. She caught a phrase here and there, looking the while at a bruise under his eye from which a little blood was trickling slowly down upon his cheek.

". . . If you had been with me . . . They know you were alone . . . the big man says it is that you will dine with him . . . spend all his pay . . . I cannot make them understand—it is no use while they are drunk . . . it is as I have said to you—no good woman is alone at night here in Frenchtown—they think it is I who seek you for myself . . . it is that we fight, the large sailor and I. If I win it will be permitted that I take you—that you dine with me . . ."

Then his face expanded in an almost boyish smile. "It is not, I think, so serious," he added, gently. "But it is that I simply cannot take you away now. They will not understand. They will not permit. It will not be so bad. You will see that they, though so drunk, are what you of America call the good sport."

With that same queer sense of unreality she sat passively while a dozen hands seized the rickshaw and ran with it a little way along the street. Her Parisian handed her out. she could feel him close at her side, gripping her arm and fending off the crowding sailors as they crossed the sidewalk and entered one of the low buildings. She was hurried down a long passage and into a large, low ceiled room, a dimly lighted room that was hazy with smoke and close with an odd choking odor.

Along the walls of the room and grouped about the pillars in the center were couches. On many of these lay men, Chinese and white, sunk in slumber or propped on an elbow puttering over little lamps with steel instruments like knitting needles. She saw one man raise what she knew to be an opium pipe and with the knitting needle work up a soft brown pellet on the flat surface of his pipe bowl.

The sailors were routing the smokers from the central couches and clearing the floor. From somewhere appeared ropes that were run rapidly around the four central pillars and made fast, forming a roped in square. Into this arena was tossed a cluster of thin brown boxing gloves.

The Parisian was speaking into her ear—

"It is a famous place for the fights of sailors, miss. Each ship, you will know, has its champions. It will not, perhaps, be easy for me, but I will win. Indeed I must. This man is a heavyweight—a fighter of experience; he has the bearing and the—what do you say?—the cauliflower ear. I am but a middleweight. I must give him twenty, thirty, pounds. but he is drunk. that is it, he is drunk. I am not in condition. It is so, here at Shanghai. One is not careful. But"—his quick, eager talk was beginning to reach her consciousness and find a response there—"but, miss, though but an amateur I am, I may say, truly expert at the box. I think—" his eye roved across the ring and slowly measured his adversary, and a touch of vanity came into his voice and manner—"I think it will not be difficult. He is so drunk. And I—I have the crowd about the ropes. The

"It's the liquor that's bothering him," muttered the New Yorker. "But say, he's got an awful right."

The fighters were crouching and sparring cautiously when the referee stepped between them and called time. The middleweight dropped his hands and walked quietly to his corner. The heavyweight staggered uncertainly to his. And all about the ringside there was shouting and disjointed talk and the brandishing of gold coins.

The middleweight dropped on the stool, leaned back on the ropes and closed his eyes. The New Yorker went swiftly and deftly to work on him, fanning him with the towel, sponging his head and face, kneading the muscles of neck, shoulders, arms, and thighs.

"Quick, miss," he said, looking up from his work, "give him that water bottle. And just keep the towel going, will you?"

Edith obeyed. Leaning over the ropes, she waved the towel with arms that had been trained on the tennis course and the golf course of her home city.

The referee called the round. Again the slender man faced the giant. Again they circled, feinted, rushed, dodged, fought.

The third round passed, and the fourth. It was not to be so easy.

The fifth round went badly for the Parisian. When it was over, and he had sunk weakly on the lacquered stool, Edith felt rather than saw the New Yorker shake his head and look grave.

"Work hard," he said between his teeth as he roughly massaged the relaxed muscles. "Slap his face. Use lots of water."

She followed instructions. Then, with an impulse and a sudden flash of memory, she got her wrist bag, rummaged in it, drew out a bottle of smelling salts, and pressed it against the fighter's nostrils. He breathed it in, then jerked his head away and opened his eyes. But she caught his head and again pressed the bottle to his nostrils.

"Good business!" It was the New Yorker, looking up from his work with just such an expression of admiration as the Parisian had wrung from him before the fight. "That's the very thing. You're all right, miss. You sure are—all—right!"

And Edith watched her man step out for the sixth round, a shade more elert for that sharp tang in his nostrils, with a curious little glow in her heart. For all in a moment she knew that it meant something to win that honest commendation. Many men had flattered her, but never before in her sheltered young life had a man spoken to her quite like that—directly, as an equal.

The sailor was clumsy and uncertain in his movements. His eyes were dull. He rushed at the middleweight and bore him down on the ropes, but drew a shower of body blows for his trouble. In some pain and bewilderment he fell back, and then, when the little man rushed, swung his right with all the weight of his great frame thrown in behind it. There was a thud as it landed, a tenth of a second of silence, then a roar from the spectators so wild, so utterly, unmistakably savage that Edith turned faint and closed her eyes. When after an instant they opened again it was only with a conscious effort of will that she could control her faculties sufficiently to comprehend what was taking place.

The middleweight had staggered back against the ropes and was supporting himself by holding on with one hand. The other hand hung limply at his side. His body swayed. His legs bent and wobbled as if about to give way under him. His chin sagged, his mouth hung partly open, his eyes wandered. He presented a picture of utter collapse.

Facing him and only a little way off, the heavyweight was floundering about, too weak and confused to see and grasp his opportunity. The building rocked with the screams of the spectators urging him on to the knockout.

The man from Brown's for a moment stared intently at his principal, picked up the towel and rolled it into a ball as if to toss it into the ring, then hesitated and again studied the situation.

"I'd swear that blow never landed," he was saying aloud. "Looked to me like he caught it on the arm. Is the boy stalling?"

Slowly the big sailor grasped the import of the frantic urgings of his seconds and the confused yelling of the crowd. He gathered himself, shook the sweat out of his eyes, and plunged heavily forward—all open, his arms swinging wildly about his head.

Instantly the middleweight stiffened up, thrust one foot out, threw his left forearm across his chin, and brought up his right in a lightning uppercut that landed squarely on the point of the sailor's jaw. It was a perfect maneuver and a perfect blow. The sailor spun around, slipped quietly to the floor, rolled over on his back, stiffened out, and lay unconscious while the referee slowly swung his arm up and down ten times.

The referee pocketed his watch, slapped the middleweight on the shoulder, and, turning toward the sailor's corner, cried: "Get your man. He's out!"

The middleweight, with a faint smile hovering on his bruised face, walked wearily to his corner, sank on the stool, and fell back into the arms of his second. And Edith, leaning weakly against the pillar during the brief moment before she roused herself to hunt about for her hat and gloves, looked down at the two strange faces with a puzzled expression.

But the situation was too much for her. Her head reeled with the confusion and the excitement of it.

Then it seemed to her that more than anything else in the world she longed for a breath of fresh air. She leaned against the pillar. . . .

They walked slowly northward past the warehouses and along the Bund.

"You are tired," he said. "Perhaps—now that it is like this—you would dine with me."

She moved along in silence for a little way. Then, "No," she replied, with a flutter of uncertainty. "I think I ought not to do that. Though I feel that you have earned the right to ask almost anything of me."

"It is not that," he protested.

She was silent.

"But perhaps I may walk with you—to the hotel?"

She felt for her watch, and laughed a little. "It seems as if it must be nearly midnight——"

"It is but 7. A few minutes—half an hour—that is all."

They walked on in an intimate silence that seemed not at all odd.

"It's no use trying to thank you," she said, after a time. "I was foolish; but you—you were wonderful."

He waved the compliment aside. "I am ashamed. I was not good. Oh, mademoiselle, I wish you had seen me at the time I fought the great Carpentier."

"You are French?" she asked.

"No, but I have lived much at Paris. My home was at Stockholm. And my father was German. I should like to give you my card."

He took one from a silver case and carefully bent down a corner. By the light of a street lamp she read: "Heinrich von Hagen, Stockholm." And in a lower corner were the words: "Royal Yacht Club."

He gazed moodily out over the river, then turned.

"I can only be frank with you, mademoiselle. They would call me an adventurer. You will know that men like myself do not come out here to China for no reason—not too often. I was for years in my uncle's Paris office. I forged his name. I came here. It was too much of the box, the billiards, the cards."

"I am sorry," she said.

They agreed to part on the corner near the Astor house. She lingered for a little while, and he stood stiffly like a soldier. There was a discolored bruise under his right eye; the left eye was nearly closed; his mouth was swollen and it twisted queerly when he smiled.

"I have heard tales," he said with a touch of sadness that was not wholly without bitterness, "of the splendid young ladies in America. It is quite true. You have the self-sufficiency. You walk through life untouched."

She looked at him thoughtfully for a moment, then unclapsed her necklace of delicately worked Chinese silver.

"I should like," she murmured, "to feel that you have something of mine."

He accepted the gift, and raised his hat. And she walked slowly away toward the lights of the Astor house.

Once she turned. He was standing stiffly there, still holding his hat above his head.

. . . . . .

Neither the Oldhams nor Lieut. Carver had arrived, and she waited alone in the lounge adjoining the office. On a nearby table lay a magazine. It brought a curious memory of something that had happened a long time before. She would read it now.

It was after 8 by the office clock when the lieutenant appeared. She saw him enter and pause at the desk, and with new eyes watched him cross the room toward her. Bob was good looking. He was a man of vigorous physique, of good mind, of some social attainment. He met every conventional requirement. But she felt as she observed him that he was of those who shut their womankind away from the very arena of actual life in which their own character and destiny is wrought.

"Hello!" he cried. "Alone? Where are the Oldhams?"

"They aren't back yet," said she. Then: "I'm starved, Bob. Let's have some dinner."

The lieutenant hesitated. "Really, Edith," he said, "it would be better to wait. Just on your account. You and I don't mind. But there are people here—ship acquaintances, all that—who wouldn't understand. At home the chaperon is a rather absurd nuisance, here a necessity. No use quarreling with the fact. It's so. Remember, it is Shanghai."

"Yes," she replied dryly, with a face that was inscrutable, "that is so. It is Shanghai."

HIS SECOND SELF

A COUPLE of years ago Victor Rousseau loomed up on the literary horizon of the United States with the publication in this newspaper of his "The Flights of Francois," as one of the most promising writers of the day. If you read that series of short stories you will remember them by the sparkling, virile, moving style of the author, his keen observations and his plot inventiveness. Herewith is offered another serial by this writer who is now become one of the outstanding figures in current fiction. Besides this story, he is the author of a serial story now appearing in one of the leading magazines, and of numerous short stories appearing in the current periodicals. This story, a masterly study of human nature, a mystery that will hold your attention from the first installment to the last, and a love story of unusual power is perhaps the finest piece of writing Mr. Rousseau has done. You should read it every week.

SYNOPSIS.

Joan Wentworth, a country girl, is employed as a nurse in the Southern Hospital at Avonmouth, presided over by Dr. John Lancaster, a bully and a man of loose character. She faints during her first operation, and she goes to his house to beg to get her position back. To her astonishment Lancaster appears altogether different; he is manifestly ill, and gentle with her. He says she needs a change and offers her a temporary post, while her case is being considered, at the Institute in the hill country, founded by his father with the Lancaster Fund. Joan goes to Lancaster (the name of the hill village) and finds a dilapidated old building, with a colored doctor, a matron, and a crazed woman, Mrs. Dana, who is locked in her room. There is a superintendent named Myers, whom Joan dislikes. Next day she is surprised to see Lancaster come down to the Institute. She has a quarrel with Myers, who takes her into the doctor's room and shows her Lancaster insensible from an overdose of morphine. Joan discovers that he is addicted to the drug.

FIFTH INSTALLMENT.

THE FIGHT BEGINS.

JOAN had had supper with Lancaster, and it was night, and once more the fight was raging. She had sat on the veranda with him, had talked with him, had seen the better soul of the man rise to the surface as he struggled with the morphine devil; then she had given him his half dose again, and, as his strength revived and the agony departed, she had seen the facile, lying spirit enter into him. Now he was lying, wrapped in his dressing gown, upon his bed, and she sat at his side, at grips with the devil in him that clamored for its victim's body, that might possess it entirely, as surely a demon as any spirit of evil, though its shrine was a little glass bottle holding a few drops of fluid.

She was fighting for Lancaster, fighting for the better Lancaster again, and he was writhing in torment, and pleading with her to go, to leave him to his fate, since the suffering was intolerable and subjection preferable.

There was an hour of hideous battle, but somehow she managed to keep him quiet till midnight. And, seated beside him, watching him, Joan came to the conclusion that his was one of those strange cases of double personality of which she had read in medical books. It was impossible to reconcile this Lancaster in any way with the man whom she had seen momentarily at the hospital, and with the tyrant of the operating room. For that man was essentially base and ignoble, and this man was honor and truth when the morphine fiend retired, baffled for a space, and under that pitiful load of shame she sensed the cleanness of the man's soul and its integrity.

Somehow she held this devil at bay until midnight, and then, with a second victory to his credit, he stretched out his arm for the hypodermic. Then Joan saw the look of contentment come into his face, heard the satisfied sigh—and there was the old Lancaster before her, shifty, furtive, and false. No, not altogether, for something of that victory remained with him, the promise of renewed manhood; the morphine devil was losing its grip. Ground had been won. It should never be ceded. Joan swore that as she watched by the bedside.

"Dr. Lancaster, you have promised me to sleep till 6," she said. "Can I trust you?"

"How can you doubt my word, Miss Wentworth?" asked Lancaster, with an affectation of surprise. "Of course you can. You know, I am not a regular user of drugs. I have been overworked and I took morphine to make me sleep, and somehow it got a hold of me. I th.nk I must be unusually susceptible to the drug."

The old lie of the stupid drug devil! But Joan had the storeroom key, and she knew that it would require a hammer or ax to break down the strong door. And she would wake and hear him, and fight again as she had fought that morning.

"Then I am going to bed till 6," she said.

"But, Miss Wentworth," he protested, "six hours is an impossibly long period. Every three hours is my time, and now that I am on half doses—you remember what Jenkins said this morning. You must go slowly, with a confirmed drug user like myself.

"Stop! Don't listen to me!" he added suddenly. "You can trust me, Miss Wentworth. I'm going to fight this out, and win."

"You are winning," answered Joan, bending over him. "Don't forget that. Say 'I am winning' whenever the pain seems uncontrollable and your will seems gone. It won't last long. Dr. Lancaster, you are your own self at this moment and nothing can harm you. Fight the good fight!"

He caught her hand and carried it to his lips. "Miss Wentworth, you are my good angel!" he cried. "I secured the services of an angel unawares," he added, looking at her with that pathetic humor which went straight to her heart. "I want to win for your sake. But why are you taking so much trouble for a worthless old fellow like me?"

"Don't flatter yourself that it is all for you, Dr. Lancaster. Perhaps I may want to save the most distinguished surgeon in the south."

At her words he started, he stared at her, and then fell back upon the pillow, hiding his face. Joan turned away. Again she had touched some hidden spring of memory; what it was she could not know, but it was evident that she had wounded him to the quick.

Perhaps it was the contrast between the office he held and the man he had become. Perhaps it was the knowledge of his secret bondage which had broken him down at last and driven him back to the institute, and Myers.

"Miss Wentworth, I want you to lock my door and take away the key," he said. "I may have a secret supply somewhere."

"I don't think you have," answered Joan. "You have none in this room, have you?"

"No."

"I believe that. And, anyway, I am going to trust you. That is part of your fight. I am going to trust you till 6."

He said good night in a low tone and turned away. Joan went up to her room. She lay down, but did not undress. She was afraid, and she admitted that she was afraid, and nothing but Lancaster's desperate need of her would have kept her an hour longer in the institute. But she was exhausted from the day and soon she was asleep.

She slept that sleep which brings no recreation for the jaded body or the overwrought mind. All the while she was back with Lancaster in his room below, in spirit. She knew that, as he had said, the drug bondage was only the climax of his difficulties. What had there been that had wrecked the man? Jenkins' hint at stolen funds? Of one thing she was sure; Lancaster, sunken as he was, was incapable of dishonesty. No, she must have placed a wrong construction on Jenkins' words. And in her sleep her brain went on puzzling over the problem. Only her body was quiescent, and it lay wearily in the bed like some chained captive.

But suddenly the urgent summons of the brain shook from it the trammels of sleep. Joan listened intently, awake upon the instant, as some wild creature of the woods that senses danger. Somebody was coming along the corridor.

The footfalls were so soft and stealthy that she might have thought she was dreaming, but for the sense of imminent danger, the knowledge of some malevolent design. The steps stopped and began again, the merest touches of sound against the silence of night, the lightest patter of bare feet outside the door.

Then the door began to open.

There was no moon, and the faint starlight outside only seemed to render darker the obscurity within. Yet, through the darkness Joan knew that a hand lay on the door jamb, and that a figure watched her across the room.

She leaped from her bed. "Who's there?" she called in tones that seemed to shock the silence.

She could see nothing now, and she dared not turn aside to light her lamp. She knew that the figure was crouching somewhere. She heard the softest breathing, but could not locate it in the room. She felt the atmosphere of evil that surrounded her. She started to cross the room, groping, with arms outstretched. Then she found the intruder and flung herself upon it.

Her left hand closed about a wrist, supple and strong. Her right hand held another hand. They wrestled in the darkness, their bodies tense but motionless, only the hands and wrist muscles at strife. Not a sound came from their lips.

Joan thought it was a woman's hands she held. Her fingers sought the menace in the closed fists. The left hand of the intruder was empty; but in the right was a jagged piece of a broken tumbler that tinkled to the floor.

As it fell the other leaped at her as if strung upon wires. Joan saw, very dimly, the face of Mrs. Dana. She was in her nightdress, with her feet bare, and the ferocity of her attack seemed atrocious in contrast with the expressionless, mask-like features. Only the eyes seemed alive, and they burned with implacable hatred, as if they meditated revenge for all the accumulation of a life's wrongs.

The woman bore Joan backward. The lamp fell crashing to the floor in a debacle of splintered glass. A chair was overturned. Mrs. Dana's hands sought Joan's throat, and they struggled in the darkness, crashing here and there, upsetting the water pitcher, smashing into the swinging door. Underneath her Joan heard Mrs. Fraser moving and doors opening. There were steps on the stairs.

For a few moments Joan felt no match for the onset of the madwoman. But Mrs. Dana's impulse was soon exhausted. Joan got her arms about her body, pressing down the other's arms to her sides. Mrs. Dana suddenly became passive, and the lights in the eyes seemed to go out like extinguished candles as the brain clouded. Joan got the woman into the corridor. At the farther end a little lamp was burning.

Mrs. Dana went with her quietly, walking like a mechanical figure. At the head of the stairs appeared the matron, wearing a white wrapper. Behind her Joan saw the startled faces of Myers and Lancaster. The girl let Mrs. Dana into her room and Mrs. Fraser came at her heels, breathing hard in terror.

"Did she hurt you?" she gasped. "How did she get out? Who let her out? I should have told you she was dangerous, but I never dreamed that she could pick that lock. Did she—did she try to harm you?"

"She had a piece of glass," said Joan, "but I took it away from her."

"There was no glass in her room last evening," said the matron with conviction.

Lancaster was approaching. Joan was astounded to see the look of anger on his face. "Who opened that door?" he shouted.

"It's all right now, Dr. Lancaster," came the matron's voice from within.

But Lancaster was shaking with excitement. He swung round upon Myers.

"You are responsible for this!" he cried. "You know my one point that has to be carried out. I told you to have a bolt put on the door after she got out before."

"Now, now, doctor, don't excite yourself," said the secretary soothingly. "You're a sick man, you know. It was unfortunate, but I'll see it doesn't happen again."

Lancaster seemed beside himself with fury, far more angry, indeed, than the situation appeared to warrant.

"She might have killed Miss Wentworth!" he stormed. "I've stood enough from you without this. I've suffered you, God knows, until you've sapped my strength and crushed me under your feet, and made me less of a man than the meanest drunkard in Millville, but now it's ended. Get out of my sight! Leave the institute tomorrow!"

Myers seemed stricken with fear and agitation. "Why, doctor," he protested, "you don't know what you are talking about. It's that nurse's treatment has upset your nerves. That's just your way, to hire people when you feel fine and then discharge them when you ain't well. You'll think better of it in the morning. I'm not going any more than Miss Wentworth did."

Lancaster's face was twisted. He raised his fist as if to strike Myers. Joan saw the secretary recoil and she divined that the man was a physical coward.

"I tell you I've done with you!" cried Lancaster. "My mind's made up. Go ahead and do your worst."

"Say," shouted Myers, "am I responsible if that woman got out of her room? What's the sense of picking on me? Didn't you hire a nurse to take care of your patients? Ain't Mrs. Dana a patient? Now there's been enough said, I reckon. You know what I mean, doctor. Better go back to your room and forget what you've said tonight."

"If ever I see your face after tonight, by God, I'll kill you!" shouted Lancaster.

Myers slunk away toward the stairs. "O, all right, all right," he answered. "I reckon you'll be sorry tomorrow. But I'll hold you to what you've said. I ain't going to see that nurse bust up my work here."

He scowled fearfully at Joan as he went down the stairs, a grotesque, almost deformed figure in his loose pajamas. But Joan hardly heeded the man. She did not know the cause of Lancaster's sudden outbreak of rage, but she knew that it was part of the whole dreadful problem and that in fighting Lancaster's driving devil she was at work upon the darkest corner of the dark mystery.

"I think, Dr. Lancaster, you had better go and lie down again," she said. "No harm has been done, but I am very sorry you were awakened."

He was leaning against the wall, looking at her with a strange expression upon his face. He breathed quickly, like a man in uncontrollable agitation. Just then the matron came out of Mrs. Dana's room.

"How did it happen, Mrs. Fraser?" asked Lancaster.

The matron snapped the key in the lock before answering. "I don't know, Dr. Lancaster," she answered. "The lock's all right. It couldn't have been picked. And I swear I locked it last night. Somebody must have let her out."

"That hound!" began Lancaster, but Joan interposed. "She may have found a key," she said.

The matron shook her head. "No key would fit that lock except the right one," she answered.

"Why should any one tamper with that lock?" Lancaster muttered. Suddenly he broke down and covered his face with his hands. His shoulders shook convulsively. Joan put her hand on his arm.

"Dr. Lancaster, you must go back to your room now," she said. "It was nothing, and it is all ended."

He raised his face. "Yes, you are right, Miss Wentworth," he answered simply.

The matron had slipped away down the stairs. The secretary was pacing his room, slamming open lids of trunks and bureau drawers. Joan divined that it was his threat of leaving, designed to reach Lancaster's ears. At the door of the doctor's room Lancaster hesitated. His furious rage had burned itself away, leaving him in the reaction of fear and weakness. The hands of the clock in the hall pointed to 5. Joan dared not leave Lancaster alone till 6.

But, as if he understood her thoughts, he said:

"Miss Wentworth, if you will stay with me till 6 it will help me to master myself. It is not the fear of yielding to morphine; it is my thoughts. If you knew how one's life comes crowding upon one in the darkness——"

"I'll stay with you," said Joan.

"Let us wait on the veranda," said Lancaster. "The air is stifling in this house. Put on a wrap and I will wait for you there."

Joan ran upstairs and slipped on her cloak. When she got back Lancaster had not moved from the door. The secretary was packing noisily in his room.

They went outside together, closing the front door behind them, as if to shut in the evil influences in the place. There was a hint of morning in the air, in its freshness, in the paling of the night above the eastern mountains. There was the fresh night scent of the pines, and all the stillness of that hour which seems to hold nature entranced between her sleep and her awakening.

Lancaster led the way toward the chairs at the end of the veranda and wiped the dew from them with his handkerchief.

"When you came here," he said, as they sat down, "when on the impulse I asked you to come here, I did not dream that my impulse was the prompting of my good angel."

"Miss Wentworth," he said, "I have something to say and something to promise. I am not going to take that dose. Tonight, perhaps, but not now. If I take it and free my body from its suffering I lose my soul again. I lose that hope which you have given me. And—I want to give you this."

He handed her a little bottle of morphine, three-quarters full.

"It is the bottle which you took from the drawer of my desk yesterday," he said. "I stole it from your pocket when you leaned over me last night when you told me I was winning. I was a thief—but I am a penitent thief and I restore it intact."

"No, Dr. Lancaster," answered the girl, smiling as she took the bottle from him. "That has no bearing upon your character; it was a symptom of your disease."

"Well, I didn't take any," said Lancaster with the transient flash of humor lighting up his face. "I had the hardest conceivable battle over that bottle. I set it up before me and I held my right hand back with my left, and I said, 'I am winning, in Joan Wentworth's name.' And at last the drug devil was beaten. And no more morphine until tonight."

"Dr. Lancaster, you have been brave and wonderful!" cried Joan, profoundly stirred. "Remember that! One of the bravest men I have ever known. Never tell me again that you have lost your power of will. We are winning fast."

He placed his hands upon her shoulders and stood looking at her. Upon his face was an expression of indulgence, as if he was considering her enthusiasm in the light of his experience of life, so much deeper than hers, so much the more profound. Then the look passed; the years seemed to fall from him, and strength came into his face.

"God bless you, my dear," he said, and bent to kiss her forehead.

She turned and ran upstairs. Her heart was singing in her breast. The flood of sunlight that came through the eastern windows, illuminating the dusty interior of the old building, seemed like a spiritual light, flaming into this dark place where shadows had dwelled so long. She went into her room and dressed for the day. She had never felt so happy before. And now the life in Avonmouth had become as dim as a dream and she cared no longer whether she returned or not. A charge had been granted to her, a man's life into her keeping; that trust she meant to fulfill.

She had saved Lancaster and she would outwit Myers and remove the only obstacle to Lancaster's recovery. She knew the man incited the doctor to drug himself. She would have known that even without the matron's statement to her. But why should Myers wish Lancaster to drug himself to death?

He must be acting for others. Whom? No matter. Once the drug devil was overcome the plot would be revealed and overthrown.

As she stood at her window Joan heard footsteps on the path below. Looking down she saw the secretary leaving the house, carrying a suitcase. Her heart almost stood still. Surely Myers had not acknowledged defeat and taken Lancaster at his word? Surely he did not mean to go without another struggle?

She watched him breathlessly. He was going, and the evil atmosphere of the old place seemed to be departing with him. His hard hat was jammed on the back of his head, his stunted body looked absurdly disproportioned from above, the bulging suitcase bumped against him as he moved.

She watched him cross the grass beside the chicken coop to where the weed grown path joined the winding road. He was outside the grounds of the institute now, and he was still going in the direction of the station. He disappeared behind the hedges, appeared again, a long way off, and vanished finally. He was gone, and the air seemed the sweeter, the day more glorious.

Joan almost danced downstairs to the dining room. Lancaster was at the table waiting for her.

"Mr. Myers has gone away!" she cried. "Dr. Lancaster, your evil spirit has departed, suitcase and all."

Lancaster looked at her gravely. "I know," he said.

"Did he come to you? Did you discharge him?"

"He did not come to me. He did not tell the matron he was going. It looks bad."

"No," said Joan firmly, struggling against her conviction. "He was afraid. You will never see him again."

"You know what the Bible says about the unclean spirit who leaves a man and returns with seven others when he finds his home swept and garnished?"

"Dr. Lancaster, he has no hold on you. He can do nothing and he will never dare to return."

"Well, my dear, we have a respite, at all events," Lancaster answered. "So let us eat our breakfast and afterward I'll take you for a ramble through the woods, and we'll hold the fort together until evening."

. . . . . .

By the next morning there was no doubt that victory had been won. There was color in Lancaster's face, a lightness to his step; and, best of all, he was psychically whole. The drug devil still clung to the nervous refuges of its physical domain, the hands still trembled, the man started at sudden sounds; but the shifty, furtive, lying spirit had taken its departure.

Joan only discovered afterward what Lancaster must have endured. The treatment had been more heroic than Joan had known with her own limited experience, and the antidotes which she administered under Lancaster's own directions were purposely limited, for fear of supplanting one habit with another.

Lancaster had gone through the worst of his ordeal; and yet certain features of his illness were puzzling to both of them. The symptoms of morphine poisoning, elusive and protean as they are, seemed in this case irreconcilable with those classically accepted. There was Lancaster's complete prostration on the morning when Joan discovered the nature of his illness. He told her afterward that he had been conscious all the time, but physically inert, as if paralyzed. That did not point to morphine poisoning. And a certain lethargy remained one of the last symptoms of the case.

The intimacy of the sickroom, born of their struggle, had become the most natural thing to both of them. The passing of Myers had wrought an extraordinary change in the atmosphere of the institution. And somehow the news of Lancaster's recovery had spread into Millville. Joan inferred that even the country people had boycotted the institute, but now two mothers brought their babies to Lancaster, and it was amazing and delightful to Joan to see the doctor's transformation, his jolliness and tenderness toward the children.

"I'm using my respite," he said whimsically. "I want to get well to face my harder battle."

"It is no respite," answered Joan. "You are free now, Dr. Lancaster; it is only a habit of thought that holds you."

He shook his head, and at the moment she thought that he intended to confide in her. But he said nothing, and Joan was content that he should remain silent until he chose to speak, if ever.

There ensued three wonderful days after the secretary's departure, always to remain clear in the girl's memory. They were three days of uninterrupted recovery. After the second no more morphine was given. The fight was won; there was no questioning that.

"I suppose you will have to return to Avonmouth soon," Joan suggested.

He turned a startled look on her. "Yes—soon," he said, and fell into a gloomy meditation from which she could not arouse him.

That afternoon a telephone message came from Thompson, a hill village fifteen miles distant. A farm hand had been crushed by a falling tree; would Lancaster come at once and see if anything could be done for him?

"Would you like to come with me?" asked the doctor.

"If I can be of help."

"Of course you can—the greatest help. I shall need you badly, perhaps to administer an anesthetic," he answered.

Lancaster telephoned to Jenkins for the buggy and half an hour later they were driving along the country road into the heart of the mountains. They traveled for the most part in silence; Lancaster's thoughts were occupied with his prospective case, and Joan was content to sit quietly at his side and watch the changing panorama of the land she loved and knew so well. It was much to be at home in those mountains, which she had seen afar off from girlhood and never explored. They had stood in her mind unconsciously as a symbol of life, of the struggle of life and its conquest; and she was thinking vaguely that as she had come to them at last, so her life, too, had opened out and revealed difficult places.

The road ascended continuously, until at last, when the sun was low down in the sky, they entered Thompson, a tiny settlement in the very heart of the mountain peaks.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

"SAFETY FIRST," SAYS THE DUNCE.

BY WM. DONAHEY.

THE Teenie Weenie army was kept very busy for several days after they landed on the wild men's island. A long line of trenches was built in order to protect the great amount of stores which had to be brought over on the raft.

"Why are you making such a fine camp here?" asked the Doctor as he looked around at the trim camp and the great heaps of baggage piled about. "We shall have to move pretty soon, for it begins to look as though the wild men will not attack us, so we shall have to go after them."

"We'll stay right here for some time," answered the General, taking off his tiny sword and laying it on the table which stood in front of his tent. "We are within striking distance of the wild men's village, so the aviator tells me, and we'll use this camp for our base of operations."

"General," said the Cook, saluting the commander of the Teenie Weenie army, "I beg your pardon, but there is something I must tell you."

"What is it, sir?" said the General, returning the Cook's salute.

"Why, sir, there's a thimble missing from among my cooking things. I put two beans to soak in it last night and when I went to look at them a little while ago the beans were lying on the ground and the thimble was gone."

"That's most strange," said the General; "I'll have the Cowboy look into the matter and see if he can find out what has happened to the thimble."

"Thank you, sir," said the Cook, "I'm a little short of cooking pans and kettles and I'd like to have it back."

The Cowboy was ordered to look about for the lost thimble, but before he had fairly started the search the thimble turned up in a most peculiar way. Down the main street of the camp towards the General's tent marched the Dunce with the lost thimble over his head and followed by a laughing crowd of soldiers.

"What's the idea of this?" asked the General as the Dunce stopped before him.

"Safety first," answered the Dunce.

"What do you mean by safety first?" asked the General, trying hard to keep from laughing at the ridiculous sight.

"W-w-well, you s-s-see," began the Dunce, "I thought this thimble would make a fine suit of armor, so I took it out back of camp and got some tools and cut a couple of holes for my arms to go through and another hole to see through——"

"Yes, and spoiled a perfectly good thimble," put in the General.

"Jinks!" exclaimed the Dunce, "I never thought of that."

Evening Frocks of Net and Jet

by Corinne Lowe

Black satin evening gown with a bib-apron trimming. This feature is an interesting one and "makes" the gown. It is made of heavy gold mesh, embroidered with black and gold thread. A design at the head of the bodice, in front, stands out against a fold of white satin which extends across the top of the bust.

Black net evening gown made over white satin. The feature of this model is the little ripple cape. The sleeves are of Georgette crepe. The gown is trimmed with black jet.

Evening wrap of maroon velvet. The panel in the back is of kolinsky. Rich and beautiful is the fichu collar which sweeps around the neck and shoulders and ties in a loose single knot in front.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—"The war, madame!" The middle aged Frenchman, in the salon of the Fifth avenue importer's shop, held up a shimmering golden brown dinner frock before the gleaming eyes of a potential customer. "Dat is wy they are reducing of the mat-er-iale. It ees too much, all de stuff dat go een to dees skirts we have been having. Much too much!"

"And the price?" The question that had been hanging tremulously on the lips of the would-be possessor of the gown was dropped into the midst of the Frenchman's volubility. It was what he hearkened for with ears alert while his tongue was busy.

"The price?" he answered quite casually. "Et ees eight hunder. Most cheep. A remarkable bargain. Remarkable! The lace, you see, is of gold thread. These tassels——"

The war will doubtless continue to influence styles, as it brought into vogue the gingham frock of the season just past and which ranged anywhere from $18 to $70 in price. But there is no indication that the war will influence fashion on the credit side of the consumer's bank account!

Owing to the depressing conditions, there is every reason for women to keep the effect of a smile, rather than that of a sigh, in their general appearance as well as in their faces. "No man wants to come home from the trenches to see his wife look like 30 cents," was the way one clever Frenchman phrased it. For long it has been a recognized fact among women that the most costly manner of dressing is the simplest. Good taste demands simplicity at present and good business caters to the idea.

At no time have silks been sold in better qualities or at higher prices. While elaborate fabrics are pretty much taboo, especially abroad, there is a big demand for crêpes de chine, triple voiles, and embroidered gauzes. Mourning is being worn to the best possible advantage. The sale of jewelry, particularly of pearls, is said to be as great as it ever was, as well as articles of the lingerie classification, gloves, and all the many accessories, as collars and cuffs, hand embroidered and plain, that go to make the modish woman of today what she calls neat and the synonym for which is perfection. From present indications, the sword of Damocles is falling upon the shapeless bag tied in the middle silhouette. Perhaps the trig, uniform clad figures of the men have something to do with it. With this silhouette, of course, is doomed the chemise and the gowns of no shape in which the place where the bodice ends and the skirt begins is indicated by a belt, so called, that passes around the figure almost under the armpits.

That bustles are to be suggested in every possible way that the drapery of materials and trimming can do is indicated by almost every new model with a Paris origin. Another new note seems to be the tendency to the one sided effect, defined by diagonal lines of buttons, cascades of rippled trimmings, etc. It has even been hazarded that evening gowns will be seen the coming winter with but one sleeve. This means, of course, that one arm will be covered or draped over the shoulder, simulating a sleeve effect, while the other will be left bared.

A commentary on the war talk of retrenching where the clothes treasury is concerned, is in the gold beads and embroidery that promise to be much the vogue for trimming in the designing of evening frocks. Observe, for example, the accompanying illustration, the black and gold evening gown which is one of the most alluring models seen thus early in the season. The gown is of black satin, which forms the background for an apron, with bib, created of a heavy gold mesh, embroidered with black and gold thread. The pattern is a strikingly effective one, which the black satin, of course, brings out. A narrow band of white satin is laid at the top of the bodice, across the bust, and affords the desirable transitory margin between the flesh color of the skin and the black of the gown. Heavy strands of jet serve as shoulder straps.

In the accompanying illustration is an evening wrap of maroon velvet, which confirms the prophecy already recorded that much fur will be worn. It has a panel in the back of kolinsky. A fichu collar sweeps around the neck and shoulders to the front and is caught in a loose tie, the ends hanging over. The wrap is lined with a delicate shade of pink.

Charming also is the black evening gown. It is made over white satin. In good harmony are the sleeves of white Georgette crêpe. In trimming, the gown is decorated with black jet. The feature of this model is the little cape that ripples across the back.

A successful afternoon dress, one of the newest models seen recently, is of brown chiffon velvet. The high neck line is here shown. It is topped with a band of kolinsky. In the front it merges into a yoke effect that, in the back, deepens into a point which is caught at the waist. One end is draped into a large bow simulating a bustle. The other is brought around the waist, in a wide fold, simulating a girdle. A panel hangs down the back, from beneath the bustle bow. The skirt is drawn back and up, under the bustle, which causes a fullness around the thighs and emphasizes the drawn-in effect at the hem. The regular musketeer sleeve is of shirred brown chiffon, as is the bodice.

Straight narrow lines probably will rule. The skirts are straight and quite narrow, with not infrequently a swathed effect.

There is always much conjecture as to materials. Besides satin and crêpe de chine, indestructible white voile is used for dancing frocks for young girls. In one model it is effectively combined with ribbon. Double tunics are edged with plaid ribbon of two shades of rose pink. The bodice, wrapped about the figure, is also of ribbon. Fragmentary clouds of voile furnish the sleeves and fall from the shoulders to the wrists, where they are caught in with ribbons.

An afternoon model, which promises satisfaction and reliability, is of black satin. It is made by laying the back and the front together, seams under the arms. The effect is semi-princess. The collar and cuffs are of white satin. Another afternoon model shows the successful development of dark green velvet. The gown has a bolerolike bodice which is short in front and longer in the back. It is embroidered in gray silk and steel thread. Under this appears a gray satin waistcoat. The skirt has a tunic, buttoning in front, and is longer in the back than in the front. It opens at the bottom just enough to reveal a narrow panel of gray satin. A gown of maroon broadcloth has a tunic in front. The back shows wide bands of old blue embroidery. The underskirt is arranged in round plaits. The waist is fashioned in bolero style. Still other models show the tunic cut like a rounded apron in front. The sleeves on many of these afternoon gowns are rather narrow, with a fitted wristband and trimming just above this. The sleeve is puffed a trifle on the forearm.

Going back to evening dresses, a beautiful model seen recently was of black tulle which was combined with blue and gold spangled flowers laid on a white satin foundation. Down the front hangs a long point of turquoise blue velvet, panel fashion. This idea is repeated in the back, in which case the point is lengthened and resolves itself into a train. Tulle furnishes the sleeves, of which there is but a mere suggestion. The neck is quite low.

Bright Sayings of the Children

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each childish saying printed. The story told must never have been printed in any magazine or paper. It is not possible to acknowledge or return unavailable contributions. Address bright sayings to Aunty Bee, "Tribune," Chicago.

"Where have you been?" asked a neighbor's little girl as I came in from the store the other day.

"O, I replied, "I was making jelly. I found I hadn't enough sugar, so had to run over for some to the store."

"Why didn't you let me go?" she questioned.

"Well," I said, "I was looking for a little boy or girl to go for me, as I even had the 2 cents in my hand to give them for going, but I thought you were too small to carry sugar."

A minute or two later she came to the door and said, bashfully: "Do you think you would pay 2 cents for having your house watched while you were gone?"

"I certainly would," I replied. "I think it is well worth 2 cents to have your house watched these days. Did you watch it?"

"Yes, ma'am," she replied, modestly.

Hazel is a born coquette. One afternoon I met her coming from a children's party with her mother. She was carrying two American flags, and in rather a teasing manner I asked her to give me one of them.

"No," she answered, "I don't want to give you one."

"Wouldn't you like to give me one to take home to William?" I asked. [William is my brother.]

"O," said small Hazel, "that's different," and handed me a flag without the least hesitation. B. E.

Bernice's father had been talking about the draft for the national army, and she heard everything. One night her aunt brought a little boy to the house, and she was told he hadn't father or mother. Bernice said, "Oh, why not draft him to the family?" E. S.

"Ruth, do you like your new teacher as well as you did your kindergarten teacher?" I asked.

"Oh, no," replied the little miss, "I loved my old teacher, but I dislove the new one awful much." C. S.

Morgan is a cheerful little lad, and rare is the occasion when he is not ready with a bright and apt remark.

While motoring with the family recently the car went into the ditch, partially upsetting and spilling the occupants. None was hurt, as it happened, and Morgan was the first to recover his breath and powers of speech with: "Huh! Nobody killed but the engine!" C. E. B.

Bobbie's many requests for a bicycle had not met with any favor from his father. Last Sunday while Bobbie and his father were out walking several little boys passed them on wheels. When the fourth one came along, Bobbie couldn't endure it any longer. Looking up into his father's face, he said, "Papa, some little boys have bicycles and some little boys don't." M. C. S.

My nephew, Edward, wore tennis slippers during the summer, and one day went into my brother's room. Thinking to tease the youngster, my brother said: "Now, Edward, you were in my room today, weren't you?"

"No, I wasn't, Uncle Joe," answered Edward.

"Yes, you were," said my brother. "I saw your footprints."

"We-were they rubber?" Edward asked. TRUDY.

Bobby and his father were spending a few days with grandpa and grandma at the farm. While there he wore overalls, and no child was ever known to get any dirtier than he in such a short time. One day he sat down to the dinner table, his overalls unusually soiled. He discovered at once that grandma had failed to put his napkin at his plate. He pondered a while and said, "Daddy, when are you going home?" His father replied, "This morning, son; why?" Bobby said, "Because I want you to bring me a napkin; grandma hasn't any." He had never been known to put his napkin on without being told to do so and happened to think of protecting his dirty overalls. A. P. M.

A fond relative vouches for this story of the boyhood of Col. Henry J. Reilly.

Henry was early trained in obedience. The rule of the home was that the children must be in at dark. The other boys of the neighborhood could stay out as long as they wanted to. Henry came home obediently but regretfully at dark one night. When his mother bade him good night he burst out with: "O, mother, how I wish I was a cat, 'cause then I could stay out in the dark."

Edward had a new little playmate who possessed much more imagination than he. To John a chair was a chair only occasionally. It in turn became a steed, or, armed with two yardsticks for oars, it proved to be a boat. Blocks turned quickly into various kinds of animals, etc. When Edward returned home after his first visit his mother asked him how he liked his new little neighbor, and Edward replied: "O, he is fine. He has such a good pretendery."

Jane was looking long and earnestly at the new baby, who did not seem contented with her new surroundings, judging from her protests.

"What are you thinking of, dear?" asked Jane's aunt.

"I was thinking," said Jane, seriously, "that I was so glad they left me where I was 'quainted with the family!"

Childhood Ambition Contest.

Did you ever have a childhood ambition—a humorous one? Of course you did. And what you did wasn't anything like what you dreamed. Tell us what your great ambition was—and then tell us how far short you fell. Do it in 250 words, on one side of the paper, and address manuscripts to Childhood Ambition Editor, Chicago Sunday Tribune. For each story printed $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned.

Colliding with Icebergs.

When I was about 12 I saw a motion picture of an arctic explorer sailing the arctice seas, shooting seals and polar bears, and nearly colliding with icebergs. How I longed to be an arctic explorer, having my name mentioned and my deeds recorded in history, and also having many hair lifting experiences, beside banquets in my honor upon my return. That was eight years ago. I am now a book agent going from door to door trying to sell a book, sometimes confronted by angry housewives who were interrupted while doing their housework, and at other times having the door slammed shut in my face. A. W.

Wild West No More.

During my younger days my one ambition was to go west. I wanted to find a place where there were no fences, no laws, and with nothing but one's own free will guiding his actions. I imagined myself attired in the dashing costume of a plainsman, carrying a "six gun" on my hip, and shooting up towns at my own convenience.

Alas, my time to go west came too late. A year ago I set out for the land of my boyhood dreams. I came to it, but, oh, how different from the place that I had long pictured in my mind. The large ranches gone, the Indians "corraled," the "bad men" buried, the romantic cowboy practically extinct, and towns, electric lights, telephones, and automobiles swiftly coming in to take their places, the same as in a well civilized community. An occasional reminder of the old wild west was seen in the stray cow puncher, minus his gun, but still wearing the picturesque costume of years gone by.

My dream was shattered, my ambition gone and I was perfectly contented to return to a little Iowa town. W. P.

Candy Feasts Permitted.

Once when I was in first grade an irate teacher confiscated my entire 5 cents worth of candy because I had tried to eat some during hours. I was a child who never had much money and the loss of the candy seemed more than I could bear.

I made up my mind then and there to become a primary teacher when I grew up and I resolved to spend my entire salary on candy parties for my pupils.

Since then I have realized my ambition to some extent. I have now taught first grade for three years, but I have never spent money on candy for my pupils. However, during that time I have never taken any candy away from a little child. Instead I let them finish their forbidden feasts at their leisure in the privacy of the corridor or dressing room. E. A Quiet Wedding.

My childish ambition was to be the central figure in a big church wedding. I would dream of myself walking down the long aisle to the wonderful strains of the bridal music. I could picture myself a beautiful bride in white satin, long veil, and big bouquet, with flower girls, bridesmaids, etc., all the details of a big wedding. The reality surely was the opposite. I wore dark blue cloth, no veil, instead of the white satin and tulle, and my husband and I went by ourselves and were married at the rectory without attendants and without music. M. C. S.

LOOK AT CHILD'S TONGUE, IF SICK, CROSS, FEVERISH

Hurry, Mother! Remove poisons from little stomach, liver, bowels.

Give "California Syrup of Figs" at once if bilious or constipated.

Look at the tongue, mother! If coated, it is a sure sign that your little one's stomach, liver and bowels need a gentle, thorough cleansing at once.

When peavish, cross, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, doesn't eat or act naturally, or is feverish, stomach sour, breath bad; has stomach-ache, sore throat, diarrhoea, full of cold, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the foul, constipated waste, undigested food and sour bile gently moves out of the little bowels without griping, and you have a well, playful child again.

You needn't coax sick children to take this harmless "fruit laxative"; they love its delicious taste, and it always makes them feel splendid.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which has directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeits sold here. To be sure you get the genuine, ask to see that it is made by "California Fig Syrup Company." Refuse any other kind with contempt.—Advertisement.

There's a Face For Every Hat and a Hat For Every Face

Says Antoinette Donnelly

"I never think of a hat as just a hat," said Mme. Z., one of the most successful milliners in America. "I think of it always with a face and head under it. And for every hat I see a certain type of face.

"What a hat can do to a woman's looks! Ouil Ouil! The hat is to a woman's looks what the dressing is to a salad! And why should so many women spoil themselves—their faces, their figures and even their expensions—when they could just as well enhance their charms threefold with a becoming hat."

"I would not sell a hat unless I felt it was the hat," continued Mme. Z., "so bring out the best features in a woman's face and hair and to give a symmetrical touch to her whole outline. Any woman can do this for herself if she will only be fair and square and honest in gazing at her own face value.

"What I put on the head of the slender faced woman would look idiotic on the tubby one—but the tubby one can lose a hoop or two of tubbiness with the right choice of chapeau.

"Hatting oneself is an art not subtle or cunning. Just the art of common sense and knowing that you can't look as well in your neighbor's hat as in the one that follows the lines of your particular face and head proportions."

"This," says Mme. Z., "with its abrupt turnup at one side, sometimes adorned and sometimes not, is stunning but O, so trying if there be hint of worldly wisdom in a woman's face. It requires a deal of softness in the face and a total lineleseness. Its theatricalness demands an artful, fluffy softness of hair beneath it."

"This hat, for instance," says Mme. Z., "adds charm and dignity. It is not intended that the very young should wear such a turban. On the other hand, its lines are youth-giving to the matron and refining to a fat, broad face. It gives height and trimness to the woman who has 'taken on' more pounds than go into the making of the popular silhouette."

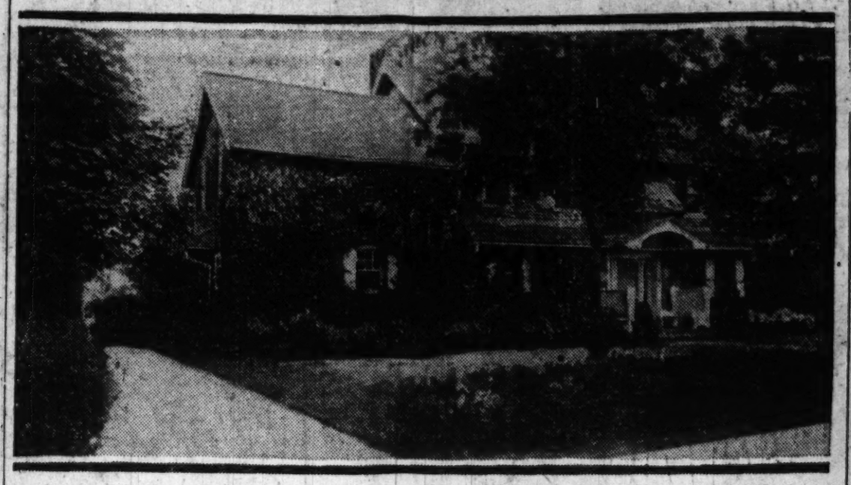
"On the other hand, no ingenue expression would be part of this particular picture! DASH, GROOMING from head to foot, are the qualities that make this hat a success! Can you imagine it on a two or three chinned woman or on a country cousin bit of demureness? Sophisticated, Stilted and Stunning (if we may be allowed to stretch a C to S), with hair done to an elegant turn—or else this type of hat goes begging for one lone admirer."

"Freak veils are the forbidden fruit of the millinery garden to fifty per cent of womankind. The other fifty require the virtues of subtle femininity. (Breathes there a woman, however, who thinks she lacks this virtue.) Not for fat and forty is the veil with the dot, the dash or reptile woven into it. Somehow it calls for a 'How-can-you-say-such-things' expression."

"The baby doll trick of eyes, never aged over 21," says Mme. Z., "may add this tantalizing Coolie pompon to its chapeau with no other danger than that of enhancing the lure But can't you imagine all the faces that would be out of place under this coquettish touch! For them there are a hundred brands of sailors, trimmed and plain, to help make the best of what the gods have given in the way of facial charm."

THE SUCCESSFUL HOME GARDEN

By J. F. H. HEIDE.



WHAT CORRECT SOIL PREPARATION WILL DO.

This photograph was taken just three years after plantation of the vines, evergreens, and other trees and shrubbery shown. The work was planned and executed by Prof. Arthur W. Cowell, as in last Sunday's "Tribune."

No. 199.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—I want to move a cherry tree fifteen feet to make room for a garage. I bought the tree at a nursery three years ago; now about three inches in diameter. Will you tell me a safe way to do the job without injury to the tree?—H. B.

Ans.—Saturate the soil around the tree with water and dig a narrow trench in a radius of three or four feet, making a circle six or eight feet in diameter, with the tree as the center. Dig deep enough to sever all lateral roots at that length. Pick up all the root ends there and lift them by picking out the soil between them, working toward the tree. Use all care do injure none of the fibrous feeding roots.

When all are laid bare to such distance from the tree that the remaining earth ball will hold together firmly in moving, gather up the loose root ends and tie them in bunches to prevent unnecessary injury. Dig under the ball of soil and roots as far as possible. Then tie a rope some distance upon the stoutest limb, inserting pieces of old rubber hose or other soft material in the loop of the rope to prevent injury to the bark. Insert a stone boat or other flat slide under the soil ball, as far as possible, and pull the tree over on it, by means of the rope, to loosen the tap roots. With a sharp instrument cut off such as remain in the ground under the soil ball.

Lose no time in skidding the tree over immediately to a hole of equal depth and diameter previously dug at the desired new location. Set it up at once, spread the roots without crossing them, cutting off clean such as are broken or seriously lacerated, and fill in with a good top soil. Use no manure unless it is composted to powder. Trample down to the general level and water thoroughly. If the ball of earth around the roots is hard and impermeable jab holes into it for the absorption of its share of water.

Spread a four inch mulch of strawy manure over the entire root system and leave it on to be lightly worked into the soil in spring. Protect the stem of the tree, from the ground to the main branches, with straw or, better still, with burlap, to safeguard the tree against sun scald the first two or three years after transplanting. Secure it with three ropes or wires as a protection against strong winds till the root system is again established. Water thoroughly once every ten days, four times in all, and then stop. Under no circumstances water between times, especially in heavy soil.

Neither cherries nor any other stone fruits require pruning to offset the shortening of roots. Only broken or crossed branches should be pruned.

If the transplanting is carefully done on a shady day it is not likely that the shock will be sufficient to prevent blooming next year, though the tree will not bloom so profusely until again well established. Liquid manure once or twice a year and an annual winter mulch worked under in spring will insure large crops of cherries of superior quality.

Q.—Please advise me as to the nature of the scale on my 10 year old poplar (specimen inclosed) and a means of curing it.—F. S.

Ans.—The specimen had been torn from the light envelope in cancellation; it is impossible to classify the scale without that or a description. Use a 25 per cent crude petroleum emulsion spray. Buy the concentrate ready made at the seed stores and apply with a sprayer and extension pipe, after the leaves have fallen this autumn and again before the trees bud in spring. A solution of commercial lime-sulphur may be applied instead, at any time, without danger of injury. Pruning first will simplify the operation. Burn both the fallen leaves and the prunings. A thorough job, covering the entire tree with a fine, misty spray, without causing a puddle at the roots, is necessary. Induce the neighbors to terat infested trees and shrubs at the same time, for permanent results.

Q.—On my return from the summer's outing I find some meal just alive with brown beetles about one-sixth inch long (sample inclosed). They are in split peas as well and even in the bathroom. I have tried borax and other things in vain. What can I do?—Mrs. F. J. S.

Ans.—They are "confused flour beetles." They infest many cereal mills and their eggs were probably brought into the house with the prepared meal. These hatched and went through their various stages rapidly while undisturbed during the heat of summer, spread to other foodstuffs, and now seem to infest the entire dwelling. The surest remedy is fumigation with carbon bisulphide. It is now quoted wholesale at 31 cents per pound in five pound cans, or $7.25 in five gallon cans, for the low grade commercial product.

It is used in well sealed places at the rate of one pounds to each 1,000 cubic feet of air space; in spaces incapable of perfect sealing, such as lofts and storehousss, as much as twenty pounds per 1,000 cubic feet may be required. In apartment buildings the process is not to be advised, as the gas is penetrating and might easily find cracks at the juncture of floors and walls to permit its escape to adjoining flats. If the house stands apart and no part of it is inhabited, the treatment is safe, for the escaping gas is quickly diffused in the open air.

The peas in this case may be cleaned and saved; the prepared meal is best thrown away after destroying all insect life in it by bringing it to a temperature of 150 degrees F. or more in a bake oven. All unsealed packages of cereals, flour, baking powder, spices, and snuff may be similarly infested. Only a considerable portion of a barrel of flour would be worth saving, though infested. It may be treated with the rooms of the dwelling and then have two or three inches of the top removed, whereupon the rest will be found clean and usable.

How I Overcame Insomnia

On the Links in His Mind.

For years my father would go to bed and fail to get to sleep before 2 or 3 o'clock. One evening I suggested he play a mental game of golf, and much to my surprise he was asleep by 11. Now, whenever sleep comes slowly, he begins mentally to play the course and inevitably sound sleep results. He has suggested this to other golfers and it always works. V. B.

Have you discovered relief from the agony of sleepless nights? Have you found some remedy for broken sleep? If so, won't you please pass your secret on to some poor sufferer from insomnia? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "How I Overcame Insomnia." Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned.

Address Antoinette Donnelly, Chicago Tribune.

Happy Frame of Mind.

I am an invalid and have had a great deal of agony from insomnia. I tried all the counting and sheep methods I ever heard of with no avail—in fact, they only made matters worse. So I fixed up a little method of my own, and it seems to have solved the problem.

When my sleep is broken instead of fussing around and thinking of all sorts of uncomfortable things I think of something slightly amusing or something nice that I have seen or read—anything to get myself into a happy frame of mind. Then I absolutely stop thinking along one line and let my brain muddle itself up and imagine myself in a boat being carried gradually on and on and on with a pleasant rocking motion, and next time I wake up it's day.

This might not work with every one, but it certainly does with me. L. P. P.

Before and After Marriage.

Stil Pretty Plump.

He used to say he admired my nice

plump figure and trim ankles; but we are married now, and, although I have lost twenty pounds, he compares me to a feather bed and says I am beef to the heels. So much for man's inconstancy. M. Q.

It Was Getting Late.

It never used to be too late to go anywhere, but now we are married. After supper the other night I said, "John, let's go to the show this evening." He nearly fainted. Then he told me it was almost 8 o'clock and about time I was going to bed. J. C.

When the Bills Come In.

Before I was married I told Jack that I was extravagant. He laughingly replied that a woman was not a woman unless she was extravagant. About a year after our marriage he came in with his hands full of bills and angrily said: "Mary, why in the thunder aren't you like other women instead of making me worry my head over these bills!" M. R.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

Suitors' Mistakes Contest.

Did you make a mistake that cost you the one you wanted to win more than any other? Was it an unkind remark, a selfish deed, a mean or envious ma, an error or tendency of your past come to light? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on "The Mistake That Cost Me the One I Wanted Most to Win." Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

In Honor of Willie.

There was a nice young man whose name was Will who used to call on me quite regularly. One evening as we were talking my kitten came into the room. Will petted the kitty and seemed to like it.

Finally I said, "I haven't named my kitten yet, as I could not think of a name; but now I will name it Willie in honor of you."

Will went home earlier than usual that evening and has not been back since. When I now meet him on the street he bows stiffly and says, "How do you do." M. F. R.

A Future Possibility.

Mary, a friend of mine, was much infatuated with a handsome young man. She had been warned that George had a violent temper, but as "love is blind," she could not believe George anything but perfect.

One summer afternoon Mary's mother had placed some fly paper around in the house, and Mary's pet collie got a piece caught on his fur. He ran, frightened, out in the yard, where Mary and George were talking. As he passed George he rubbed against him and the paper stuck to George.

That young man forgot himself and became so angry he gave the poor dog a hard kick, saying, "You dirty brute!" Mary looked at George a moment, and then handing his ring to him, said, "You are more of a brute than my collie, and I cannot love a man with such temper. You might kick me some time." F. A.

Looks Didn't Matter.

My cousin was called to duty in the army and before leaving called to bid his sweetheart good-by. After telling him she would write often she said he might find some girl better looking than she was and forget all about her. He said he didn't care much for good looks and would never forget her. He couldn't understand for some time why their parting was so cool on her part and why she never answered his letters. Mrs. M. H.

Beauty Cream from Lemons

How to use juice of lemons to clear, soften and whiten the face, neck, arms and hands.

Here is told how to prepare an inexpensive lemon lotion which can be used to bring back to any skin the sweet freshness of which it has been robbed by trying atmospheric conditions. Windchafe, roughness, tan, and redness are warded off and those telltale lines of care or of age are softened away.

The juice of two fresh lemons strained into a bottle containing three ounces of Orchard White makes a whole quarter pint of the most remarkable lemon skin beautifier at about the cost one must pay for a small jar of the ordinary cold creams. Care should be taken to strain the lemon juice through a fine cloth so no lemon pulp gets in, then this lotion will keep fresh for months. Every woman knows that lemon juice is used to bleach and remove such blemishes as freckles, sallowness and tan, and is the ideal skin softener.

Just try it! Get three ounces of Orchard White at any pharmacy or toilet counter and two lemons from the grocer and make a quarter pint of this fragrant lemon lotion and massage it into the face, neck, arms, and hands.

Genuine Orchard White bears the name, Edward Wesley Co., Cincinnati, Ohio.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

If you missed the Antoinette Donnelly series telling how she reduced Mrs. Eva Lane thirty-six pounds in six weeks, or how she added twenty pounds in five weeks to Miss Helen Barnett's weight, or how she corrected a head of dry, thin, falling hair and an oily scalp with dandruff, or the article on treating Miss Hill's complexion for pimples and blackheads, send a stamped, addressed envelope and the information will be mailed to you. Any other questions pertaining to beauty and hygiene will be gladly answered.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Children Laugh at Her.

"MAY I ask, through the Helping Hand, which does so many good deeds, for clothes for a bright little girl of 12? She needs everything in the way of clothing to that she can go to school. Her mother, a poor widow, was obliged to allow her to remain out of school last terms because the children sneered at her shabby little clothes! She will be deeply grateful to any one who may sympathize and contribute. Any larger garments which could be cut down for her would be acceptable. I shall be most thankful if you will give my address to any one who wishes to send through me help to this child.

"R. L."

I do not believe there is any cruelty in the world like that of children to each other, and I do not think there is any difference between boys and girls when it comes to the unkind treatment they accord each other. The variation is in kind, not in degree. They merely persecute one another about different things, that's all. Probably there may be some strong minded persons who would say that the child should be brave enough to stand the unpleasant experience for the sake of getting an education. But heroism is not common at this tender age, any more than appreciation of the benefits of schooling. It is only natural that the child should shrink from the sneers of her schoolmates and equally natural that her mother should not wish her child to be exposed to such treatment. There is hardly one of us who cannot understand what a child suffers in these conditions, by the memory of past episodes in our own lives. The circumstances may not have been so severe, but we know in a measure what the child has undergone. Because of this knowledge I shall hope generous contributions may be betsowed by those who wish to spare the little girl and her mother further pain and mortification. The kindly woman who writes will be glad to receive and bestow the gifts sent to the child and I shall be pleased to send her name upon receipt of a stamped, addressed envelope. I trust the applications may come quickly, as well as plentifully.

To Make Dresses Look Nice.

"I have seen so much of your kindness shown to others and I would like to ask a little help now for myself. I am a little girl 14 years old, and am trying to go to school. But I do not have such things as the other girls have and I certainly would be proud if some one would give me some ribbons or something to make my dresses look nice. I would also like some pieces for quilts. "E. C. W."

No, this is not the same child! Small girl nature is pretty much the same everywhere, and although these two children live far apart, their desires and needs are virtually the same. It will be a simpler matter to provide the second correspondent with hair ribbons than to get the more extended outfit asked for the other child, and perhaps those who do not feel themselves in a position to reply to the first appeal may be able to contribute something in answer to he second. I shall be glad to send the address of the second child upon request, accompanied by a stamped, addressed envelope. Confusion would be avoided by inclosing each clipping with the envelope, so that I might be sure as to which little girl was sought for.

Music to Exchange.

"Will you please ask through the Corner if any one has any player rolls of music to exchange for sheet music or a good guitar? I would be glad to make such an exchange. M. C."

Can any one respond to this request? If so, I will send the address of M. C. on receipt of a letter asking for it and inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope.

Copies of Stories.

"There are two stories of which I would like very much to get copies. One is 'The White Swan,' the other is 'The Convict's Violin.' There is still a third story which I desire much, but as it is many years since I first heard it the title has slipped my memory. I think the name was something like 'Francis' Violin.' It told the tale of a boy who loved his violin above all things. He enters a musical contest and composes a piece for it. I do not recollect the exact circumstances surrounding this contest, but at the end the boy triumphs and enthralls a large audience. After his playing he stands for a minute while the people cheer with all their power, and then sinks to the floor, dead. I may not have told this story exactly right, but if any one has a story something like it I would be so thankful to get it and would gladly pay the postage. M. W."

We have many devoted readers in our constituency, and it is altogether likely some of them can help this correspondent to get what she wants.

To Piece Some Quilts.

"I am a little girl, 11 years old, and would like ot know if any of the readers of the Corner have some quilt pieces that are not to be used at home, and, if so, if they would mind giving them to me. I would like to piece some quilts.

"A. S."

This is evidently the day of the little girl! Here is the third case of her need, in one form or another, which has come to our attention today. I trust some one may be able to grant her request and will write to me for her address, inclosing the stamped, addressed envelope I am always asking for and so often do not get.

No Clothes for Baby.

"I have a small baby 7 months old and I haven't seen my husband since the child was born. I have hardly enough clothes for it, and I would appreciate it so much if some one would give me a buggy for it. I can't go to work, as I nurse the baby. We live in four basement rooms, and my father, who is 80 years old, keeps me, so that we have a pretty hard time to get along. If some one could spare my baby a buggy and a rug and a few clothes for it I would be thankful. They could investigate me at any time they wanted to do it. A. P."

This is a hard case and I hope it may be relieved. There should surely be some one who would make the investigation she asks and endeavor to supply her need. I will send her address upon receipt of a request for it with stamped, addressed envelope.

Filling a Rose Jar.

"Two years ago I found in your column a recipe for filling a rose jar, and used it, finding it excellent. I have lost it and wish you would send me a copy in the inclosed stamped envelope.

"F. M."

On various previous occasions I have stated the impossibility of supplying recipes by mail. I am sorry to disappoint this correspondent and wrote to that effect, saying that I would print the recipe in the Corner, in spite of its having frequently appeared here before. May I ask that those who are likely to wish to use it will kindly cut it out and keep it, as it is not likely that I can repeat it again shortly?

Gather rose petals when the roses are in full bloom but not when damp with dew; pack them in a jar in layers two inches deep, sprinkling two tablespoons of fine dry salt upon each layer. Continue this, adding petals and salt daily, until the jar is full. Keep in a dark, cool place until a week after the last installment goes in; then turn the contents of the jar upon a board platter and toss together until the mass is loosened. Put with it the ingredients given below, pack in a clean jar, and put away to ripen. If kept covered it will keep fragrant for twenty years.

Formula for spices, etc., for potpourri: Half ounce of violet powder, rose powder, and heliotrope powder; one ounce of orris root, half teaspoon each of cloves and mace, quarter teaspoon of cinnamon, twenty drops each of oil of melissa and eucalyptus, ten drops each of oil of chiris and bergamot, four drops of oil of roses, two drachms of alcohol.

AGNES: I am sorry that I can tell you of nothing except diet and exercise that will accomplish a safe reduction for you. Human nature is contrary indeed and seldom will admit that things tried and true are best, and this is especially true of reducing. Of course, you do not like to diet, or exercise, either, for that matter, but who ever heard of a fleshy person that did? If you will keep in mind that all things that are worth while are hard to accomplish and set a so many pound reduction as your goal I am sure you will get into the spirit of the game and that is all it is—the game of keeping beautiful.

K. L. H.: A GREAT MANY FACE powders contain a certain percentage of white lead and are, therefore, injurious to the skin. Make sure that the formulas of the toilet articles that you use are harmless and pure. This is a case where the "ounce of prevention" is well worth taking. The following formula is an excellent one for face powder: Ten parts rice starch, five parts kaolin, two and one-half parts spirits of zinc, one and one-fourth parts oxide of zinc, three-fourths part magnesia carbon, one-half part chalk. To this your favorite perfume may be added. The formulas for sachet and cold cream will be mailed to you for a stamped, addressed envelope.

DISTRESSED: THERE ARE COMparatively few people in this world, and this is true particularly of women, that do not have at least one of the so-called beauty ills to contend with, so instead of allowing your special portion to make life miserable for you, make up your mind to belong to the fortunate few and this is how you should begin. To correct the enlarged pores: First scrub your face with hot water, soap, and a complexion brush, rinse with warm water, and then cold. If possible rub ice over the enlarged pores after the scrubbing. It is most effective in toning up the skin. Then apply witch hazel that has been slightly warmed. This is a splendid astringent. The superfluous hair should be removed by the electric needle, as it is in most cases permanent. With these two bugbears removed I am sure that you can drop your signature. Distressed. A stamped, addressed envelope, please, and I shall mail you the directions for facial massage.

Real Love Stories

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. "The Tribune" will pay $5 for every story published. Manuscripts will not be returned. Address Doris Blake, "The Tribune," Chicago.

SNARING A BIRD OF PREY.

UP to two years ago Celeste, so far as I know, was heart whole. However, D. Cupid had not overlooked her—he was just saving her. It was on the day that Harry arrived in our town that he of the unseeing eyes selected two darts, took careful aim, and fired.

Harry is a civil engineer; I am told that he is a good one. But the best thing he does is to fall in love, and, because he has a dashing manner, immaculate clothes, an infectious smile, and an inexhaustible stock of cleverness, he seldom had to love alone. He came to us from Philadelphia, from all reports leaving in his wake a trail of broken hearts as wide and deep as the Amazon.

I watched with interest his career in our city. At first he oscillated (yes, and osculated) among the acknowledged belles of the locality and then he discovered Celeste. He brought her forth from her corner, as it were, and showered her with attention. Every one was surprised that he was attracted by her, and because she was rather quiet, they predicted that it was only another of his "rush" campaigns and that he would soon drop her. But attracted he undoubtedly was and he was with her as often as possible.

Celeste, on her part, was flattered by his attentions and was having the best time she had ever had in her twenty years. She confided to me that she really loved Harry, but that she knew how frivolous he was, and she was afraid that the popular prediction would come true and he would tire of her.

In spite of everything, at the end of the year he was still all that could be desired as a devoted swain. I thought of little Celeste, and hoped that Cupid had used one of his permanent arrows, but I was a bit skeptical. It was not long after Christmas when she came to me with the worry that had been on her mind for some time. She told me that lately they had been having little "spats," and that he had been out to call on that silly Henry girl twice. She believed that the dreaded was happening. The upshot of the affair was that they had a quarrel, which seemed to be the end of everything.

Celeste was so miserable that I tried to suggest some means of bringing him back, but, hampered as we were by conventions, all my plans seemed too brazen. It took Celeste's fine hand to finally devise the plot.

She knew that rarely a day passed that he did not drop in at the library and that the new fiction was his choice of reading matter, so she wrote her inspiration on a piece of scratch paper and slipped it into one of the late novels, surmising that sooner or later he would be bound to see it. Two days after he did pick up the book, saw the slip of paper, and read:

"Children, did you ever hear of the lady killer? It is a blind bird of prey. It feasts on the hearts of adoring women and eats them out whole. Sometimes the vacant cavity heals, but the memory does not. The bird is stone blind. It is blind to its own shortcomings and the contempt with which it is regarded by its feathered brothers. It searches constantly for the fruit of happiness, which it can never hope to find, because it cannot see, so it goes on subsisting on women's hearts."

The effect was electrical. He was always erratic, and this little note did the work of letting him, so he thought, see himself as others saw him. He imagined that Celeste had been going about all day writing terse sketches of his character and had carelessly used this one as a book mark. He said that it had taken just this to show him how selfishly he had gone through life and that he could no longer feel irresponsible. He said a great deal more, too. Celeste, exquisitely happy, listened—and denied nothing.

This is a real story of real people. Demure little Celeste and Harry of the heart breakers were married this month, and I am sure they are fast exploding the theory that marriage founded on deception cannot be happy. W. M. M.

Doris Blake Says

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

YOU take up the thread of life under the influence of the airy sign of Libra, if your birthday comes this week. Libra is the exponent of impartial justice, rare good judgment, and an unusual insight into the affairs of men. By sheer force of unassailable right you attain and hold positions of authority.

Longfellow has said so well: "In this world every man is either a hammer or an anvil," and I know of no sign in the entire Zodiac that has produced more "hammers" than Libra. "Hammers" of the kind that have left their mark on history and have struck decisive blows for liberty and justice. Innumerable jurists, generals, and leaders of people have belonged to this sign. Greed does not enter into the plans of the typical Libra person and they are content to let the world at large profit by their work rather than pile up glory for themselves.

Though you are a born leadar because of this very fact you are a poor follower. The originality of your nature does not permit you to conduct successfully the prearranged plans of others. Do not let this discourage you because you know that in every organization there must be those who plan and still others who do, and rarely is either class so versatile that it can by any chance fill the shoes of the other.

You are possessed of a brilliant mind, but unfortunately your physique is not so robust, and if you are placed among people or conditions that prey upon your sympathies you are seldom strong enough to withstand the strain, becoming ill both mentally and physically.

You possess also a genuine love of home and family and you are loving and devoted to those dear to you. You seem to feel truth or falsity, affection or aversion, and are more apt to be influenced by the unexpressed thought than by that which is uttered. Your mind is much too broad to permit persecution of the ones whom you find weaker than you are and you pity rather than punish.

The countries of the north climate—Norway, Sweden, Alaska, and upper Canada—are the best homes for Libra people. These barren northern lands promise more success and congeniality than any other.

August and December are the most fortunate months of the year for you and Friday your most fortunate day.

You have a wide choice when choosing your congenial mate, but when you marry take great care to choose one who will help you to rise to greater heights. A marriage with Sagittarius, Nov. 23-Dec. 22, is apt to be sympathetic, as will a union with Leo, July 22-Aug. 22. But by some perversity of fate the inclination of Libra usually fastens on the less congenial sign of Pisces, Feb. 19-March 20.

Your colors are crimson, black, and light blue.

"Thou who wert born when autumn's breeze
Came rustling through September's trees,
A sapphire on thy brow should bind,
'Twill cure diseases of the mind."

If you were born this week you are

A Born Leader.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

What's Wrong with Him?

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 18 years old and am deeply in love with a boy two years my senior. My parents object to our marriage and prevent me from having anything to do with him. He has asked me to go to a dance with him. What would you advise me to do?

"DESPERATE."

What is the matter with the boy, Desperate? It always convinces me that there must be something radically wrong with the young man when the parents of a girl object strenuously to his company. It doesn't seem likely that parents will stand in the way of their girl's happiness and chances. Suppose you write and tell me more about the boy and why your parents object to him, and perhaps we can arrive at some point of argument by which your parents may be moved to a favorable decision.

Counseling Babette.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a girl almost 15 years old. One of my girl friends has been going with a boy, who now seems to be paying more attention to me than to her. The other day he gave her his ring, but he says he likes me best. I do not know whether to believe him or not. The other night a bunch of us were together and she dared him to kiss me. Of course I protested and said I did not allow it. So he said he would not. He has kissed my friend, whether she allowed it or not, but she says she liked it. Do you think he refused because he respected my decision or because he did not like me?

"Also would it be improper for me to speak to a boy whom I have never been introduced to but who is in my class at school? The only one of my friends who knows him refuses to introduce me, although she thinks him a nice boy. He has asked her to give his ring to me, but she said she would not, as she wanted it herself. Do you think I am old enough to go to theaters with boys?

"BABETTE."

I think the boy refused out of respect for you. But the fact that he gave the other girl a ring might easily be construed into a suspicion that she had first place in his affections, don't you think? I don't think introductions are necessary among classmates, but what a precocious youth to send his ring to you before he had met you! I think you are too young to go to the theater with boys unless you go in a properly chaperoned party.

Is It Too Conspicuous?

"Dear Miss Blake: (1). Is it too conspicuous to take a girl's arm while walking? (2). At a public dancing place is it right to ask a girl to dance if I do not know her? (3). If she accepted would that show that she was not modest? BUD."

(1). It is provincial, don't you think so, Bud? At street crossings it is another matter. There it is demanded of a polite young man that he take the girl's arm and assist her carefully across the street.

(2). No gentleman would do it. If you cannot arrange an introduction through the hostess or some common friend, wait until a better opportunity presents itself.

(3). It would show that she had little respect for herself, to say the least.

Trying to Get Acquainted.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a young bachelor and some few weeks ago saw a young lady waiting on tables where I was boarding, and she attracted me so much. She is a hard worker. I was trying to get acquainted then, but left there. Today I saw her again waiting on table. She is busy all the time; I never see her out to a theater or a dance. Now, I would like you to tell me how I can get more acquainted with her and how I could show her that I like her very much, and would go out with her to theaters and dances. Please tell me all, how and what to do to get more and more friendly. PHILLIP."

Why don't you go to the proprietor of the boarding house and ask to be introduced to the girl properly and then ask her if she won't go out with you sometime? That's the way to win an honest girl's appreciation and respect.

A Few Questions.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a few questions which I would like you to answer. When meeting a boy on the street who should say 'Hello' first, the boy or girl? When two girls and a boy are out for a walk, is it proper for the boy to walk between the two girls? How late should girls of 13 and 14 stay out at night? Is it proper for girls to accept candy from boys? KATHERINE."

It is the girl's privilege to show first signs of recognition, but if you are friendly enough to say "hello," convention does not demand that one wait for the other to speak first. The boy may walk either between the girls or on the outside of the walk. Girls of 13 and 14 should not be out later than 9 o'clock, and even then should not be out without an older person. Candy is one of the gifts girls may accept from boys with perfect propriety.

Wants Him to Buy Ring.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 16 and do not think it proper to have a girl. A girl I know tells everybody she is my girl. What can I do to get rid of her? She wants me to buy an engagement ring.

"DONALD."

How cruel of the girl, Donald, to pursue you thusly for an engagement ring, when, I suppose, all you can do is to keep out of debt yourself. Why don't you laugh at her? I think she is really teasing you. I would let her see, if I were you, that I was a good sport and could stand it.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Speeding the Parting Guest.

One fine evening in August, in company with the young man who is now my fiancé, I returned home rather late. He seemed disposed to linger, and as I was beginning to like him quite well, I was willing. Finally, as our little tête-à-tête lengthened, he asked for a kiss. Of course I refused. He implored. I still coyly refused. The request was repeated several times, and so engrossed were we that we did not notice any one on the porch until there was an impatient stir in the hammock and a voice we knew extremely well broke on the still night air with a rising inflection of anger: "Alice, kiss the young idiot and let him go home." We turned and observed for the first time that my father was reclining in the hammock, garbed in his pajamas. A. M.

A Feverish Moment.

At the age of assurance—16—I once volunteered to find out for my classmates—the age of a school teacher, who seemed a different age to every one of us. During the study period I was seated near the front, and, as there was nothing to claim her attention, I raised my hand and said in my most winning manner: "Miss M——, may I ask how old you are?"

"Certainly you may ask," said the teacher.

I stood there for a full minute before I grasped the real meaning of the statement and sank into my seat as a suppressed titter went over the room. The teacher was still calmly regarding me when I opened my book and started to study feverishly. P. S.

Dressed for the Kitchen.

One Wednesday evening I got to church about five minutes late and thought that this was the reason so many people looked at me in a curious way while I was being ushered to my seat. But when I sat down I saw that I had forgotten to take off my blue checked apron before leaving home. L. D.

Tighter Fit Next Time.

As I was hurrying to work one morning I dashed into an elevator, in one of the large buildings, just as the door closed. To my embarrassment and the amusement of the other occupants of the car I was obliged to call out, "O, please go back for a minute; I have lost one of my shoes." The elevator man complied with my request and I rescued my poor lost pump. You can readily believe that the trip to the tenth floor in that elevator had never before seemed quite so long, and during it I made many good resolutions to buy shoes so small, next time, that they hurt. L. G.

In Desperate Straits.

My most embarrassing moment was at a dance, where I had been dancing with a young man who was stiff and difficult to talk to. In desperate straits to make conversation, I told him about a dinner dance I had been to the week before in a neighboring town, going into a good deal of detail about the guests and entertainment. He let me finish and then said solemnly, "Yes, I know. I was there." E. F.

Lost to the World.

I was riding downtown in a crowded elevated train the other day and was lost to the world in an interesting story. Just as the train stopped with a jerk at my station I "woke up." Grabbing my book, handbag, and gloves, I made one wild dash for the door, yelling "Fourth floor, please." Everybody howled, and you can bet I couldn't get off that train fast enough. I. M. T.

FALL OPENING

SHOES seem to play a more relevant role each year. Shoes continue to advance in the fashion limelight. Style changes are frequent and radical, and are designed somewhat to conform to suit and dress fashions. For this Autumn we have a full range of all that is desirable and beautiful in the new and correct footwear.

The Fair

New and Beautiful Fall Gowns, Wraps, Suits, Frocks, Millinery and Dress Accessories

STRIVING always to delineate the mode in its newest expressions—aiming to present, to the many women who look to us for fashion guidance, all that is authoritative and correct—we have prepared for this Fall Opening a fashion exhibit that, we believe, surpasses in its completeness and exquisite variety any that we have hitherto undertaken. Many of the foremost designers of America and of Europe (for Paris still claims her place as arbiter of fashion), have contributed of their best to this assemblage.

Among the handsome models is an evening gown of flesh chiffon, with billows of cloth, over pink. Its dainty girdle of soft blue satin is embroidered in roses of beads to match the vines fashioned of beads on the panel of the skirt. $75.

In a charming afternoon dress of white broadcloth, gold brocaded satin is effectively combined to form the bodice and the sleeves, which fit tightly to the elbow, and there are joined by a flowing cuff. The coatee is banded with beaver, which runs around the armholes and is held in place front and back with buckles. $125.

Another afternoon dress employs black crepe meteor and green, in clever combination. The skirt is of black, falling in folds around the feet. The green forms a part of the side bodice, running into the skirt in fine pleats. White satin vest, collar and cuffs trim the bodice, and balls the sleeves and bodice. $85.

This Street Dress May Be Worn as a Suit

A smart street dress of broadcloth, in wood brown shade, has a deep band of fur at the bottom of the skirt, matching its fur trimming on the coatee. A large leather belt adorns the waist-line. You need not hesitate in asking this dress to do duty as a suit. $95.

An attractive frock which is delightful for wear in the first cool fall days, and equally good for winter, is made of brown Chuddah cloth. The bodice has a tan silk vest, held in place with a slip button buckle; the ends of the drape are held down with a large silk tassel. $75.

Oriental lines lend character to an afternoon dress of serge, combined with satin under-drape. The bodice and sleeves have Oriental embroidery of gold and silver thread. The sleeves are very new, lined with satin of blue and copper shade to lend tone to the tunic facing of the skirt. $90.

A Hickson Suit Revives the Bustle

This quaint style of our grandmothers finds new charm in this suit of brown broadcloth, with shawl collar and cuffs of seal, and lining of fancy Pussy Willow silk. The skirt clinging around the feet gives the wearer a distinctive smartness. $90.

Ready-to-Wear Sections, Third Floor

IN the selection of autumn apparel stocks, we have never lost sight of the practical dictates of economy—we have kept constantly before us our aim to offer, in every instance, a full measure of value. And the woman who wishes to spend only a moderate sum in the purchase of her fall outfit will find us splendidly prepared to serve her—prepared with stocks of moderately priced dresses, coats, suits, waists, that offer exceptional opportunity for choosing garments that will delight her both in style and in pricing.

Particular interest attaches to our collection of dresses for street and for afternoon wear. Serge or satin they must be, says Fashion, or if one would be prodigal, then both these fabrics may be combined. A point to be noted in these dresses is the new wide sleeve which Paris prescribes—either flowing or confined to loose cuffs.

Coats that Merit Your Inspection

They should win your approval, too, by their general attractiveness and desirability. They are full and graceful, with collars of fur or self-cloth, in rounded or square designs. The New in Suits for Women & Misses

Smart style and moderate pricing go hand in hand in these suits. You may choose from a large and interesting assortment—plain tailored and fancy models, button and braid trimmed. The fall shades—oxford, beet root, brown, green, black, and navy—and the fall materials—burella, serge, gabardine, fancy velour checks and novelties.

17.95 to 32.50

Girls' & Juniors' Apparel for Autumn

The rising generation has not been overlooked in these opening preparations. Quite the contrary, for here is a section full to overflowing with trim new garments that reflect the mode in charmingly youthful interpretations.

Frocks of serge, velvet and satin in styles becoming to any type and age of girls from 6 to 19 years. Whether for school, for street or for formal affairs, there is a pretty dress awaiting your selection.

Coats of pom pom, broadcloth, velvet, corduroy and velour; some full lined, others half lined; also more practical coats of pretty mixtures and heavier fabrics for school wear, in prettiest autumn colors.

A Showing of the New and Correct Autumn Modes in Millinery

WHO shall say what is the new idea in millinery? Who shall proclaim what is to be most fashionable? Here we are told that large hats are to be the vogue; there they advise us that small hats will have the call. Never before has this truth been so evident—"The beautiful hats are stylish—the stylish hats are beautiful."

THE high drape hats constitute one of the new ideas; then there are Lyons and panne velvet, as well as plush hats in colorings including black, negre brown, taupe, sand, purple and navy. The hats of one color with different color facings are quite in evidence. And the small hats are destined to real popularity.

IN the way of trimming the new hats are shown with fur and metal laces, while fancy ostrich, burnt goose and maline are strongly in favor. It is practically impossible to describe the various models and their beautiful trimmings, as one hat is so different from another. Each one has its own individual beauty.

FOR street, for business, for bridge parties, for the dance, for theatre, for opera, we have collections of millinery that offer you admirable choice. You may select from large hats and small hats, hats in rich new shadings, hats in delightful color combinations—hats trimmed in every unique fashion imaginable.

Original models and copies are on display. In every instance prices are moderate.

Millinery priced at $5, 7.50, $10, 12.50, $15, 17.50—and up to 47.50

We call particular attention to our untrimmed section, tailored section and children's section, where you will find the newest fashions at very moderate prices.

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK.

By JANE EDDINGTON.

The growing "live a little longer" idea goes to the foundations of life and finds itself next door to some of the most intimate of life's mysteries. Toothless twenties, obese thirties, bald forties, death in the fifties are opposed by this idea because each and all are preventable, mostly by the ounce of prevention.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

CABBAGE AND SAUERKRAUT.

EAT cabbage, simply cooked, and dressed with the best butter, and you are getting two foods which contain principles now recognized as fundamental to year in year out health. You must eat other food in abundance for your immediate needs, while you eat this combination, or its equivalent, for your maintenance through the years. To get the best service from the cabbage it must not be cooked, or overcooked, so as to be pink, neither must it be made pink by using too much salt, as in making sauerkraut.

The edible leaves of any plant may replace the cabbage in your diet—lettuce, spinach, kale, etc—but no food seed, and no fruit, apparently, will do quite the same thing for you; that is, for your animal cells—as does this eating of what is called the laboratory of the plant.

The cabbage question took on a serious aspect last winter and spring, when the price rose to something unprecedented. Some people studied the fall reports on the crop, and behaved in their own interests as any intelligent individual might have done, and as people may do this year if, when the reports of the year's harvest come they show the crop of any fundamental supply is short. If you live in either of the great cabbage growing states—New York and Wisconsin—perhaps you will find it easy to establish your own private storehouse for a year's supply, buying directly of the grower. Your state agricultural college will tell you how to store, or there are constantly appearing today national leaflets or bulletins on this most important subject of food storage from the United States department of agriculture. Such things are appearing so constantly that I cannot keep track of them, with the numerous other things of similar import.

If a family did not eat more than ten cabbages a year it might be profitable for it to know something about the growing and trade chances this valuable green is subject to. As long as we know no more about food than that we can buy it at the nearest grocery, we are unintelligent, and today we may be even unpatriotic.

There is an interesting study of causes of food prices possible in the fact that in the fall of 1915 cabbages sold at 15 cents a barrel and the barrel cost 75 cents. This summer, early, we saw a similar case in green string beans, which were sold far below the cost of growing them, while the grower paid 8 cents for the box to market them in. Look out for high prices of green beans next year unless patriotic impulses are supported by contracts, as they undoubtedly should be.

Kraut manufacturers in 1915 could buy cabbages, it is said, for as low as $8 a ton, and one year later had to pay $50 and $55 a ton, while last spring the individual buyer was paying at the rate of $300 a ton for this vegetable. The price was considered consistent because New York state in the fall of 1916 produced only 161,783 tons, while in 1915 the tons were 308,950, and the proportions similar elsewhere.

Questions of many sorts about cabbages and sauerkraut making have been addressed to me this year. I am no authority on cabbage varieties; see seed catalogues. It has grieved me to see everywhere in city gardens nothing but skeletons where cabbages set well. Earlier in the summer, when the truck gardener's cabbages sold at retail at 1 cent a pound, I knew the condition as unfortunate and the general condition for the year unbalanced.

Neither am I an authority on sauerkraut making, but have received numerous requests for recipes for making it, even after I published the Iowa recipe, repeated below, which anyone may get by sending a stamp to the Iowa State College of Agriculture, agricultural extension department, Ames, Ia., for emergency leaflet No. 24, on "Making Sauerkraut."

In this recipe less salt is used than in any other I know of, only one pint to twenty-five gallons of cabbage, which is a rate of only ½ per cent. In all the recipes I have, if I remember rightly, more than 1 per cent or nearly 2 per cent of salt is used. Presumably the small amount recommended in the Iowa recipe is sufficient, and it is indeed fortunate that it is so, since the majority of people eat a destructive amount of salt. It is destructive to those minute canals which so frequently are roughly treated and break down, those of the kidneys, though they never report rough treatment as long as they can do their work.

The making of kraut commercially is considered a thing worthy of scientific attention, and the manufacturers have brought to America men skilled in the business to teach them methods. In European countries the cutting is a matter of experience, the kraut cutter being one of the well known figures in communities where large quantities of kraut are put up by each household.

In such a community in our own environs I found home made "silver thread" kraut advertised the other day, the term referring, it is evident, to the fineness in which the cabbage was cut.

But cabbage can be put up in cans by the cold pack method, and for health purposes it probably has higher virtues than the sauerkraut which, if canned after fully ripened, cannot deteriorate or grow too sour. Both of these are sterilized ninety minutes. As to drying cabbage, it is best to study the bulletins on the subject, farmers' bulletin 841, etc.

It is a discouraging fact that a large number of people expect with one trial to succeed with cold pack canning or with drying. I have known of people losing a large total product of canned goods this year just because they are incapable of following directions for anything under the sun accurately. They cannot even read and get every point because they have an idea that anything that cannot be mastered at one trial is not possible to them. Skill comes from much and careful doing. Mastery is not a thing of the minute or of one trial or two. It is hard to be courteous and at the same time tell people that when they lost all the beans they put up, or all the asparagus and other early canned products, they were to blame, not the method. The majority of people never blame themselves for anything.

The Iowa method of making sauerkraut is as follows:

"An ample supply of sauerkraut for winter use may be provided by following a few simple suggestions. The method and equipment are such that even those with but a few surplus heads of cabbage can preserve them in this way:

"Select firm, mature heads. Heads which have split and cannot be used for storing will make a good kraut. Remove the loose outer leaves, as these are tough and unpalatable. Halve the heads and remove the core. In coring take particular pains to cut out the woody lining of the core. Slice fine. A hand kraut cutter, costing from 50 cents up, is a good investment.

"A three or five gallon jar is a convenient receptacle for the home supply. In making kraut for the market, use barrels or half barrels made of oak. Thoroughly clean and scald the vessel. Place a layer of cut cabbage four or five inches deep and cover with a light sprinkle of salt, using the salt at the rate of one pint to twenty-five gallons. Next, tamp until the juice begins to show on top. Use end of block of wood attached to a handle for this purpose. Repeat process in the order named until the vessel is filled to within one layer depth from the top, tamping each time until juice shows plainly on the surface. Cover the surface with cabbage leaves and over this place a cloth. Cut a board to fit loosely, for a cover, and weigh it down with stones.

"To insure its preservation, the material must first undergo fermentation as with ensilage. This is brought about through the agency of lactic acid forming bacteria. It is important then that we supply the proper conditions for the growth and multiplication of these particular bacteria. The two requirements are the exclusion of oxygen or air and maintaining the proper temperature. The exclusion of air is secured by tamping. Kraut forming bacteria thrive best at about a comfortable living room temperature or a few degrees above. The time required for fermentation is governed largely by the temperature supply. In a cool place it will take many weeks. At a temperature of 75 to 80 degrees fermentation is likely to be completed inside of a month, when the kraut will be ready to use.

"About the second day after the kraut has been made a liquor should cover the surface. If this does appear, add more weight and pour in enough brine to cover the top. When fermentation begins a scum will appear over the surface. This should be removed every other day as long as it continues to appear.

"As soon as fermentation is completed, store in a cool place in the basement. If it is desired to hold kraut for summer use, replace the liquor with new brine made of one tablespoon of salt to each quart of water. Use boiled water and scald out the vessel. In removing the kraut from the jar, squeeze out as much of the liquor as possible. Repack in the new vessel and cover surface with brine. This should be done upon the advent of warm weather in the spring.

"Precautions:

"Tamp until firm and solid to exclude air.

"Hold in a warm room until fermentation is completed.

"Store in a cool place.

"Do not salt too heavily. Use about one-fifth pint of salt to a five gallon crock.

"Keep the scum removed."

To these directions I would add: Any woman who really wants to make kraut must remember that there is more to it than merely cutting up the cabbage and salting it. Let her read the above attentively and four or five times. Any woman who thinks a kraut recipe needs be no more than five or six lines long should read the above once, and then try to say all that it says in fifty words. It will be a good exercise in recipe writing.

Different seeds such as caraway and fennel seeds, also cummin, are used in making sauerkraut, to flavor it. Juniper berries are much used in Germany. Two cups of finely cut sour apples to four gallons of kraut are given in one German cook book, but sour apples cooked with the kraut perhaps make the more delicious dish. Long cooked in a fireless cooker this combination is fine.

Sauerkraut is particularly used with smoked meats, sausages, ham, and roasted rabbit or hare. With bacon alone it makes a good "one piece" meal.

ETIQUETTE

By ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

USING THE TELEPHONE.

AMONG the many other things of which inconsiderate people are guilty is their use—or shall I better say their abuse?—of the telephone. They make their calls, deliver and answer the greater share of invitations, as well as doing their shopping and ordering all by telephone, apparently unaware that though their own time and effort are saved, they are wasting the valuable moments of both friends and telephone operators. The former may be too polite to remonstrate and the latter are powerless, but in time the service will suffer.

But perhaps one of the worst faults of these people is the lack of cultivation and modulation of their voices. It sometimes seems as if they set the jangling telephone bell as their model and then attempted to surpass it, overlooking the fact that the bell is only to arouse and summon somebody, while a loud, harsh voice is difficult to hear and understand. Moreover, it is extremely unpleasant for people near the telephone to have to listen to a sharp, high voice speaking to some one else over the wire, a voice whose tones penetrate to and vibrate in the other rooms of the house.

The correct way to talk over the telephone is to direct the voice straight into the mouthpiece, and to speak quietly, distinctly, and not too rapidly.

If people would deliver their necessary messages in this manner and postpone their "chin-chins" and shopping to a more suitable time and occasion, it is possible there would be fewer service complaints, and it is certain there would be a more agreeable atmosphere in the neighborhood of all home and office telephones.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

ONE WHO IS LONELY.

IF in any office, store, or factory there is one among the girls employed who seems to hold herself aloof from her associates the other girls ought to make a reasonable effort toward friendliness and include her in their chats and other diversions during their leisure moments. It may be that she wears a cold and forbidding manner to cloak a shyness that is hard to overcome. While she seems reserved and distant, she may be longing for a smile and a friendly word from those about her.

The following letter is from a girl who suffered from loneliness, not because she was timid and reserved but more because she did not appreciate the kindness of her new associates until it was too late.

"Dear Miss King: I am desperately lonely, although I am working in an office in which there are twenty-nine girls and twice that number of men. Never before have I felt the need of friendship, nor experienced the desolation of a lack of congenial companionship.

"I am without family, but having been born and raised in a large city, I was not without a number of friends and acquaintances. Having lived alone since finishing school I have grown more reserved than I imagined, and not until I went to another city where I was unknown did I realize that it was not easy for me to form new friendships.

"About three months ago the manager of the office where I was employed was made general superintendent of the entire corporation and transferred to the factory office. The new superintendent was advised to bring his secretary with him. The young woman who was his secretary, however, did not want to leave the city, and as the position was offered to me at an increase in salary I took it.

"Now I find myself lodged in a city of 30,000 people and unable to count a friend or acquaintance beyond the 'how d' do' stage among them.

"All the people in the office seem to know one another so well that it has made me feel terribly alone. These men and women have lived in this town all their lives and are intimately acquainted with one another's interests and families.

"I suppose I am somewhat to blame for my lonely plight, as I believe I was a little cold to the girls' friendly advances when I first arrived. Not realising that I would ever desire their friendship or hospitality I remained aloof, and now that I really wish to make friends their overtures have ceased.

"I feel so miserable that I am actually on the point of giving up my position and going back to my home city. Would you advise me to do this, as I feel that I could hardly endure another month of this awful loneliness.

"GERTRUDE MCN."

Don't give up your position now, Gertrude, as that would be a confession of failure. If you make up your mind that you are going to be a success not only in your position but as a sociable being, and make an effort to carry out your determiantion, you can easily efface the bad impression you evidently made on your associates in the beginning. By your forbidding manner you undoubtedly repulsed their friendly inclinations, and you can hardly expect them to court your rebuffs. Since you are now disposed toward a spirit of friendliness you need only display a little interest in those about you and accept their overtures in a kindly manner, and undoubtedly you will soon feel that you are one of them.

Varied Activities of Women.

In many of the large factories in the vicinty of Bridgeport, Conn., where shells and cartridges are being manufactured, milling machines, lathes, drills and planes are being operated by women.

Miss Orpha J. Moss, traveling passenger agent of the Chicago and Northwestern and Union Pacific lines, has an annual pass on twenty different railroads and covers the whole nation in her work.

Rouge and toilet powders are so extensively used by Japanese women that there are shops that deal exclusively in this stuff, and are indicated by a small red flag, signifying the color which the powder will make the cheeks.

Mrs. John McDonough of Denver, Col., has given to the woman's state auxiliary of the national guard a ten acre tract of land on which are growing plums, cherries, peaches, and apples in order that the boys of the militia may have their fill of fruits as fast as it ripens.

Among the score of women who hold English titles are several who have been successful in writing. Among the most prominent are the Countess of Cromartie and the Viscountess Wolesley, both of whom have contributed several works of gardening which have proved of value now that the country is turning serious efforts toward avoiding a food shortage.

Single women in Sweden are allowed to serve on juries, but married women are barred.

New passport regulations forbid the issuing of passports to women to go into Mexico.

By a vote of two to one the Chippewa Indians at their council in Bemidji, Minn., extended the privileges of voting to their squaws.

Women are the rulers of the Island of Tiburon in the Gulf of California and the men are made to do all of the work and act as servants to their wives.

Wyoming has a roll of honor made up of the women volunteers who have enrolled for service in the war. It is to be kept in the vault in the office of the governor.

Women who applied for positions as life guards in Atlantic City have been rejected by the beach surgeon, who claims that they are not strong enough to man the surf boats.

Dr. Florence E. Richardson manages a 1,500 acre sheep ranch near Scotts Bluff, Neb. There are over 5,000 sheep on the ranch. Dr. Richardson has a national reputation as a psychologist and is the only woman head of a department in an American university. She also holds degrees from several institutions, and was the youngest woman to ever receive a doctorate from the University of Chicago.

Alkali Makes Soap Bad For Washing Hair

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain Mulsified Cocoanut Oil, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—Advertisement.

Doesn't hurt a bit! Corns and calluses loosen and fall off! Magic!

Few drops of Freezone take all pain and soreness from corns instantly

No humbug! Any corn, whether hard, soft or between the toes, will loosen right up and lift out, without a particle of pain or soreness.

Wonderful discovery by Cincinnati man

This remarkable drug is called freezone and is a compound of ether discovered by a Cincinnati man.

Ask at any drug store for a small bottle of freezone, which will cost but a trifle, but is sufficient to rid one's feet of every corn or callus.

Put a few drops directly upon any tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly the corn or callus will loosen and can be lifted right off with the fingers.

Freezone doesn't eat out the corns or calluses but shrivels or rather loosens them without even irritating the surrounding skin.

Just think! No pain at all; no soreness or smarting when applying it or afterwards. Try a little and see for yourself. It is surprising.

Few drops stop corn-pain

Take soreness from any corn or callus instantly

Women should keep freezone on their dressers and never let a corn ache twice. If a corn starts hurting just apply a drop. The pain stops instantly, corn goes!

Tiny bottles of Freezone cost but a few cents at any drug store.

DANDRUFF MAKES HAIR FALL OUT

25 cent bottle of "Danderine" keeps hair thick, strong, beautiful.

Girls! Try this! Double beauty of your hair in a few moments.

Within ten minutes after an application of Danderine you can not find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance.

Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all—you surely can have beautiful hair and lots of it, if you will just try a little Danderine.—Advertisement.

SKIN TROUBLE ON FOUR YEAR OLD BOY ITCHED

Face, Ears and Neck All One Eruption. Would Lie Awake Nights. Cuticura Healed. Cost $1.25.

"My little boy had eruptions on his chin, and in six weeks his whole face, ears, and neck were all one eruption.

The breaking out was in pimples and itched so that he would scratch till it bled, and he would lie awake nights. His eyes were pretty nearly closed and the eruptions have went down his back.

"I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment and sent for a free sample. When it was gone I noticed a change, so I bought a cake of Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment, and he was completely healed." (Signed) Mrs. E. Westendorf, R. F. D. 6, Waverly, Iowa.

It is easier to prevent skin troubles than to heal them. Clear the pores and keep them clear by using Cuticura Soap for every-day toilet purposes and touches of Ointment as needed.

For Free Sample Each by Return Mail address post-card: "Cuticura, Dept. H, Boston." Sold everywhere. Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c.

Movie Actresses and Their Hair

Did it ever occur to you that every movie actress you have seen has lovely hair, while the most popular count their curls as their chief beauty? In fact, many are leading ladies just because of their attractive locks. Inquiry among them discloses the fact that they bring out all the natural beauty of their hair by careful shampooing, not with any soap or makeshift, but with a simple mixture by putting a teaspoonful of Canthrox [which they get from the druggist] in a cup of hot water and applying this instead of soap. This full cup of shampoo liquid is enough, so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. After its use the hair dries rapidly with uniform color. Dandruff, excess oil and dirt are dissolved and entirely disappear. The hair is so fluffy that it looks much heavier than it is, while its luster and softness is delightful.—Advertisement.

Excellent Laxative For Elderly People

As we pass the prime of life the various organs of the body have a tendency to weaken, especially the bowels. Regularity in this important function is so essential to good health that old folks should be very careful to avoid constipation. A congestion of stomach waste in the bowels causes dizziness, headache, drowsiness after eating, biliousness, belching, bloat, piles, etc., and should be corrected immediately; it is the direct cause of much serious disease.

The most effective remedy for constipation is a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, and is drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It costs only fifty cents a bottle; is mild in its action, does not gripe or strain, and brings relief quickly in an easy, natural manner. Get a bottle of it for your druggist and keep it in the house; it is the ideal family remedy. A trial bottle can be obtained free of charge by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 458 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois, for whom this advertisement is published.

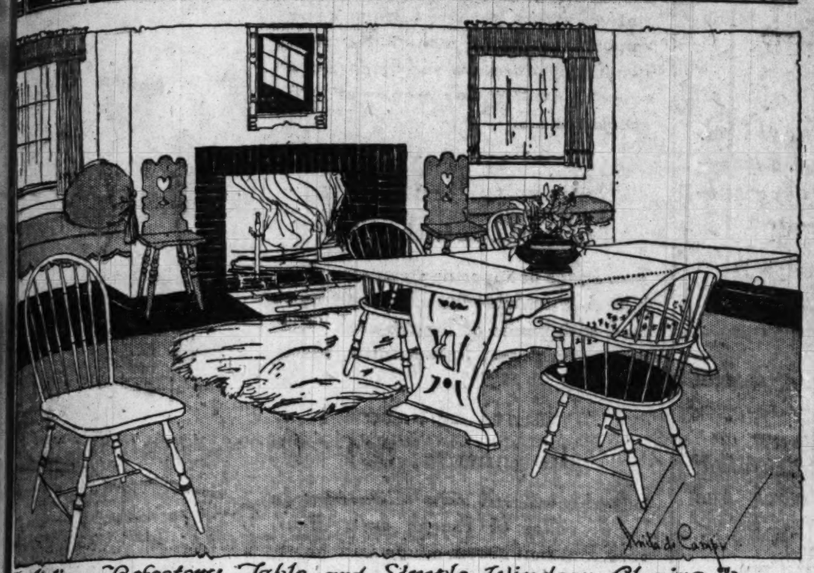
The HOME HARMONIOUS
by Anita de Campi



Italian Refectory Table and Simple Windsor Chairs.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

So great is the variety of dining room furniture now on the market that any sort of traditional room can be equipped from among it, any size of purse can be accommodated, and any sort of taste can be satisfied.

Though much may be said for the combined dining room and living room that is now so favored in small families, there are conditions under which the combining of these two rooms into one is not convenient. This is particularly true where the family is large. Extra kitchen service and general commodious room seem to require the regulation room devoted exclusively to use at meal times. So we will deal with set rooms today.

Genuine comfort and lack of ostentation display are the dominant notes in the most successful schemes. A great showing of china and loading of plate upon the sideboard is mightily frowned upon by the best authorities, yet few women have the heart to hide away their cherished belongings. I must confess to a weakness for old Sheffield and would be loath to conceal a good colonial tea set or set of Sheffield trays.

How to light the dining room is the most difficult of all problems. Ceiling center lights are not approved, yet they seem the only logical lighting for the conventional room. Side brackets, it seems to me, always need supplementing by table lights of some sort. Women usually like pairs of branched candlesticks and wax candles at tables, but men do not care for them, and they are hardly practical for daily use. A chandelier, simple in design and hanging rather low, is good. More useful perhaps is the silk shaded drop light. Something corresponding with the side wall in color is best. Semi-indirect lights are also usable. Colored glass domes have for long been barred that the fact of their demise is hardly worth recalling.

Mirrors, which were for a long time discarded for dining room use, are being revived. They seldom form a part of the sideboard as they did formerly, but are hung above the sideboard.

Nearly all of the most popular high priced factory made furniture incorporates in its making some period design, and the furniture is called by the name of that detail—it may be the queen Anne leg, the cabriole with claw and spade foot, it may be the tapering fluted leg of the Louis XVI. or the turned leg of the Jacobean time. Manufacturers realise that women are making a study of the history of furniture, and however far fetched some attempts at commercialized period styles are, at least the aspiration on the part of the manufacturers to copy something good is a step in the right direction and one that may eventually lead to original creations that will redound to our national credit.

Because pictures are not necessary in the dining room greater latitude is allowed in the decorative effect of side walls and draperies. Figured paper here is properly gay and festively hospitable. The darling of the day in dinner tables is without doubt the Italian refectory table. This may or may not correspond with the chairs with which it is used.

Refreshingly simple and neat is the dining room pictured here, in which no effort to conform to any period has been made. The table with its fixed top and console ends is a modern adaptation of the Italian renaissance, while the chair are modern Windsor, alternated with old English antique oak. The Italian piece conforms well with the other things because it belongs to the same class of furnishings; that is, it is all appropriated from the simple dwellings of the English, Italian, and colonial, and makes no attempt to imitate the intricate carvings of pieces found in foreign palaces. The wood on the table top is marproof, and all is finished in a warm brown tone that contrasts well with the hand finished plaster wall.

Fitted cushions would add comfort without detracting from the beauty of the chairs. The rug is gray blue, of interesting texture, while the striped green and sand curtains are of Scotch linen. The window seat and pillows are of green denim and the chair cushions might be of the same. The hearth, finished in tapestry brick, follows the favorite mode of today in having no mantel shelf, but above the fireplace is a plain colonial mirror. A white bearskin rug adds its sturdy textural note to the room. The runner placed crosswise on the table is of tan linen, and on it is a bowl of marigolds and astors, "fresh from the garden."

A proper dining room, with white woodwork and brown mahogany furniture, has the upper third papered in a brilliant patterning of birds, foliage, and flowers. A large oriental rug covers the floor, and the day cover for the table is of white linen bordered with a deep band of embroidery in which the flowers are traced from the wall paper and done in colored silk thread to match. The chairs in this room are upholstered in diapered blue and brown haircloth.

In a fine Jacobean room where the walls are partly paneled in dark oak and the upper third of the wall is covered with dull green damask, the center light, an adjustable drop light, has a shade of dull green silk, heavily fringed. The chairs are upholstered in tapestry. On a side table wooden candlesticks are fitted with large red candles. An oriental rug almost covers the parquetry floor, and an exquisite Persian rug is used as a daytime table cover. The center piece is an antique brass vase, which is kept filled with flowers. The china closets have solid doors of oak panels matching the side walls.

Rather unique is the furnishing of a long narrow dining room. The end of this room toward the windows is furnished with a cunning breakfast set in citron green and mauve enamel, while the body of the room is furnished with a walnut dining room set. A long, narrow screenlike panel of Japanese fretwork is placed at right angles with the side wall near to the breakfast end at either side of the room. Without being an actual partition, and without interfering with the daylight, which comes all from one end of the room, the arrangement makes a pleasing break in what would otherwise be an ill proportioned space.

Remarkable for the capriciousness with which accustomed proportions have been reversed is a dining room, in which the table is a small round one, and the chairs are huge, overstuffed affairs, upholstered in large flowered linen chintz. The dining table has a tremendous silk shaded drop light above it. The host, who has an aversion for carving, has everything served from the butler's pantry, in what he calls yachtsman's style, all on individual large plates. A tea wagon is used for tea and coffee service.

Quite the opposite of this in general character is a straight line room, in which simplicity is carried to the point of being austere. The chairs in this room have extraordinarily high narrow backs, of solid brown oak, with square seats trimly upholstered in old blue velours. The glass in the windows, the upper part of the swinging door, and the doors of the straight high china cabinet is cut in small oblong panes, laid horizontally. This is particularly happy in effect.

Two tall pedestals, fully five feet high, on short legs, are placed near the window and surmounted by glazed pots of flowers. On the side table is a high urn of flowers, and a low bowl of fruit at the center of the long narrow dining table is flanked by two extremely high, three branch candlesticks, fitted with white wax candles. There was something ghastly about the latter until we proposed the use of yellow instead of the white wax to ward off the lugubrious suggestion, "Place candles at her head and feet." The side wall is in sand color, the carpet the color of blue plums, and the brown china cabinet is lined with deep orange. The candlesticks, bowl, and tray are of copper.

Answers to Inquiries.

MRS. I. S.: One large rug is generally preferred to several small ones. I should advise you to get a floor lamp. For your inside draperies use pretty striped sunfast—say, in rose and pearl, for instance. A simple and attractive way of making them is to have a pair of narrow curtains at each window, with just a little top valance between them, with a French heading and run onto the same rod. The sunfast draperies will extend to the floor and the thin voile curtains will come only to the window sill.

MRS. A. F. M.: Use a light and medium gray striped sunfast for your inside draperies. Yes, lambrequins are popular.

MISS CHRISTINE A. D.: The wall upon which you wish to hang pictures should never be covered with flowered paper. Any flat neutral tint would be good in this room. A light russet would probably be the best choice. A faun color paper figured in two tones, printed in small pattern, would be your best choice for the dining room. Yes, place a chair and table as you suggest. I would suggest your dispensing with the two side pictures in your diagram lettered "C." Use only the single picture in the center.

MRS. C. L. W.: Use wicker furniture for your screened porch. If you decide on gray furniture for your breakfast room, use a lighter gray and black awning stripe for your draperies in silk sunfast material. Have a gray rug and brilliant bits of color in the accessories. You might, for example, have a bird cage on a high standard in coral enamel with a moss green balloon shaped lantern, hanging from the center of the ceiling. Be careful in selecting your gray that you give it a yellowish tinge. You are right about the eight inch panes of glass. For the wall, use paper in gray and a few shades lighter than the woodwork. Use brown mahogany Adam furniture in the dining room. Repeat the gray wall paper color in the living room. Have the furniture frames in this room of brown mahogany or walnut. Since you have an old blue rug of satin damask brocaded in gray and old blue, with stripes of old gold woven into the fabric for the draperies. Use a large picture over the mantel piece and have it set directly to the wall. If you can get a canvas that will exactly fit the space above your mantel panel it will be better. Landscapes are very effective treated in this manner.

MISS MARGARET G.: In the living room, if you wish to disguise the fact that there was no fireplace in the mantel, stand a small one fold upright fire screen in front of it. The same plan might be applied to the dining room, or if you have a good oriental rug, suitable in size, you might place this on the shelf in the dining room, allowing it to hang straight down to or nearly to the floor in front of the vacancy. In the bedroom an old fashioned mantel valance would be suitable. This could be made of chintz to match the inside window draperies.

Mrs. R. L. E.: Have a bench or pair of chairs at your piano, a gate leg table, one or two comfortable upholstered chairs, and either a day bed or a davenport, a bookcase, one or two stools, and occasional tables. If you wish further information I should be glad to hear from you.

BAXTER: Use a light putty colored side wall. Grass cloth would be good and cretonne draperies in a tan ground, figured in olive brown and mulberry. Have a mulberry rug in this room. Use striped paper in palest putty color and light green with touches of mauve.

THE HOME YOU LOVE TO VISIT

Homes are just as different as people. They express character and taste, individuality and thrift, or lack of these things certainly and surely. Some homes are always inviting, cozy and comfortable. They carry with them the air of cheerfulness, of comfort that reflects itself in the characters of those who live in them. You have visited homes that even though expensively furnished seem woefully lacking in personality, where you never seem to feel at home. And then again you know cozy little apartments or homes, not quite so expensively furnished, that just seem to breathe the air of refinement and restfulness that makes a house really a home.

Isn't there something that you can do to your home, to round it out more completely, to satisfy yourself, your family and friends more completely? Or is it perfect now? Do you think that it is really saving to stint on house furnishings? Do you believe it to be good management to try to get along with the shabby, worn-out rug or patched-up furniture while spending money on entertainment outside the home? The Spiegel plan makes it easily possible for you to have everything you need immediately, without waiting, and to pay for these things while you use and enjoy them with money that ordinarily would go in little odds and ends and which bring no permanent enjoyment.

At Spiegel's you can pay as little as a dollar with your order and get some long-cherished home comfort and you can pay little by little afterwards, spreading the cost over a full year or more. Payments will be made to suit your purse and credit is cheerfully given you without asking. Your account is already opened here. You don't even need to ask us for credit. You simply make your selections from our wonderfully big assortment, six spacious floors crammed with beautiful house furnishings, and they will be delivered immediately without red tape or bother for immediate use.

News of the Shows

By Percy Hammond.

THE proximity of Camp Grant to this capital suggests that it might be feasible as well as patriotic for some of our progressive showmen to send their troupes to Rockford for performances during the soldiers' leisure hours, if they have any. Mr. Woods, the generous producer of "Parlor, Bedroom and Bath," intimates his willingness so to do, but fears that his piquant farce would be frowned upon by the generals as not a fitting recreation for youths rehearsing the bloody business of the day.

Last evening at Plattsburg Miss Laurette Taylor and her company acted "Out There" for the student officers, having traveled from New York for that purpose. In "Out There" Miss Taylor as a cockney nurse exhorts the London populace in Trafalgar square to enlist; but last night she changed the speech from a recruiting plea to a sermon on pacifists. The new lines will be retained in the play when it comes west, though Miss Taylor herself regards that journey a remote possibility, since she has become a permanent institution of the east.

Mr. Skinner performs so deftly with lettuce, oils, and vinegars in "Mister Antonio" that he is suspected of being one of those artless gastronomers described contemptuously by Miss Edna Ferber as "a man who mixes his own salad dressing." A fastidious student of the American drama, however, complains of imperfection in the detail of Mr. Skinner's kitchening. He precedes the oil with the vinegar, says she, a breach of culinary etiquette disapproved by the politer epicureans. Mr. Skinner confesses that his compounding is faulty, but argues that he has an artist's right to sacrifice utility to beauty. "A bit of stage business goes with the pouring of the oil," he says, "and it is better to spoil a salad than a good scene." THE TRIBUNE observer is willing to forgive him this infidelity (and others) if he will but omit the odious donkey with which he shares his roadside repast. The jackass, while it may be comic, is a loathesome beast, and it is probable that Mr. Tarkington's drama and Mr. Skinner's acting would be just as faultless were the obnoxious hybrid to be stabled in the village mews. How enjoyable it is to speak candidly of an actor without fear of retaliation!

There are soon to be fourteen theaters in one block in New York City, a condition which leads the New York Sun to complain editorially that visitors to the metropolis are discommoding the permanent residents. After lamenting the high cost of orchestra chairs the Sun proceeds hospitably to observe:

"One of New York's greatest assets is that great group of playhouses clustered about Longacre square. They bring to New York hundreds of thousands, perhaps millions of dollars a year, for many are the buyers for western houses who give their orders here, rather than at other commercial centers, because of the attractions of the Great White Way. Busy times in the wholesale district, crowded hotels and restaurants, record railroad travel, all testify to the drawing power of the theaters, and in turn contribute to the prosperity of the playhouses.

"But the New Yorker himself, unless engaged in a business immediately affected, is the sufferer. He is the goat. He has to buy his pleasure in a market in which prices are fixed by holiday visitors prepared to 'blow' themselves, or commercial buyers who through liberal expense accounts and the hospitable blandishments of the firms seeking their orders are indifferent to the high cost of pleasure."

Winthrop Ames, whose attitude toward the theater is similar to that of Mr. Lodge toward the United States senate—a bit aloof—is to do another naughty drama tomorrow in Baltimore. It is called "From Saturday to Monday," and, although from a respectable S. E. P. source, treats of unseemly week-end revels in a bachelor apartment. Miss Eva Le Gallianne will, no doubt, be good in it, and so may Charles F. McCarthy, once an associate of Edward Harrigan. He will impersonate the janitor who puts out the noisy women of the story. William Hurlbut wrote the play from a tale by Jessie Leach Rector.

Umbrage is taken with George Arliss for exposing the clay feet of Alexander Hamilton and others in his new play. One protestant cries that the actor, preparing for the rôle, must have gone to Trinity church yard and danced on the grave of his hero. Descendants of President Monroe and Congressman Giles are also insulted, but Mr. Arliss retorts with the remark that "it is easy to be good after you become a steel engraving." The play shows Hamilton in his liaison with Mrs. Reynolds when Mrs. Hamilton was out of town.

After the first performance of "The Scrap of Paper" in New York Monday night Robert Hilliard, the star, returned to his dressing room embittered by the knowledge that Edward Ellis had filched the honors from him. "Boy!" he shouted to the electrician, "take my name off the sign and put Ellis' up." "Never mind, Robert," answered Mr. Ellis from the adjoining apartment. "I attended to that myself after the second act." Mr. Hilliard plays an evil monopolist who is caught trying to corner the bread market; Mr. Ellis is a sententious spook who finds the incriminating papers, and Miss Carroll McComas is a noble New York girl with a passion for the peepul.

Though "Canary Cottage" is imminent, Oliver Morosco apparently has found no large lady to take the place of Miss Trixie Friganza, who has withdrawn. Miss Sophie Tucker's person and personality were considered as fitted for the task, but Miss Tucker declined to be separated from her jaz band. The play is musical and racy, telling of the indecorous week end of some sporty San Franciscans. Charles Ruggles, Herbert Corthell, and Miss Dorothy Webb appear in it.

Mme. Bernhardt will be seen as the wounded French soldier in "Du Theatre au Champ d'Honneur" in the second night of her Auditorium engagement, Oct. 8. It is in this that she batters the gates of heaven with the "Prayer for Our Enemies" containing the reiterated supplication "Do not forgive them!" On Sunday, the opening night, she will act both Cleopatra and Portia. The schedule for the other performances is:

Monday—"Du Theatre au Champ d'Honneur" and "Camille."
Tuesday—"Hecuba" and "L'Aiglon."
Wednesday afternoon—"Jeanne d'Arc."
Wednesday—"Cleopatre" and "Portia."
Thursday afternoon—"The Star in the Night."
Thursday—"Jeanne d'Arc" and "Camille."
Friday—"Hecuba" and "L'Aiglon."
Saturday afternoon—"Jeanne d'Arc."
Saturday—"The Star in the Night" and "Camille."

The Wilmington, Del., and Washington, D. C., publics are said to be highly pleased with Miss Billie Burke in Miss Claire Kummer's new comedy, "The Rescuing Angel." The performances in those cities are spoken of as "preliminary" to the regular season in New York.

The uxorious Mr. Ziegfeld went shopping for Miss Burke the other day and bought her a solid mahogany staircase costing $22,000 at the sale of the contents of Walbaum's gambling house in New York. It will be placed in Miss Burke's castle at Hastings-on-Hudson.

"The Passing Show of 1917," which has Rosie Quinn and De Wolf Hopper in it, will be the initial festivities at the new Studebaker, Sunday, Oct. 21, is the date. Later in the season Al Jolson may appear there in a fresh extravaganza intitulled, as Miss Tucker would say, intitulled "Good Friday." It is a sort of sequel to "Robinson Crusoe Jr."

Arriving in New York to be pictured as Thais, Miss Mary Garden gave to M. Goldfish, her impresario, the prescription for her leading actor. "I won't let a fat man come near me," said she, fiercely. "I shall look them all over carefully before you employ one. I want a thin face, and it must have a beard. Really, I do not see how a woman of artistic sensibilities can let a fat man touch her, unless he has been fortunate enough to make her very, very fond of him. The hero of 'Thais' is an ancient monk—imagine a monk fat as well as ancient! I myself manage to keep thin by harnessing some dull beast, making him my slave, and allowing him to bore me systematically for an hour or two every day. Hours of ennui keep hips away. Not that I am ever bothered by hips, but if I overeat my waist thickens up." The New York papers describe Miss Garden's hair as now being of a jeweler's copper tint, and they say that she wears with her afternoon frocks a necklace of the largest pearls in the world, symbolic of the tears of France.

The author of "The Man Who Came Back," Jules Eckert Goodman, may be identified as the writer of three other plays, the best of which, as entertainment, was the dramatization of Stevenson's "Treasure Island." He was one of many playwrights to undertake the work of putting the yarn into the theater, and the only one who was successful. Other works of his are "The New Generation" and "Mother." The first, as "The Man Who Stood Still," endured some time as a carrier for Louis Mann. When "Mother" was given its première in 1910 at the Grand, the producer, Mr. Brady, was heard to say, after an entr'acte riotous with curtain-calls, cheers, tears, and oratory, that he would not take $100,000 in cash at that moment for his rights in the play. He still owns them.

"The Pawn," by which Frank Keenan and others at the Garrick and Princess argued the forbidding improprieties of marriage between Americans and Japanese-Americans, has been withdrawn from the Fulton theater in New York, where Walker Whiteside portrayed the leading rôle.

Three performances of "The Judge of Zalamea" will be given by Leo Ditrichstein in Milwaukee this week previous to the first presentation on Sunday night at the Grand. A number of those Chicagoans who are interested in the theater will go to Milwaukee to see the play on Thursday evening.

Miss Katherine Grey, renascent, will evoke the spirits in the Pacific coast "Thirteenth Chair" company, while Miss Margaret Wycherley, wife of the author, and Miss Annie Russell perform similar rites in Philadelphia and Chicago. Still another cast will begin work tomorrow in Lancaster, Pa.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The difference between the continental farce adapted to American stage customs and the continental farce rewritten to suit American audiences is in the location of the bedroom.

In the farce adapted the ladies retire discreetly off stage. In the farce Americanized they retired as discreetly as before, but within full view of the audience.

Which is the difference in effect between the farce that was tried in Chicago as "O So Happy," and is being retried in New York as "Good Night, Paul," and "Over the Phone," which is George Broadhurst's latest contribution to the ante-cabaret joys of Broadway.

Of the two the Broadhurst play is the more amusing, boasting the strongest glimmer of intelligence and at least a suggestion of novelty. In this entertainment the heroine is an adventurous sprit living lonesomely in a New York apartment house.

Below her lives an artist chap, a Frenchman, or so we gathered from the better part of Henry Kolker's accent, who also is lonesome. Over the phone he has struck up a Longacre square flirtation with the lady above, though he imagines she lives blocks away. Falling in love with her voice, he pleads so ardently for a sight of her the evening of the play that she agrees to call on him. She will, she tells him, again over the phone, be with him in twenty minutes, and he is to leave the door ajar for her.

In less than two minutes a distressed female dashes into the apartment through the open door and begs his protection as a man and a gentleman. She has fled, she says, from a husband who was beating her with his walking stick. She will, if he insists, show him the cruel welts across her shoulders.

Being a chivalrous artist, however, he takes the welt for granted and begs the lady be calm. He will protect her. If she will do him the honor to lay aside her cloak she may remain his guest for the night and he will retire to his club.

The lady cannot remove her cloak, as it happens that she has come, like Monna Vanna, wearing nothing beneath but her satin slippers and her silk stockings. But she will, if he will permit the imposition, occupy his bedroom for the night and thank him for the highminded sacrifice of his retirement.

Thus she goes to bed off stage, and he starts for the club—she with the mental reservation that so soon as he is out of the house she will scurry upstairs and he with the idea that outside he will meet the lady of the phone and take her for a walk.

Of course nothing of the kind happens. For the remaining two acts the complications are made amusing by her attempts to escape and his effort to locate the expected owner of the voice with a smile. By the end of the second act he has uncovered her deception by finding her fully clothed and trying to escape. He is inclined, then, to be rough and to play quits with her by keeping her prisoner against her will. But she begs so earnestly that her innocent joke be not turned into a tragedy that he lets her go. And the last act concludes the romance by revealing her to him as his sweetheart of the wire.

Mr. Kolker, as those who saw him play the artist in "Our Wives," will realize, provides an eloquently and persistently sentimental hero. Alma Belwin is the lady of the adventure, W. J. Ferguson plays an amusing butler, and Will Deming a gay juvenile pleasantly stimulated by wines, liquors, and cigars.

Applying the pulmotor to "O, So Happy," Ralph Herz, who took over the play after its Chicago failure, has made a few changes in the original manuscript and is offering it at the Hudson theater as a Palais Royal entertainment with tunes. In Chicago there was a chorus of models to help out with the stage pictures and lend so much volume to the songs as their thin voices permitted. In New York he has dispensed with these, probably to reduce expenses.

"Rambler Rose" was expected to prove the musical comedy success of the week by reintroducing Julia Sanderson and Joseph Cawthorne as co-stars, and proving that they could do very well without Donald Brian, their associate of the last two seasons.

Proof that these two can do without Donald is not lacking, but there is nothing to indicate that they can do without a play. "Rambler Rose" is as devoid of originality as a public service commission's excuse for a wreck. And there is no music in the score sufficiently attractive to save it.

Again, Miss Sanderson is very pretty—prettier, it seems to me, and dainter in manner and method, than ever she has been since her "Fantana" days. But again she is a student at a girls' seminary, who runs away to Paris to meet an artist in his studio and attend a masked ball. This must be at least the two hundredth time that Harry B. Smith has rewritten that story. Usually it is overlooked because it is unimportant. But with the recent advent of the intimate and at least remotely sane musical comedy plot—such as those used as the background for "Oh, Boy," and "Leave It to Jane," "Have a Heart" and even "Very Good Eddie"—it is not so easy to accept the ancient form. So "Rambler Rose" rambles and rambles and arrives nowhere at 11 p. m. Even the favorite Cawthorne has nothing better than a half dozen well wearing jokes with which to assist, his songs being rather pitifully pointless.

I was unkind, or so I have been told, to intimate that Mme. Sarah Bernhardt should retire and spend the concluding years of her life in such peace and quiet as circumstances would permit and her friends could provide for her. She is, my accuser informs me, again in need of funds, and greatly in need of the stimulating influences she gains from the theater. Her recent illness was most expensive, she is indebted to her American managers for a considerable advance, and the current expenses of her entourage are something like $200 a day.

Which is a condition greatly to be regretted. And it was regret that prompted the wish that she might retire; regret that the great heart of this wonder woman should have prompted extravagances and charities that have kept her all her life in need of more and more money, despite the huge sums she has earned. The profits of her last vaudeville tour of America alone should have been enough to provide her with every luxury so long as she may live.

However, there is the compensating thought that she is doing the thing she most wants to do, and that by her own effort she is providing for those she most wants to have about her. The love and admiration in which we hold her, not only as the supreme artist of her generation but as the living spirit of France itself, bids us hope for the success of the tour upon which she has just embarked, even though we do regret the necessity that prompts it. BURNS MANTLE.

From Bryn Mawr to Melodrama

Miss Esther Cornell IN "THE THIRTEENTH CHAIR"

Miss Cornell, the harried heroine of "The 13th Chair," is a product of these prairies; she lived in Lawndale and studied at the University High school. Deeming an education no impediment to success in the drama, she went later to Bryn Mawr, where there is a serious college for women, and having acquired learning in that institution, became a supernumerary in Mr. Skinner's production of "Kismet." Appearances in "The Silent Voice" and "The Celebrated Case" preceded her present employment, at which she is most proficient.

About "Seventeen"

IT seems probable that Mr. Tarkington will have three prosperous entertainments in the American theater this season—"Mister Antonio," "The Country Cousin," and "Seventeen," which approaches the Playhouse. "Mister Antonio" represents his unaided work as dramatist. For "The Country Cousin" he had Julian Street as collaborator, although it is reported that all the repairs made to transform this successful play from its unsuccessful original, called "The Ohio Lady" when given in Chicago last season, represent the Tarkington sense of humor and character. Strictly speaking "Seventeen," as a specimen of play-writing, may not be classed among the Tarkington dramas—he wrote the story upon which it is founded, but he had no hand in fashioning it for the stage. That work was done by Messrs. Stange and Mears, young authors with no other play-title in their records—and then it was done over again, anonymously, by Stuart Walker, director of the Portmanteau theater. The latter's writings for his own players—such one-act pieces as "Nevertheless"—have exhibited a happy manner of treating themes of youthfulness, and it is reported that he has put "Seventeen" into charming form as a comedy of boy-life.

"Seventeen" is a whimsical study of the humorous phases of adolescence. It might be called a comedy of Clothes and the Girl, for it deals with the attitude of a 17 year old boy toward these important matters. Willie Baxter, the hero, falls in love with a fluffy little charmer who is visiting friends in his home town through the summer, and his ardor is so intense that his half-fledged soul gets completely tangled in the problem of wooing and of personal adornment for that great adventure. As a lover he is no favored child of fortune, for his girl is an all-around flirt who plays no favorites.

How Willie "swanks" around in his father's dress-suit, surreptitiously acquired; how he and his fellow swains nearly drive Mr. Parcher, the girl's host, mad with irritation; how Willie is forbidden the use of the paternal dress-suit; what wiles are employed to permit him to wear the sacred garment at the girl's going away party—these are some of the matters with which the story, and also the play, is concerned. They may seem trivial in cold statement, but to Willie Baxter they are the most important things in the universe, and Mr. Tarkington has depicted the brainstorms of the infatuated Willie with much sympathy.

"Seventeen" is a special production, but during the engagement here Mr. Walker will also offer new pieces of the Portmanteau type, by such authors as Robert Louis Stevenson, Padraic Colum, Alice Brown, and the ancient Hebrew poets responsible for the Book of Job and the Song of Solomon. The cast for "Seventeen" will be headed by Gregory Kelly, and will include George Gaul, Ruth Gordon, Lillian Ross, Lew Medbury, Judith Lowry, Beatrice Maude, Neil Martin, Morgan Farley, Paul Kelly, Henry Crosby, Edgar Stehli, Agnes Horton, Arthur Wells, Agnes Rogers, and V. L. Granville.

News Notes.

The Frohman company is soon to produce a new play by Edward Childs Carpenter called "The Three Bears." Miss Ann Murdoch and Jerome Patrick will probably be the principal actors in it.

Rehearsals have begun of "On With the Dance," a new play by Michael Morton, which A. H. Woods is producing. The cast consists of Robert Edeson, Julia Dean, William Morris, Eileen Huban, Corinne Barker, James Spottswood, Mary Newcomb, Ed Walters, Robert Schable, Claude Cooper, and Eugene Redding. George Marion is staging the play.

News-Items About Music

BULLETINS on the Chicago season thus early indicate that at least two orchestras from outside will contribute. That the Boston Symphony is to come to the Auditorium was made known in THE TRIBUNE some days ago as an item in F. Wight Neumann's enterprises. The Minneapolis Orchestra is to play in January in Orchestra Hall. The soloist, it is planned, will be Alexander Raab, the young Hungarian pianist who got a hearing with the Chicago Symphony last November: his conveyance with the Minneapolis musicians, if the negotiations for his engagement go through, will be a new concerto by Felix Borowski, tutorial head of the Chicago Musical College and the writer about music and the drama for the Herald.

The Minneapolis Orchestra has been reengaged for next May's North-Shore Festival.

Schumann-Heink is to auspice the Manhattan début of Miss Florence Ffrench, the young Chicago soprano whose undertakings to sing with Arthur Shattuck and the Minneapolis Symphony have been announced. She is to share the distinguished contralto's program in a recital the latter is scheduled to give there on Nov. 3. "I have," says Schumann-Heink, "sat in judgment on many aspiring youngsters; and out of a lifetime of experience I say that this Chicago girl may go as far as she cares to go on the road to distinction and success. The big lyric and dramatic parts of opera are for her, if she wish for them."

The Metropolitan, meanwhile, has issued its prospectus, with three new operas and two pantomimes listed as the novelties of the season, which will begin the same night as Campanini's—Nov. 12. The new pieces were the subject of a dispatch printed in last Monday's TRIBUNE. They are Mascagni's "Lodoletta," with a libretto inspired by Ouida's "Two Little Wooden Shoes," a story popular in the United States thirty years ago; "Marouf, the Wooden-Shoe Maker of Cairo," by Henri Rabaud, one of the conductors of the Paris Opéra; Liszt's "Saint-Elizabeth"; Henry F. Gilbert's "The Dance in the Place-Congo," a ballet-pantomime; and Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Le Coq d'Or," described as an opera-pantomime.

"L'Amore dei Tre Re," which heretofore has been regarded as essentially Ferrari-Fontana's opera, is to be revived for Caruso, with the lovely Claudia Muzio as the faithless wife. Caruso will sing in "The Prophet," too, with Julia Claussen in the part she had last season in Campanini's revival. "Faust" will be restored to the Metropolitan repertoire; and other pieces to be taken from the storeroom after a long time are Donizetti's "The Daughter of the Regiment"—which, as suggested here once before, would make an ideal implement for Galli-Curci, who is a superb soubrette, among other things—and Bellini's "I Puritani," that Barrientos may have variety in her schedule.

Wagner is represented in the prospectus by the Ring, "Parsifal," "Lohengrin," "Tannhäuser," "Die Meistersinger," and "Tristan and Isolde." Beethoven's "Fidelio" is kept in; so are Mascagni's "Iris," Borodin's "Prince Igor," Bizet's "The Pearl-Fishers," Moussorgsky's "Boris," and Gluck's "Orpheus"—all regarded as bad business at the box-office. Strauss' "Rosenkavalier" is not in this season's list.

Pierre Monteux, who conducted for the Ballet Russe in last season's two performances in Chicago, and Roberto Moranzoni, who made so good an impression here in the two visits of the Boston-Pavlowa company, are added to the list of Metropolitan conductors. The Boston-Pavlowa venture is further represented in the roster of singers by José Mardones, the excellent basso, and Thomas Chalmers, the baritone. Farrar, it is said, will have at least forty performances at two thousand dollars. She draws it—there! F. D.

The Greatest Question in Every Woman's Life

Right Off the Reel

By Mae Tinée.

THEY tell me that because the youngsters out at the Essanay in the Mary McAllister child company became so rambuctious, breaking sets, etc., it has been necessary to provide them with a nursery playroom of their own. Nothing like assuring temperament early, is there?

There is a strong possibility that our own Earle Williams will go to war as an ambulance driver. We always took him to be one of those "regular guys!"

It is said that the Fox studio, where Theda Bara is now working, is filled with black bearded, fierce looking Russian gentlemen who practice their national dances during interims. Some lively place it must be!

The motion picture rights of "Amarilly of Clothes Line Alley," by Belle K. Maniates, have been secured by Mary Pickford and the film will be exhibited in the near future.

Did you know that Eddie Polo, before entering pictures had charge of Young Men's Christian association gymnasium work? Neither did we until just recently.

"The Retreat of the Germans at Arras" may be seen at the Palace this week, beginning tomorrow.

Viola Dana is soliciting for the tobacco fund of a New York newspaper.

According to Douglas Fairbanks' assiduous press agent, Mr. Fairbanks when not working, saves lives. Here's a story to that effect:

Little Florence Ostler with her father and mother were escorting Douglas through Salt Lake zoo. She became separated from the party and scurried behind the elk cabin to get a peek at the coyotes in their cage, and was not missed for the moment, due to the excitement caused by the appearance of Fairbanks.

The child became alarmed at the rushing antics of the coyotes and screamed at the top of her voice. This caused one of the elks to strike the child with its hoof. In a flash Fairbanks, Traffic Officer Warden, and the girl's father rushed to the rescue. Their rush frightened the elk who ceased his attack on the girl. Fairbanks was the first to raise the child and restore her to her mother's arms.

The screen actor proved that he was a past master at soothing frightened children, for the almost hysterical child could be calmed only by the sight of the man she had seen so often in the movies. He'll be a real hero to her now.

Marjorie Daw has thought of something new. She's making powder bags for the soldiers. Yes—face powder, you know.

"The Rise of Jennie Cushing" will be picturized for Elsie Ferguson. Did you read the novel, by Mary S. Watts? It's a good one.

Miss Mary Nash IN "THE MAN WHO CAME BACK".

Miss Nash has acted in Chicago in "The City," "The Ohio Lady," and in Miss Grace George's repertoire of modern comedies. It is told of her stage beginnings that she was in a Philadelphia resident company with Henry Kolker, Frank McIntyre, Taylor Holmes, Malcolm Williams, Edward Nicander, her sister, Florence, and others eminent in the drama. Her rôle in "The Man Who Came Back," in which she has been acting since its premiere, has been described as "the best opportunity given to any young actress in the last ten years."

Pslams of Life
by J. P. McEvoy

THE FLAT DWELLER SPEAKS.

O I read that Uncle Sam is sore at Sweden
And the item fills my soul with grief and ire;
If the spring was in the offing
You would hear me gaily scoffing
But the spring is one with Nineveh and Tyre,
And the summer days have vanished and the winter is at hand
(O the thought just makes my very buzzum sore),
For if we should break with Sweden
As per items I've been readin'
We would catch it from our loving janitor.

Now I have no great affection for the kaiser,
And of Austrians I cannot say I'm proud,
And I entertain no vulgar
Admiration for the Bulgar
Or the Turks or any others of the crowd;
No, indeed, I'm first and foremost for my country
And I'll back her till the enemy is treed,
But I'll make this small confession
That I hope we'll use discretion
With the Swedish, for the janitor's a Swede.

Yes, my janitor has got a Swedish movement,
And a way with him inscrutable and queer,
And should ruptures diplomatic
Leave their venom in his attic
Then the winter would be desolate and drear;
There'd be icicles upon the radiators
And chilblains would be clustered on each ear
And the undertaker's chortle
Would resound within our portal,
So I hope we'll bear with Sweden
Though our feelings should be bleedin',
For my janitor's a Viking
And the winter's drawing near!

Brosino and Brown:

"I see you're yawning. Is that the company you're in?"

"No, but I've been out late every night this week."

"When do you ever find time to sleep?"

"I go to church on Sunday."

"I don't think you love me any more."

"Sure; I'm thinking of you every minute of the day."

"You better give a little thought to your work or you'll get fired."

"When I married you I was a fool."

"Well, I haven't noticed you've changed any."

"What is it that binds us together and makes us better than we are by nature?"

"Corsets."

McVICKERS.

Noack and company:

"I went into a book store today and just as I was coming out I was grossly insulted. A boy had the audacity of calling me a cake. I came to you for consolation."

"Well, that's all you'll get."

"Well, I expect sympathy."

"You'll find that in the dictionary."

"Well, what is your opinion of that boy calling me a cake? Don't you think he had a great deal of cheek?"

"Yes, I think so; he might have called you mush or cracked wheat."

Jarrow: Speaking of queer adventures, I must tell you of the trying experience a traveling salesman had with a man who ran a hotel out in Kansas somewhere. There was no heating system in this hotel, the only warmth being supplied by a small stove in the office. One bitter cold night, when the wind was blowing over thirty knots per hour and the mercury was 20 degrees below on State street, this salesman lay shivering in his bed until 3 o'clock in the morning. Then, unable to stand it any longer, he jumped out of bed, put on his clothes, and ran into the office shuddering with cold. There he began to poke the fire, which aroused the landlord, who said to him: "Why are you up at this time of the night? You left a call for 6:30." "I know I did," said the traveling man, "but I couldn't stay in bed any longer in that room of mine. I was freezing." The landlord defended his hotel and the traveling man ran it down, and while they were arguing, the town doctor, who had been out on a sick call and who was almost frozen, saw the light in the hotel office and came in. As the traveling man turned round and saw the doctor's long whiskers all covered with frost and icicles, he exclaimed: "My God, man, which room did you have?"

ASK ME! ASK ME!

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

HERBERT: Do just as you please—you will anyway!

WILLIAM S.: Never heard of the company you mention. Take a little tip from mother and beware!

A. B. C.: Billie Burke is with Lasky, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York; Billie Rhodes, Mutual, Los Angeles, Cal.; Seena Owen, Fox Film, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, and Kathlyn Williams, Oliver Morosco, Los Angeles, Cal.

R. F.: A letter addressed to Rockcliffe Fellows, care of the Fox Film company, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, will reach him. I don't know what his next picture will be.

A. B.: Essanay is located at 1333 Argyle street, Chicago. Yes, why not?

JOLLY JOHN, JR.: Yes, I will be kind. A letter addressed to William Courtleigh, Jr., care of the Lambs club, New York, will reach him. I never danced with Wallace Reid, and so as to his prowess along that line I have no information. I should judge him to be a good dancer—providing he dances at all. Yes, he is in pictures. He has been married for quite some time. Hollywood, I suppose. A boy!

PAL: I like your name all right, but I don't like your letter. No need of you to have gone out of your way to make such a mess of it. Looks like something that the cat brought in. Why waste your time writing at all if that's the way you feel? Good-by!

BRUNETTE: Wallace Reid is married to Dorothy Davenport. He has one child. "The Squaw Man's Son" is his latest picture. Awfully glad you enjoy the column. Thanks for telling me that you do.

B. B. B.: Babie Marie Osborne was born in 1911. How old do you think that makes her? I imagine some people think bowlegs attractive. It all depends on who it is, you know.

CLARENCE: I have an article on how to write scenarios and a list of film companies that produce scenarios. I shall be delighted to mail you this article if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

SOLDIER: I'll do any little thing I can to help you! If you will just write and tell me what it is you want, and be assured it will be no trouble for me. At least I'll try my hardest to accommodate you. I am not an expert shopper, but I don't mind trying to become one. So tell the boys I am at their service and ready to enlist for active service any time.

Once Famous Chicago Homes Are Now Sartorial Temples

By Mme. X.

It's startling to move back to town and find the world of fashion in new hats already. You feel like a belated yellow butterfly if you wear summer headgear on le Boul' Mich' nowadays. Absorbed in war relief—as every woman who's worth her salt is—the eternal feminine in her, nevertheless, asserts itself with irrepressible force at this time of the year. Comfort kits, sweaters, mufflers, hospital supplies all are abandoned just long enough to renew plumage. The struggle is again on between the dressmaking authorities who wish to lengthen and narrow the skirts and the women who prefer to keep the jaunty and becoming short skirt, with its necessary adjunct, the neat, close fitting, high boot.

So many of Chicago's fine old houses, homes built by one generation and abandoned by the succeeding one, are now occupied by fashionable dressmakers that to the old Chicagoan the modern fashion shows that stalk with slow and stilted steps through once famous salons and music rooms are escorted by ghosts of a dead past.

There's the old Howard house in Michigan avenue where "Harry" Howard and his sister, Mrs. Frank Remington, grew up, and which was the scene of much gay hospitality in its day. The Poole house on Lincoln parkway should be celebrated as the place where were cradled the numerous and brilliant family of that name. Ernest Poole, the well known writer, and Abram Poole, his soldier-artist brother, are perhaps the most widely renowned of the seven children. The former is in Russia at present writing and, I think, doing Red Cross work. The others are Mrs. McFadon, Mrs. Walter Weyl, Mrs. Leverett Thompson, Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin, and Ralph Poole.

Perhaps the most conspicuous case of a mansion being converted into a sartorial temple is the MacVeagh house on the Lake Shore drive. Such notable ghosts or astral bodies escort the gliding, richly tinted models that it is quite distracting to the initiated specator. There are the Bryces—the famous English Bryces—the Aberdeens, the Henry M. Stanleys. In short, there was no distinguished person that came to our threshold during the years of the late Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh's social rule here who wasn't entertained with a delightful stateliness and dignified cordiality not to be matched today. Their shades obtrude on quite different ceremonies—unknowingly, to be sure—religious rites that seem to inspire some of the onlookers with an exalted fervor no church has ever excited. Ah, well, "tout lasse, tout casse, tout passe!"

War Relief Work Comes First.

After all, hats, gowns, boots, gloves, and furs once achieved, the main work of civilian life in these war days will be resumed with redoubled zeal. There is one thing, however, that many Americans ignore, and that is the urgent necessity of making all war relief work take precedence of literally everything else in life—family, business, society. It is still not unusual to hear a woman say: "I'm sorry I can't come to the committee meeting; I've a luncheon engagement." Nothing short of illness and death should be allowed to interfere with whatever task has been assumed by the individual that has to do with war relief work.

The great weakness of volunteer labor is the lack of a sense of responsibility that so often goes with it. In Canada they have solved this problem by giving a person only one chance. If you fail there through omitting to place war relief duties ahead of anything else you are not given a second trial. You are instantly dropped, and, so thoroughly has all this kind of work been coördinated there that there is no other place open to the—perhaps momentary slacker. Such an unflinching standard commands the respect and the utmost devotion of every man and woman in Canada. Its result is, on the whole, the most efficient working body of volunteers to be found today.

A most energetic committee of men and women is that managing that department of the Navy Relief society (a national organization) which is known as the Great Lakes auxiliary. In a way the Navy Relief is more official than the Red Cross, for, while the latter is run entirely by civilians, the Navy Relief is largely directed by navy officers who have at their command the facilities of the navy department as well as the coöperation of local committees in every community.

The society, which was organized in 1904 by the late Admiral Dewey, takes care of the families of officers and enlisted men of the navy and marine corps. It is not merely a war emergency organization, but is actually a benefit society whereby the man who has offered his life to his country in the navy service will feel and know, absolutely, that his family or dependents will be cared for in a thorough and efficient manner, relief being given regardless of membership in the Navy Relief society. It is the force that stands behind the sailor at his guns, the officer on the bridge, the man of the marine corps, steadying his aim, clearing his brain, fortifying his courage with the sure knowledge that whatever happens to him his dear ones will be taken care of.

Heretofore membership has been confined to men in the service. With war on, however, civilian memberships are sought and the members of the local committee are asking for support. This committee is headed by Capt. W. A. Moffett, U. S. N., honorary president, with Mrs. Moffett active president; Lieut. J. Allen Haines, U. S. N. R. F., executive secretary; Ensign H. E. Leonard, U. S. N. R. F., assistant executive secretary; John J. Mitchell, treasurer, and six vice presidents, Mrs. Ogden Armour, Arthur T. Aldis, Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, Admiral Albert Ross (U. S. N.), Ambrose Cramer, and Charles H. Swift.

Branches in Thirteen States.

This Great Lakes auxiliary is organizing chapters throughout the thirteen middle western states which come under the jurisdiction of this naval department, and which covers more than half of the personnel of the navy, for the great central agricultural districts of the country have beaten the seaboards in the number of enlistments for sea service.

The Navy Relief furnishes immediate and permanent aid to mothers and orphans of navy men. It provides vocational training for those left behind so that they may achieve their own independence. It secures employment for dependents. It maintains a library for the men at the stations and established some months ago a most successful canteen at the station which has been exceedingly useful and popular, as is proven by the fact that it is doing an $800 a day business. A permanent building will soon enable this enterprise to move from its present big tent, while three other canteens are being arranged for to fill the needs of the rapidly growing station.

Lieut. Haines is the executive head of the enterprise and all who desire to coöperate with it should either apply to him at the city headquarters, 713 Conway building, or at the administration building at the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

Apropos of canteens, those planned by the American Red Cross just behind the firing line in France will be no cushioned job for the workers who have volunteered. It will be the hardest kind of task, and no eight hour day business either. Battles are not fought under union rules, and these canteens are the first aid relief for the exhausted, filthy, nerve shattered, but unwounded soldier. The plan is to have a first line of stations where he can have food and drink, a second line where he can bathe and put on clean clothes, and a third line where he can sleep or rest.

This sort of work has been done in Europe by the "ladies of high degree," the gentlewomen of the land, not the laboring women with toilworn hands and sturdy bodies. Anxious to prove that American women were not of inferior mettle (or metal) our Red Cross asked for volunteers of a similar caliber and they stepped forward by the hundreds—delicate, sensitive, used to every sort of luxury, yet ready and eager to go to wait on the fighters of France for twenty-four hour a day stretches if necessary.

Canteen Work in France.

To go requires money as well as spirit, as the expenses of equipment, ticket to France, and cost of keep amount to some $2,600 a year. Mrs. George McKinlock, who was among the first to offer herself for this labor, has been doing such splendid work here in organizing others to go that she is being urged to defer her own departure until next spring. Though she will probably stay here and will work harder than ever, her heart will be in France with her son and only child, Lieut. Alexander McKinlock, who was one of the officers picked out from Fort Sheridan's first officers' camp to go immediately to France.

Both Miss Cornelia Conger and Miss Juliet Goodrich are preparing their equipment and setting their home affairs in order so as to be ready to go to France about the middle of next month to do canteen work. They are good linguists as well as being most capable young women.

Mrs. McKinlock and other Red Crosslets are organizing canteens for service at home here, where there is great need for such. They have bought a field kitchen and are practicing preparing food on it and serving from it. One canteen will soon be established in Grant park, while others will be set up in railway stations wherever great numbers of troops will be coming and going.

Another Chicagoan who is going to France soon is Mrs. Walter Brewster. She has been active in many war relief enterprises, but most especially in the cause of the French war orphans, for whom she is going abroad. She and Miss Conger and Miss Goodrich will all be greatly missed here this winter. But Chicago, by reason of the many vacancies in her social ranks, will hardly be recognizable this coming season. When she tries to be gay her smile will be like that of a person who once had fine teeth and has lost—say, every other one. We must go to Washington or France to see our friends.

Word comes, by the way, from France that John Root has been appointed an officer in the American camouflage division—a post he is preeminently fitted to fill, as, besides being a graduate of the Beaux Arts, he speaks capital French.

Among the few artists left in the Latin quarter in Paris is Jarvis Hunt's brother, Clyde du Vernet Hunt, whose light shone, glimmered, and went out in Chicago some twenty years ago. When he left here he joined the army and went to the Philippines, where he served as a quartermaster for many years, resigning eventually in order to devote himself to sculpture. A nephew of the famous Richard Hunt, he comes of a family that fairly reeks with artistic talent.

Even Jarvis now feels "the call o' the blood" and is dabbling in oil paints. When in town he lives in that hotbed of artists that flourishes in the Tree studios in Ontario, North State, and Ohio streets. No one is allowed there who isn't by way of being an artist of some sort.

Mr. Hunt has furnished and occupies the studio apartment formerly the home of the Reboris, and he has made a rich bower of it, filling it with art treasures of all kinds. He and Peter Dudley, who keeps house with him, give gay little tea parties and still gayer dinners and auction bridge parties there, for both are among the most hospitably minded of their sex.

Loss to Wide Circle.

A sense of irreplaceable loss came to Mrs. Edward T. Blair's wide circle of relatives and friends at the news of her death last Monday. She had for many years been closely identified with Chicago's social life; hers had been a hospitality of a quite especial order; her personality was a rare combination of unvarying kindliness and gentle gayety.

When the world—her world—which is returning to town—reassembles she will be more missed than many a more active and self-assertive social leader would be. Years of semi-invalidism were borne by her with a courage that increased as her illness neared its close.

Real Prince and Princesses Now Living on the Drive.

Prince Michel, Princess Bertha and Princess Ida Cantacazene

MATTERN PHOTO

Even the little children of Chicago are realizing the radical changes which take place when a monarchy is changed into a republic. It has brought to them two real princesses and one young prince—just as real as the ones in story books and certainly twice as natural. In the great castle of Mrs. Potter Palmer on the Lake Shore drive—surely a most appropriate place in which young nobles should live—are Prince Michel Cantacuzene, the Princess Bertha, and the Princess Ida. These young people are playing around just like all other jolly youngsters with their Chicago cousins and their new friends, most of these the children of parents who knew the Princess Cantacuzene, their mother, when she was Miss Julia Dent Grant and a frequent visitor at the home of her aunt, Mrs. Palmer. The children are the great-grandchildren of Gen. Ulysses S. Grant. Prince Michel Cantacuzene, father of the children, is a member of the Russian royal family and has taken a prominent part in the war. The children have come to America as a measure of safety during the political disturbances in Russia. They expect to spend the winter in Florida.

Women Ready to Boost New Liberty Loan

By Martha Kimball Wood.

THE woman's Liberty loan committee, appointed by the secretary of the treasury to direct the activities of women in the sale of Liberty bonds, has inaugurated a nation-wide campaign for the promotion of the next issue of the loan.

The United States is divided into twelve federal reserve banking districts; and the Liberty loan committee of eight appointed by Mr. McAdoo, of which Mrs. McAdoo is chairman, has appointed in each federal reserve banking district a woman director, who acts in an advisory capacity to the state chairman of her district and who serves as ambassador from the woman's Liberty loan committee to the committee of her federal reserve bank board.

For purposes of organization the committee has made each state a unit of organization. Each state has a chairman, who serves upon the executive board of the state division of the woman's committee, council of national defense, representing Liberty loan interests there. This state chairman has active charge and direction of all Liberty loan activities among all the women in her state. She appoints a chairman for each county, who, in turn, perfects a county organization.

The woman's Liberty loan committee also has established an advisory council, composed of the executive presidents of woman's organizations of nation-wide membership. There are also Liberty loan chairmen for Alaska, Cuba, Hawaii, the Philippines, Porto Rico, and for foreign countries not engaged in war.

It is the aim of the committee to interest every woman in the United States in Liberty bonds and to sell a bond into every home in the land. To this end the committee urges every woman not yet connected with a Liberty loan organization to attach herself to the one which will be established in her community; and if the community has not such an organization to communicate with the chairman of her state. In this way every American woman may become an active agent in the purchase of bonds, which will provide for the food, shelter, and maintenance of American sailors, soldiers, and marines, and at the same time make for herself an investment paying her a higher interest than the usual savings account and one which is guaranteed by the resources of the government of the United States of America, the richest nation in the world.

The Seventh federal reserve district comprises all of Michigan, save the northern peninsula; the lower counties of Wisconsin, all of Indiana and Illinois, save the extreme southern parts, and all of Iowa. Of this district Miss Grace Dixon, daughter of Arthur Dixon, is director for women; Mrs. Howard T. Wilson of Virden is chairman for Illinois, Mrs. Wilbur W. Marsh of Waterloo for Iowa, Mrs. R. H. Ashbaugh of Detroit for Michigan, Mrs. John Mariner of Milwaukee for Wisconsin, and Mrs. Frederick McCulloch of Fort Wayne for Indiana.

WOMEN IN WAR WORK.

The committee on women and children in industry of the woman's committee of the council of national defense held open house on Thursday at 984 Milwaukee avenue for the Polish women of the district. The room will be open daily for a social gathering, coffee will be served and conversation encouraged. Mrs. Raymond Robins, chairman of this committee, has two chief objects in view in opening this social center. It is in the midst of the seventeenth ward, where in one square mile live 72,000 people, most all foreign born, most of them Poles. These speak little English and are notoriously slow to assimilate. They know little of American ways and ideals and have few opportunities to learn. But here is a Polish interpreter and other trained workers who, in the guise of pleasant social intercourse, will try to drive home two things; first, that children are entitled to an education given freely by a free government and, second, that men will be scarce during the war and that the women who will be called upon to do their work in their absence must demand man's wages for man's work. Young girls will be taught that to undersell the men who are fighting for their adopted country is an unpatriotic and unsound thing to do. Later, when every one is a little more at home, lecturers will explain a Polish translation of the child labor law, speakers will tell of the patriotism due to the adopted country, and, under the direction of Mrs. Frances Wetmore canning classes, conducted in the two languages will be held twice a week, on Mondays and Wednesdays. Undoubtedly other classes will be started, too, and perhaps Red Cross work will be done.

Last week, in New York, a very important meeting of the national committee of the fatherless children of France was held. The issue was a possible affiliation with the Red Cross. However, the fatherless children of France American committee, being under the patronage of the French government, and working with a French committee, the move did not seem to be a wise one. Then, too, the Red Cross distributes no money to individuals, and the work of the fatherless children of France committee consists entirely in sending to individual French orphans whose names and addresses are forwarded to America by the French committee a yearly pension of $36.50. This supplements the government pension of an equal amount and makes it possible for the widows of men who have died for France to bring up their children at home and to give them the necessities of life.

Last year, during July and August, the fatherless children of France committee raised $27,000; this year during the same months $157,000. This would seem to prove that the American public as it becomes alive to the needs of the Red Cross grows more generous in other directions, too. There are still 100,000 French war orphans in France, and new ones every day, so even this large amount is small in comparison to what must be raised this winter.

Mrs. Walter S. Brewster of Lake Forest, who is chairman of the Chicago committee, is also a member of the national executive committee and went east for the meeting.

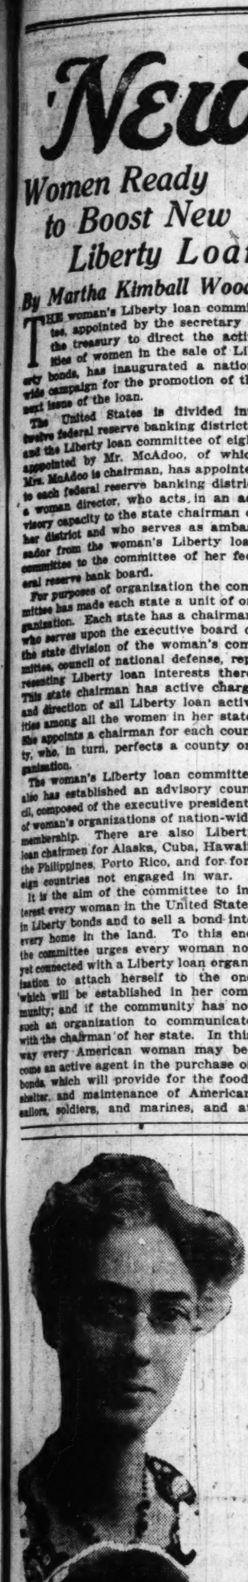
The class in wireless held at the Chicago College club will meet tomorrow at 9:30 a. m. under the direction of Malcolm Romberg. There is a demand for women wireless operators in the secret service. Any one interested is invited.

Mrs. Josiah N. Hobbs has been elected chairman of the war work committee of the Chicago Society of Ohio Women. Mrs. Allen Smart and Mrs. John T. Murphy will serve as vice chairman and Mrs. N. Creighton Turner as press chairman. The emergency committee will have permanent clubrooms at 607 Marquette building, where it will meet every Tuesday and Thursday.

The monthly meeting of the Homemakers' guild will be held tomorrow at 2 o'clock in the electric kitchen at 155 North Clark street. The electric kitchen has now become the permanent bureau of the Homemakers' guild. It has been fitted up by the members and is open from 12 to 1 o'clock for the information and help of homemakers. It is here that the problems of the homemakers have been brought together and discussed this summer during the canning bees. It is the aim of the guild to enroll 20,000 members this fall, and have them ready for the annual conference of the vocational art and industrial federation which will be held in the Hotel Sherman on Homemakers' day the last Monday in October. At the meeting tomorrow the local committee to take charge of the details of the conference will be appointed. During the week there will be daily noonday meetings of the different committees that are to assist at the conference which is to be in part an educational propaganda to help homemakers to do their part during the war, as well as meet the constantly increasing cost of food.

The Woman's Relief Corps auxiliary, G. A. R. will hold a district convention of the northern districts 1 to 10 in the Masonic temple drill hall on Thursday at 9 o'clock a. m. Mrs. John B. Seymour is in charge of the luncheon to be served at 12 o'clock in Mandel's tea room.

The monthly meeting of the advisory board of the Illinois woman's committee, council of national defense, will be held on Tuesday morning at 10 o'clock in the library of the Defense building at 120 West Adams street. This is an open meeting and all women interested in this work are invited to attend.



Mrs. Willis J. Burgess, Miss Mae Miller, and Miss Harriet Long

Mrs. Willis J. Burgess is corresponding secretary of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs, which will hold a two day session Thursday and Friday of this week.

Miss Mae Miller is the daughter of Mrs. Sadie B. Miller, chairman of publicity for the tag day which will be held on Wednesday for the benefit of the Protestant Association Home for Children at 439 South Normal parkway. Miss Miller will be one of a thousand taggers on the city streets.

Miss Harriet Long is a worker for the success of the "county fair" which will be given on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings by the woman's auxiliary of the St. Elizabeth hospital.

work in Chicago, and is turning out a large amount of work.

The official bulletin of the national committee on public information calls attention in its issue of Sept. 14 to the erroneous report that the government is planning to take from the pantries of private homes the canned and dried garden produce on which the women of the country have worked so hard during the summer. The food administration and the department of agriculture authorize the statement that there is no truth in the report.

The "Spugs" are apparently to get recruits this year from the woman's committee, C. N. D., which has started a campaign of "gifts for gifts" as the truest expression of the Christmas present. When Johnny writes his annual letter to Santa Claus this year he is to be encouraged to ask, not for a train of cars or a toy airship, or anything of the sort for himself, but he will doubtless request one for a fatherless child of France, some new dresses for his own particular Belgian orphan, trench boots for somebody fighting in France, or some money for use in home charity work.

Expensive Christmas presents to one's relatives and friends are banned in good society this year. The members of the women's committee want to make this Christmas season of our first year at war one of personal self-sacrifice for young and old, who are safe at home, in order to show those who are fighting for us abroad that we are all back of them in the truest sense of the word.

Mrs. Lambert O. Wile, chairman of the lecture extension committee, has returned to town and again will take up the active work of her department. The daily lectures in the library at 120 West Adams street at 11 a. m. will begin again Oct. 1. Each day there is a speaker on some phase of women's work. The lectures are free and the public is invited.

The following cable from Maj. Grayson M.-P. Murphy, head of the Red Cross commission to France, has been received by the Red Cross war council:

Systematic visitation of municipal tuberculosis hospitals in Paris has just been begun by the American Red Cross, which has secured permission to befriend the tuberculosis patients. It hopes that not only will the lives of these patients be made much more comfortable and their families relieved of anxiety but that making the surroundings more cheerful, providing additional food, games, better equipment, reclining chairs, and some form of recreation and entertainment, will result in the patients staying for longer periods. The use of the pavilions to their capacity would obviate the necessity of erecting additional tuberculosis hospitals with 300 beds, which would involve great expense and long delay.

The Red Cross auxiliary of the Windermere hotel is asking for knitters and will furnish wool and pay $1 a pair to those persons who cannot afford to work for nothing or to buy the wool for themselves. Mrs. Thomas Iglehard of the Windermere is in charge of the knitting committee of the auxiliary.

A new laboratory for Red Cross courses in dietetics is to be opened in the Tower building in the rooms now occupied by the knitting department on the sixth floor. Courses for lay workers are to begin immediately in rehabilitation and education of handicapped soldiers and sailors. The Illinois Society for Mental Hygiene is aiding in this work.

The women prisoners in the state penitentiary have answered the Red Cross call for knitters. Last week Mrs. Charlotte Greenbaum Kuh of the home charities department of the woman's committee visited the prison and took with her wool and enough needles to supply them. They all set to work immediately. There are thirty-eight prisoners now in the women's section at Joliet and they are all knitting or learning to knit. Mrs. Kuh says she is going to try to have knitting introduced into the county jail and the bridewell.

Mrs. William Nelson asks to have it stated that the Red Cross workers in the knitting shop in the Tower building do not sell knitted articles to the soldiers who come in and ask for them. The articles are for sale in some of the department stores, but the Red Cross feels it is more important at present to utilize all the knitted goods they receive for the boys in active service and actual want who can't go into a shop abroad and buy something to keep them warm.

Herbert L. Andrews of 4717 Kenmore avenue has donated two broché shawls to the American fund for French wounded, to be sold and the proceeds used for blankets.

Ration heaters and trench torches, such as may be made by children of the new junior Red Cross auxiliaries, are asked by the national surgical dressings committee. Mrs. Archibald Freer, chairman of that branch of the Red Cross, has announced to the Chicago chapter that her auxiliary has had word that these things are greatly desired abroad.

DOWNTOWN CLUBS

The regular monthly meeting of the Woman's City club will be held tomorrow at the Carson Pirie Scott tearoom. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m., and at 1:15 p. m. Walter H. Bennett, former state fire marshal, and John C. McDonnell, chief of the bureau of fire prevention and public safety of Chicago, will speak on "Fire and Accident Prevention." This program is the first of a series on the subject of "Fire Prevention" which will be given by the committee on fire and accident prevention day, Angus S. Hibbard, chairman.

The board of the Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs will hold a two days' session this week in Chicago. On Thursday at 10 o'clock the meeting will convene in the rooms of the Chicago Woman's club and on Friday at the same hour at Sinai temple. Plans in connection with the state federation general convention, which will be held here in Chicago Nov. 12-15 at Sinai temple, will be discussed.

The Chicago Political Equality league, which opens its fall season on Oct. 6 in the Florentine room of the Congress hotel, is organizing the study classes in public speaking, parliamentary law, and constitutional government.

The Chicago Woman's club will have its formal opening Oct. 3.

Blue Bird cottage in Boulder, Colo., which is supported by the Holiday House association, 1223 Masonic temple, will be kept open all winter, and any Chicago girl may take advantage of the opportunity to spend a restful vacation in the keen Colorado air.

At 1:15 o'clock on Saturday afternoon the Prairie club will leave Chicago for Naperville. There will be a short walk of six miles and a long walk of eight miles along the Du Page river. The party will return to the city at 8:30 p. m. The expense of the trip will be 80 cents.

The Rothschild & Co. Employés Social club will meet on Thursday evening in Room 512 Masonic temple. The evening's entertainment, following the business meeting, will be furnished by club members in a musical comedy. The social hour will be concluded with a bunko party, for which prizes will be given. The club announces future events as follows: Oct. 11, minstrel show, company of 20; Oct. 25, annual banquet in a downtown hotel, at which there will be speakers. During November the annual club dance will be held.

The South Carolina colony of the Illinois Colony club, with Mrs. Thomas Philip Casey as Chief, announces the first meeting of the season, Friday at 12:30 o'clock, at the Hotel La Salle. After the reception and luncheon, there will be a musical. The guests of honor will be Mrs. Frank Fulton and Mrs. George Greenburg.

The women of the Wabash Trinity church will entertain the Ladies' Aid association of Wesley Memorial hospital at a thimble party and luncheon tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock in the parlors of the church, Fourteenth-street and Wabash avenue. Luncheon will be served at 12:30 and a business meeting will be held at 2 p. m.

The Independent German-American Woman's club will hold its first meeting of the season on Wednesday at 2 p. m., in the Morrison hotel. Dr. John Dill Robertson, commissioner of health, will speak on "Hygienic Welfare of Children."

SOUTH SIDE CLUBS

On Wednesday tag day of the Protestant Woman's National association will be held with permission of the city council. One thousand taggers will work from 6 a. m. until 6 p. m. for the purpose of raising a sufficient fund for the maintenance of the Protestant Home for Children at 439 South Normal parkway during the coming winter. It is expected eventually to establish several homes of a similar nature in various parts of the city rather than enlarge the present quarters, as a great number of children in one home renders that home an institution. Mrs. Edwin S. Brough, founder and president of the association, will have charge of the location on tag day; Mrs. Clarence P. Rabe is general chairman of the event, Mrs. William O. Worth is chairman of supplies, Mrs. Charles A. Vincent is chairman of the headquarters room, 501 Masonic temple; Mrs. Sadie B. Miller is chairman of publicity.

The opening meeting of the Woodlawn Woman's club will be held on Tuesday, Oct. 2. It will be an all day meeting.

The Hamilton Park Woman's club will begin its year with an open meeting in the assembly hall at Hamilton park on Tuesday evening, Oct. 2.

"What Wonderful Gossards!"
"Never Before Have I Seen Such Beautiful Corsets"

You will say that, too, when you see our new Fall Gossards. Wonderful corsets—wonderful values. No woman can afford—particularly in times when wise economy is more than a watch-word—to ignore the savings offered by these Gossards—savings without sacrifice—because the simplest gown is given grace, distinction, vogue, over the fashionable silhouette of a Gossard. The most expensive gown loses in effect if worn over an ill-fitting corset.

Remember, please, that the Gossard—the original front-lacing corset—gently and with perfect comfort molds the figure into the new straight back and hip lines and smartly indicated waist. We have the Gossard that will enable you to become the ideal of your type—one of the nine ideal figures.

Our corsetieres are ready to serve you, to help you select, or to fit you properly if you desire.

Our new Gossard booklet—we will be pleased to give you a copy—illustrates the nine ideal figure types together with representative corset models. It enables you to determine your corset requirements at a glance.

Gossards at $2.00, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.00

Knowing how all prices have advanced you will be especially impressed with the incomparable Gossards at $2.00, $2.50, $3.50 and $5.00. At one of these prices you can find the corset perfectly adapted to your individual requirements—designed by the same genius which causes master gown designers the world over to specify "Gossard" as the foundation for their efforts.

Hundreds of thousands of women in all parts of the United States will buy one of the three Gossards described below within the next few days—one of the models is THE corset for you.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME.

Walking New Fad for Keeping Fit; Social Gossip

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—We do revert to a sensible fad occasionally. And there is a promise that this fall it will be walking. Mrs. James B. Duke has started it. Partly because Mrs. Duke likes to walk and partly, I have heard the birds whispering, because it is a sensible substitute for the everlasting and ever-exasperating eatandgrowthin method of keeping reasonably in figure.

The other Newport women who should walk have not taken to the suggestion with complete enthusiasm. But enough of them have indorsed it to furnish an idea to the shopkeepers. They are beginning to show the "accepted" walking costume and assuring their patrons that to walk in any other really isn't at all the ideal way to get the most out of the exercise. How can one really appreciate the beauties of the landscape if one is out of harmony with the style? Silly to try.

Hence we walk in a coat suit of tan color gabardine—closely resembling the army boys' khaki—the jacket short and in Norfolk style, and the skirt wide enough for comfort and yet narrow enough to preserve the line. We shall also wear a wide felt hat and carry a practical walking stick.

On several of her recent walks Mrs. Duke has been accompanied by Lieut. Gen. La Clerq, military attaché of the Belgian legation at Washington, who is the house guest of the Dukes at Chetwode.

It may be the army men had something to do with reviving the walking fad. They are doing a lot of marching hereabouts just now. A thousand of them the other day marched in from the Newport training stations, right up to Beacon Hill house, the home of Mrs. Arthur Curtiss James, and thanked her in person for all that she has done for them. She has, indeed, been a most enthusiastic patroness. The call was a surprise, and it took a deal of hustling to get the tea things ready. Being a good hostess, Mrs. James took the lads' minds off the necessary wait by escorting them over the estate.

First Big Fall Wedding.

New York has had its first big fall wedding, that of Miss Frederica Bull, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Frederic Bull of New York and Peapack, N. J., and Edward Welch Ciucas of New York City.

The ceremony took place last Tuesday noon in Grace church, the scene of so many of New York's notable weddings, but it is doubtful if any former occasion ever saw floral decorations more elaborate or a more interesting gathering than was made up by the friends of the bride and bridegroom and their attendants. The number of the guests was limited and only a part of the church was used. The pews flanking the center aisle were concealed with a shrubbery of southern smilax, profusely dotted with hydrangea blossoms, while the chancel was banked with machaelis daisies and clematis.

A departure was made from the usual form of procession to the altar. The ushers—Lord Clentworth, Nicholas F. Brady, Lowell M. Ciucas, Elton Parks, Joseph Gilman, Richard G. Wood Jr., Fayette Brown, E. T. Buckley, David Boies, George B. Munson, F. Willard Pollard, Burnside Winslow, and Justice Wilson—went first, dividing in semi-circle groups at either side of the chancel. Next came the matron of honor, Mrs. James Cox Brady, daughter of the Earl of Limerick, and the maid of honor, Miss Helen Bull, a sister of the bride. The bride was then escorted to the altar by her father, who wore the uniform of the United States army. Preceding them were the three little flower girls, Jean and Ruth Brady and Margaret Lee Haggin. The bridegroom was attended by James Cox Brady.

The bride's robe was of white satin antique, the court train embellished with point and duchess lace. The bridal veil was of tulle and was held in place with a Russian cap studded with pearls and tiny bouquets of orange blossoms. Mrs. Brady and Miss Helen Bull wore frocks of orchid color satin meteor veiled with white chiffon, and their hats were of mauve net. The flower girls wore Kate Greenaway frocks of white dotted mull and mob caps of white tulle. They scattered small old fashioned Dutch bouquets of pink rosebuds.

Like Newport for War Work.

It continues to appear that New York's only social events of interest for some time to come will be such weddings as that of Miss Bull. Almost every day I hear of some New York social leader who has elected to join the lingerers in Newport. Mrs. Henry Barton Jacobs is the most recent addition to the ranks of those who will remain out of town until after Thanksgiving. Of course, every one who is staying in Newport explains that the understanding that there are to be few formal affairs in town this winter makes it unnecessary to hurry back to New York, but the truth of the matter is that Newport war relief work is far more interesting and picturesque than such work could possibly be in New York, and such work promises to be society's chief diversion wherever society forgathers for some months to come.

It would have been quite impossible, for instance, for Mrs. Jacobs to have given in New York such a military party as that over which she presided at her Newport villa last Thursday afternoon. About 150 apprentice seamen marched to her cottage for tea and out of door games. Imagine such a contingent of lads in uniform filing up Fifth avenue and into the residence of a social leader! That would be a crowd gathering event that would necessitate calling out the police reserves.

Newport has had something besides the war to talk about during the last fortnight. Mrs. Harry Payne Whitney is, as I have remarked in several letters, the moving spirit in the Newport Art association, and it was through her efforts that Davidson's gigantic statue of "France" was recently unveiled there. I haven't seen the statue, but I have heard of it in the Casino, the reading room, and many other places. As a matter of fact, wherever one sees a group, one can be sure that there the pros and cons of Sculptor Davidson's art is being discussed. Some of the critics have averred that it is "too ugly for words," while others have nothing but the most enthusiastic praise for it. Meanwhile Mrs. Whitney says nothing. I imagine she feels quite well satisfied that her efforts have awakened a renewed interest in the Art association, her chief hobby.

Prize Winners at County Fair.

The Perry Belmonts, who entertained the members of the Japanese commission last week, now have as their house guest Baron Carpier de Marchienne, Belgian minister to the United States.

They are holding the Newport county fair this week and all the colony's farmers are taking part. On Tuesday Arthur Curtiss James was awarded the grand championship and the junior male and female championships with his Guernsey cattle. He also took seven first prizes and one second with his entries the opening day. Gov. R. Livingstone Beeckman and Henry A. C. Taylor won prizes with their vegetables and in the drilling Capt. Michael M. Van Beuren, with the Middletown constabulary, took the silver trophy away from Capt. Reginald C. Vanderbilt and his Portsmouth Home Guards.

And finally I have the honor of reporting another important local event in the fact that the firemen have sent Mrs. Frederick Nielsen an engrossed resolution, thanking her profusely for the gas masks she gave them, and intimating that they now stand ready to at any time go through fire and smoke for her. These respirators are identical with those used in the trenches abroad and are being adopted by all the firemen.

LONDON SOCIETY by LADY MARY

LONDON.—[Special correspondence.]—The chief objects of admiration and attention nowadays are the American soldiers and sailors who take advantage of their leave and come to London to "look round" the "little old city" that most of them seem to regard as a comfortable and homelike place.

In all the fashionable restaurants, military and naval officers receive smiling and admiring attention, and I really think that if they were able or willing to take advantage of all the "glad eyes" offered to them by charming women of gentle birth they would have every excuse for feeling decidedly pleased with themselves. I was dining at the Carlton last Sunday evening, and saw at many of the tables in the big dining room clean cut, smart looking men with high buttoned tunics either of khaki or of dark blue, who were apparently serenely unconscious of the large amount of interest and attention they were receiving from all the other diners.

One party of English people included a handsome rather stolid matron, two extremely pretty girls, and a lieutenant colonel who probably was their father. The two girls were greatly intrigued by the presence at an adjoining table of three good looking young American officers. Evidently the one desire of these damsels was to attract in the nicest way possible the attention of the young men. They, however, were obviously well brought up and just a little shy, therefore there seemed to be "nothing doing" as far as an exchange of flirtatious glances was concerned. Then I heard one of the girls say in a tragic voice to the colonel:

"O, dear! how awfully lonely those three Americans look; don't you think as their superior officer you ought to go and speak to them, and ask them to join us at coffee?" I heard the colonel make some rather brusque response that sounded like "Don't be a fool, my dear child; let the young men enjoy themselves in their own way; they don't want to be bothered"—a reply that evinced no sort of sympathetic knowledge of what any one of the party would desire under similar circumstances.

At another table I noticed Miss Emilie Grigsby, who some years ago used to be a rather famous personality in New York. Over here Miss Grigsby leads a secluded but distinctly interesting life. She is much admired in the small and exclusive circle into which she has penetrated. She is said to be the only American young woman who was ever allowed to be on terms of comparative intimacy with Princess Mary.

They met, so the story goes, at one of the embroidery classes held at the South Kensington Royal School of Needlework, over which Princess Christian presides. Princess Mary, who was only just embarking on her teens, took a great fancy to the beautiful American woman with her lovely hair with its blonde cendrée color shot with auburn, and her dark gray eyes. The two fell into conversation, and, after frequent meetings, Princess Mary was permitted to present her American friend to the queen. It is said that Miss Grigsby frequently went to Buckingham palace and has more than once week-ended at Windsor castle. Whether the intimacy has continued now that Princess Mary is "out," I do not know.

Miss Grigsby has a lovely house near Grosvenor square, where she entertains a small and exclusive circle. The house is full of art treasures, which include many famous religious pictures. In fact, Miss Grigsby at one time hinted at the possibility of entering a convent, for she is a devout Roman Catholic and spends many hours in religious contemplation and retreat.

However, the other evening she seemed to be in a sufficiently worldly mood to enjoy herself thoroughly. She was looking handsome and was beautifully dressed in pale mauve chiffon, with a mass of orchids at her waist. She still has lovely coloring and complexion, though she is not as slim as she used to be in the days of long ago, when she was chaperoned by Mrs. Dunlop Hopkins of New York and lived in a quaint riverside villa at Maidenhead on the Thames.

Another pretty American dining at the Carlton on the same evening was Lady Chetwynd. I am told that she is going over to your side of the water soon and will travel from New York right across to the Pacific slope, where she will spend a good portion of the winter. Lady Chetwynd is one of the best dressed women in London and owns pearls that are unique in the history of rare jewels. She was wearing a wonderful rope of perfectly matched pearls the other evening with a simple dress of white georgette. Her only other ornaments were her single stone pearl screw earrings and two extraordinary pearl rings. One is an immense pink and the other is a black pearl, and both are of record size.

They provide room for every part of the foot, yet they are not too large in any way, for a shoe that is too large is as hurtful to the foot as a shoe that is too small. Billiken shoes guide the foot, to grow just as nature intended it to. No tacks or nails to bother the little one's feet. Millinery, Suits, Coats, Gowns, Waists, Furs: Fall Opening Display

Our Block Long Second Floor will electrify all Chicago with the great beauty and great simplicity and dignity of the Opening Display of Millinery and Outer Garments for Autumn wear. As you view the brilliant display from any part of the floor, crowded with the Autumn season's style achievements, remember that they represent all that's new and beautiful—the combined efforts of Paris, for Paris still maintains her style supremacy—and America—rich, strikingly beautiful, and yet on the whole practical creations that re-echo the beauty wrought by the cleverest of the world's style dictators—a real achievement, heralding the productions of Cheruit, Bernard, Jeanne Lanvin, Paquin, Gabrielle Cheisel, Maria-Guy, and a host of others. As always, though, the opening displays are so practical that all Chicago finds the hats and outer garments they want, awaiting them—a display chosen with rare discrimination, holding at the selfsame time values such as no other store presents. We hold that it is a display none can afford to neglect seeing.

Originality is Pre-eminent in This Group of Model Hats,

both imported and American, so distinctive and charming and really not at prices that are prohibitive. Styles decidedly simple, still very rich, and best of all very becoming. The velvets seem glossier and richer than ever and are in far greater evidence than formerly; the trimming effects are unique and the bright and somber colorings quite win your heart; choice at..... $15 up to $25

It's velvet hat time by fashion's calendar, and so for Opening Week we've a wonderful group of velvet hats in a great variety of delightful models, the extremely high, narrow effects that are so stylish, the soft crown medium styles and the broad brim effects that turn up so coquettishly at various angles. Billy Sunday's Campaign Up Before Ministers

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Billy Sunday evangelistic campaign will be the subject of the union ministers' meeting tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock in the First Methodist Episcopal church, Clark and Washington streets. The meeting might be called the inauguration of the campaign because it will mark the beginning of a series of Bible and personal work instructions which will prepare the church leaders so they will be ready when the evangelist and party will be in Chicago March 3.

The speakers tomorrow will be the Rev. James E. Walker, Mr. Sunday's advance representative, and the Rev. Howard Agnew Johnston, leader of the personal work conferences.

Dr. Walker formerly was pastor of the First United Presbyterian church, Chicago. He will speak today at 10:45 in the Second Presbyterian church, Twentieth street and South Michigan avenue, on "Understanding the Times." Dr. Johnston recently has returned to Chicago from Los Angeles, where he conducted personal work conferences preparatory to the Sunday meetings which began there Sept. 2.

The officials in charge of the Billy Sunday campaign are:

The Rev. J. S. Ladd Thomas, Austin Methodist Episcopal church, general chairman; the Rev. John Timothy Stone, Fourth Presbyterian church; L. Wilbur Messer, general secretary Chicago Young Men's Christian association; the Rev. C. G. Kindred, Englewood Christian church; John Nuveen, ex-president Cook County Sunday School association, and the Rev. William E. Barton, First Congregational church, Oak Park, vice chairmen; J. E. Hiller, West Side Y. M. C. A., recording secretary, and Frank E. Mayer, 29 South La Salle street, executive secretary.

Chairmen of committees: W. A. Peterson, finance; George W. Dixon, site; L. J. Dodds, secretaries; A. M. Johnson, entertainment; the Rev. Henry Hepburn, prayer meetings; W. N. Northcott, men's work; J. Grafton Parker, ushers; A. M. Schoyer, business men's auxiliary; the Rev. Johnston Myers, personal work, and the Rev. E. Y. Woolley, speakers.

The Rev. William Netstraeter

A priest fifty years and the pastor of one church for forty-five years is the record of the Rev. William Netstraeter, pastor of St. Joseph's Roman Catholic church, Wilmette. The golden anniversary of his first mass will be celebrated next Sunday beginning at 10 a. m. Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will be present. Father Netstraeter will celebrate the solemn high mass, the Rev. B. Schuette will be assistant priest, the Rev. Joseph Laurman deacon, the Rev. Anthony Vollman subdeacon, and the Rev. A. Mescher master of ceremonies. The Rev. F. Schildgen will preach in English and the Rev. C. A. Danz in German. A banquet will be given at 12 o'clock and a reception at 2:30.

Father Netstraeter was born in Germany seventy-four years ago. He first came to Wilmette in 1867, when he celebrated his first mass, and remained as assistant pastor for several months. He then gave five years to churches in other parts of the state, founding St. Mary's church at Bloomington. In 1873 he was regularly appointed pastor of St. Joseph's church, Wilmette, where he has served continuously ever since. Arrangements are made for special train service from Chicago and intervening points.

The interdenominational committee of the central west for missions will hold a conference in Corinthian hall, Masonic temple, Randolph and State streets, Tuesday to Thursday inclusive. Mrs. D. B. Wells will lecture. Sessions will be at 10:30, 1:45 and 2:30.

Chicago Baptists will meet Friday evening in the Immanuel Baptist church, Twenty-third street and Michigan avenue, to recognize the young men who have enlisted in the army and navy from Baptist churches or whose families are members of Baptist churches. E. O. Sellers, recently returned from France, will be one of the speakers. There will be some of the enlisted men present. Reports will be made of the number enlisted from various churches and of the work done at Camp Grant and Fort Sheridan.

A conference on religious education of the churches of the Chicago presbytery will be held Friday at 509 South Wabash avenue. Among the speakers will be the Rev. R. H. Beattie and the Rev. Gerrit Verkuyl. The purpose is the establishment of classes in religious education in all Presbyterian churches.

A congress on war time inter-church work will be held at Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct. 1-4. The congress will be held under the auspices of the inter-church federations of the Federal Council of the Church of Christ in America. If you are eligible for admission to our course these men can equip you for success in advertising. To determine whether or not you have the necessary qualifications for this work we have arranged with a well known Vocational Director to analyze you, free of charge, before enrollment. This will give you an unbiased estimate of your qualifications, from a man who has analyzed and advised 10,000 men and women.

Our Graduates in Demand

Not only our graduates, but many of our students who have not yet completed the course are employed by some of the best known firms in America. Three of our students are employed by Armour & Co.; one is the head of the Educational Department of Mandel Bros.; one is in the Advertising Department of Montgomery Ward & Co.; one is with the Royal Baking Powder Co.; several are with Chicago's largest banks; one is Advertising Manager of one of the big motion picture film producing concerns. Others are in many parts of the United States and in foreign countries; one in Japan; one in China; several in Mexico and South America. Our graduates are in demand because employers know that we will accept no student who does not possess the necessary qualifications for assimilating our course and succeeding in advertising.

Course—Nine-Tenths Practice, One-Tenth Theory

Our instructors are all men who are actually engaged in sales and advertising work. There is not a "professional" teacher among them. They can teach you in nine months what it has cost them from ten to twenty years of hard work, and the expenditure of millions of dollars to learn. Under their personal instruction you can clip off at least five years of your struggle toward success.

Night Classes Start Monday, September 24th.

Arrange for appointment immediately as class accommodations are limited. Call or telephone Randolph 1575 and ask for Vocational Director. Evenings by appointment.

Vocational Director may be interviewed Sunday, Sept. 23 at the Institute from 9 to 12. Other hours by appointment.

Autumn.

ON a clear day when the south wind is gentle with the oak leaves and morning is fragrant with memories the scarlet tanager sings his last song. The dropping acorns hit the hard ground and dry leaves fall from the shagbark hickory.

On a gray day when the north wind brings mists and the morning has no memories, has only prospects, when anticipation strips the woods and makes the ground white, the chickadee sings his first song.

The east window opens upon radiance and the year is still young. The west window gives view of a red sun setting in mists which fill the valley, and the year is old. With crimson sumac and yellow poplar, scarlet maple and golden rod the year puts out the gay colors of its decay, inviting the jocund belief in the joviality of all processes which bud, flower, give their fruit, and decay.

Post meridian days—early dusk and evening chill, with prospect narrowed but with illusion strong. The year has raised the catch of the gate which opens to the bleak, wind-swept road, has swung back the gate and passed along. Colors flare and fade, but post meridian life is richer than youth. If the narrow way is ahead, the broad way lies behind and experience, in the kind process of decay, does not strip the future of its illusions. It gives depth, color, and substance to the present and does not rob the prospect.

ASTRONOMY

JUPITER. OBSERVED SEPT. 16, 1917. DRAWN BY S. F. MAXWELL.

JUPITER.

JUPITER is the largest body which our sun holds to its course by the power of its attraction. It is not only the largest of the planets but in mass is greater than all the other members of the sun's family combined.

In these late fall evenings it arises after the Pleiades and the Hyades, close to the Hyades and the star Aldebaran. As soon as it has arisen it dominates the sky, conspicuously the most brilliant light in the sky, conspicuous even when it encounters the moon.

Jupiter's diameter is eleven times that of the earth. The sun's diameter is ten times that of Jupiter. In comparison of surfaces Jupiter is 116 times that of the earth and the sun's is 100 times that of Jupiter's.

The great blue white planet has one-sixth the weight of the sun and the force of gravity on Jupiter is about two and two-thirds times greater than on the earth.

According to the accepted theories of evolution the planets are in a process of cooling, small ones, like Mars and the moon, being cold, fairly large ones like the earth and Venus being cool, but not dead, while great semi-suns, like Jupiter and Saturn, are boiling and seething with hot vapors. The rapidity with which a planet loses its heat depends directly upon the thickness of its blanket of air. On Jupiter the gravity pulls the atmosphere down until it is dense, thus preventing radiation, and causing the planet to resemble the sun much more than it does the earth in its characteristics.

The markings on Jupiter are entirely atmospheric and change materially from week to week. The dark belts are cooler gases above, and the white places hot clouds rolling up from below. They might perhaps be likened to the succession of clear and stormy skies on earth, as seen from the moon, but their resemblance to sun spots and solar tornadoes would be much more exact.

Jupiter is the only planet which exhibits atmospheric colors to any extent. The globe itself is pearly yellow, with belts across its face in blue and gray and white. Close examination reveals a great diversity of colors. The belts often show deep amethyst and purple in their centers and pink and salmon, and sometimes terra cotta, on their edges. In the light places there are frequently innumerable varieties of yellow, pale blue, and tan, while about the edges of the ball, where the sunlight strikes at a slanting angle, the colors fade to a uniform dusky gray.

Jupiter has nine moons, of which four are described as of undoubted "legitimate birth." They came from the parent, from the planetary nebula. The other five, all small, are supposed to have been captured by the planet, three when passing Jupiter outside of his orbit and two when passing inside. The two presumably captured when passing inside, all being asteroids, were forced into a course opposite to that followed by the other moons, and Jupiter presents the spectacle of a parent with satellites revolving some in one direction and some in another.

ART by Louise James Bargelt

British Painters in the McCormick Loan Collection

IN the loan collection of the late R. Hall McCormick recently hung at the Art Institute there are many landscapes and portraits by the master British painters of the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries. There are portraits by Romney and Gainesborough and Lawrence and Reynolds. There are landscapes by Turner and Wilson and Hogarth. And there is a wonderful rendering of a woman of wealth by Cornelius (O. K.) Janssons.

But there are also some portraits and landscapes by British painters whose work Chicagoans have had much less opportunity of seeing and whom all art lovers will welcome the opportunity of viewing.

There is a canvas by George Morland, for instance, which is not only delightful as a work of art but which is interesting as being the work of the first painter in England, and the first in Europe, too, after the great Dutchman of two centuries before, to glean upon the life at his door, on the farmyards and alehouses and inland waters of his own country, as the subjects for his genius to play upon. Morland's output in his lifetime was enormous, about 4,000 pictures, some estimate, an average of four a week for twenty years. Of course many of these must be forgeries, but, even so, the number is enormous.

The canvas in this exhibit shows the interior of a stable. In painting horses Morland was at his best. He had an intuitive knowledge of getting right to the root of things when animals were his subject, while the men in his pictures are often just shadowy wisps of things.

Morland's life from beginning to end showed a combination of hard work and hard drink. After his death biographies succeeded each other in rapid succession, all dealing with the multitudinous scandals connected with his name and of his queer, extraordinary taste and low manner of life. Posterity is concerned now, however, with the interest of his subjects and the excellent technical manner in which he fashioned them.

Morland was precocious. He began to exhibit at the academy at the age of 10, worked incessantly always, but was incorrigibly against all conventions and all restraints. He died in a spunging house in Coldbath Fields, and a few days earlier wrote his own epitaph, "Here lies a drunken dog."

"Dunkeld Ferry," by Nasmyth, is an interesting piece of work by a painter who was one of the original members of the Society of British Artists. By preference, the hedges and pasture grounds of the outskirts of London were his favorite painting spots, and his life was one of solitary suffering and unhappiness. But his landscapes are his raison d'être. He paints, as one can see from this example of his work, with an absolute fidelity to nature. He has been called the "English Ruysdael," or, again, the "English Hobbema," although his picture has hardly the feeling of a Ruysdael, nor the grace and dignity of a Hobbema.

Another canvas by an artist not often shown in this country is a landscape by Sir Augustus Wall Callcott. Hardly an inspired painter at any time, he has done much well executed work which has always brought high prices and had a certain decided following. His career and life resembled, as one friend put it, "those softly illuminated and gently flowing rivers he so often sympathetically painted."

John Crome's "Edge of a Wood" is simple, English, and extremely characteristic of the serious and sunny pictures he loved to paint. This painting shows much of his best power. There is dark foliage and a clear sky—not much more—and yet with so little he has given a true representation of solitude and stillness. He preferred the solemn, quiet corners of nature, and in the majority of his paintings has rendered them with an odd commingling of emotion and accurate detail.

Of John Opie and Richard P. Bonnington, of H. Dawson and J. Cotman and Lely and More Antonis, all of whom are finely represented in this exhibit, which occupies the largest gallery of the institute's new annex, more will be said next week.

Of interest to lovers of prints in Chicago and in the country about is the fact that the institute has placed on sale two new 25 cent prints in color. These prints are "The Cradle Song" by Arthur Hacker and "Hendrikje" by Rembrandt.

Probably no painting in the institute carries with it a greater appeal than Hacker's "Cradle Song." For some time it has been possible to secure a more expensive color reproduction of it, but this smaller size for 25 cents has already proven in great demand. The very simplicity of the picture is much of its charm. From a west window the light falls directly on the figure of the young mother, and the child in the cradle is also touched by the sun's rays. In the back a young girl knitting is also watching the babe in the cradle with the same absorbed interest. A table in back is set for supper and the child's gruel is on top of the cradle.

The other painting, Rambrandt's Hendrikje Stoffels, the girl who came into his home as his little housekeeper and who helped him so bravely through the years of bankruptcy and failure that followed the death of his wife Saskia, has none of the sentimental appeal of "The Cradle," but it is a fine piece of portrait work and considered the most valuable painting contained in the permanent collection of the institute. She is such a young girl, attractive in her honest Dutch frankness and spirit—not pretty in any conventional sense but possessing a freshness of skin beneath her yellow hair that denoted stalwart healthiness. The light is managed with the same marvelous fashion the artist was wont to render the lighting of his pictures.

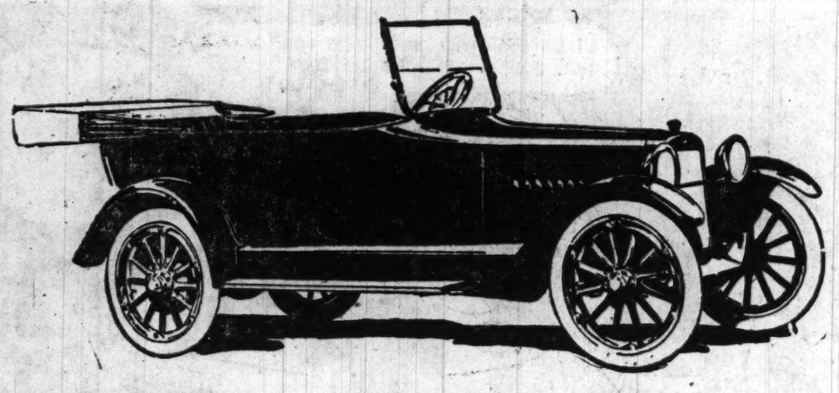
SAXON "SIX"

A big touring car for five people



8 Features of $5,000 Cars Also on Saxon "Six"

That shows how good a car Saxon "Six" really is.

It is priced at $935, yet it has 8 big features that are also features of $5000 cars.

How many other cars in the price-class ranging from $800 to $1150 can show the costly car features that Saxon "Six" can? Not a single one.

Buy a Saxon "Six" at $935 and you get the best value in that class—and you save $200 or $300.

But to get back to our first statement—that 8 features of Saxon "Six" are likewise found on $5000 cars.

Here are the features—Timken axles, Timken bearings, Stromberg carburetor, Remy ignition, Fedders radiator, Spiral bevel gear, Semi-floating axle, and Exide storage battery. All on Saxon "Six."

There is a $5000 car using Timken axles.

There are 3 $5000 cars using Timken bearings.

There is 1 $5000 car using Stromberg carburetor.

There is 1 $5000 car using Remy ignition.

There are 5 $5000 cars using Fedders radiator.

There are 5 $5000 cars using Spiral bevel gear.

There are 4 $5000 cars using Semi-floating axle.

There are 2 $5000 cars using Exide storage batteries.

Now, it is not reasonable to expect a car selling at $935 to have features that are also found on $5000 cars.

But Saxon "Six" has. That's what close and shrewd purchasing, efficient and economical manufacturing, and building in volume to get volume prices on materials has done for Saxon "Six."

They have made it a car that cannot be matched in value by any other car within $200 or $300 of its price.

Here's one more thing to remember: Saxon "Six" at $935 f. o. b. Detroit has a six-cylinder Continental motor.

Now read this closely, for it's important. Saxon "Six" is the only "Six" at less than $1000 with a Continental motor.

And Saxon "Six" is the lowest-priced "Six" on the market.

Our last word to you is—Buy your Saxon "Six" while it is still $935.

Come in at once and we'll tell you why we urge you to buy immediately. There's a reason.

What makes efficiency?

When that non-fighting hero of the Great War—Dr. Alexis Carrel—was given a new and higher-powered microscope, an unexplored world opened before him.

And a hundred thousand wounded soldiers have thereby been saved from death or mutilation.

It is the evolution of crude things that smooths the path to higher levels of achievement.

That which opens ways for the wiser and fuller use of men's powers, makes for efficiency—always.

In this newest development of the Twin-six motor, advanced standards of motor efficiency have been set.

It is high power brought to a surprising refinement—with a consequent saving of gasoline and marked economy in tires and upkeep.

With this refinement of mechanical detail is combined a notable achievement in body design—rare beauty of lines and modeling, plus the maximum of luxury in a motor carriage.

A better car—now—means greater possibilities of personal efficiency.

Seventeen distinctive body styles in open and enclosed cars in the Third Series Twin-six—3-25 and 3-35

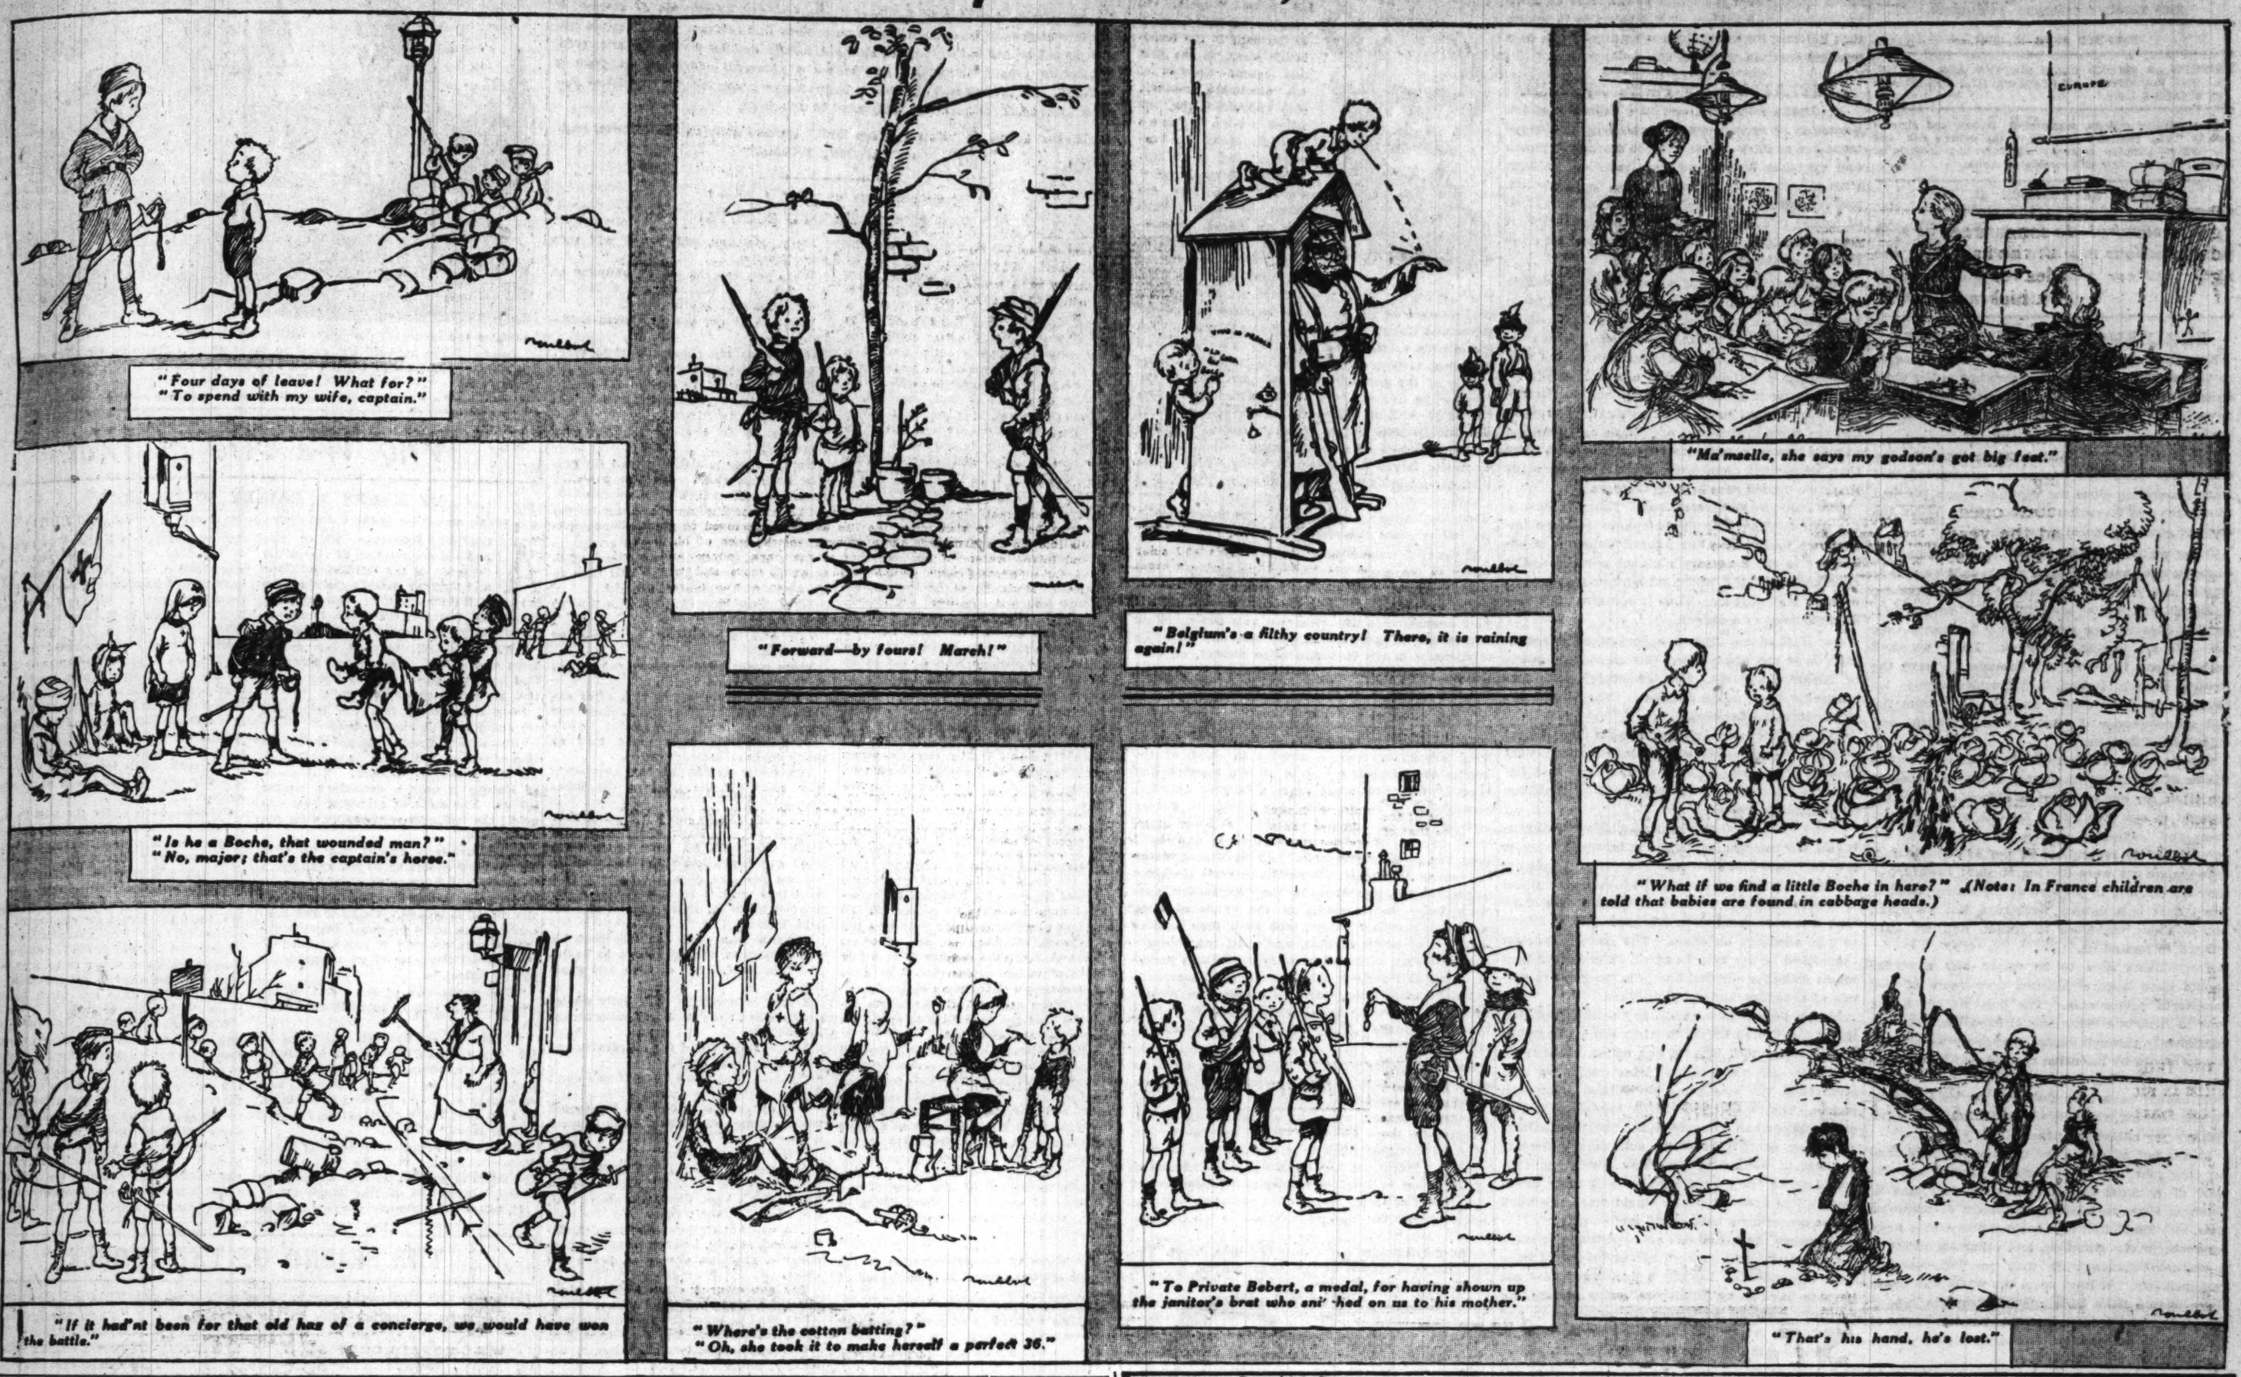
French Kids in War Time—By Poulbot, Famous Parisian Cartoonist



Plan Million Dollar Library Fund for Fighting Men.

"A MILLION dollars for a million books for a million men." That is the slogan of the camp library campaign, which will be introduced today in the churches and pursued actively for a week beginning tomorrow.

In every church in the city some mention will be made today of the plan to raise $1,000,000 to provide libraries for our soldiers and sailors, and early tomorrow morning, under the general direction of F. H. Rawson, the big drive will begin.

It is at the request of the United States government that the American Library association has undertaken the establishment and management of a series of camp and traveling libraries which will bring to every soldier and every sailor, either in camp or on active duty, the same library facilities which he would have in a large city.

Newton D. Baker, secretary of war, appointed a library war council of ten, with Frank A. Vanderlip, president of the National City bank of New York, as chairman. The Chicago representative in the council is Harry A. Wheeler, the Chicago chairman of the Hoover food commission.

There are thirty-two cantonments and numerous training camps throughout the United States. It is the plan of the war council to provide a regular circulating library for each of these camps and cantonments. In the thirty-two cantonments library buildings will be erected, which will be 40x120, one story high, and will accommodate from 8,000 to 10,000 books. These buildings will be used as central libraries and distributing stations will be provided in the Y. M. C. A. huts, the Knights of Columbus tents, and in all of the stores and mess halls. Every one of the great camps is a little city in itself, with postoffices, churches, office buildings, and even Banks, but until now no provision has been made for libraries.

The government has turned the matter over the library association, because it feels that, although books are not only a benefit but an absolute necessity to the soldiers and sailors, the work of providing books can be done most efficiently by the association, and the government needs all of its efforts for actual warfare.

The Camp Library Week plan is the outcome of the libraries which the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus have been collecting through the public libraries. The response to the call for used books and contributions of new ones has been answered open heartedly, but the choice of the books has been more generous than efficient. Reference books, books on the war, technical volumes, easy French books, which the soldiers and sailors ask for, have not been included in the collections.

By the war council plan the Y. M. C. A. and the Knights of Columbus will continue to collect used books and distribute them, but the purchase of new books and their distribution will be in the hands of trained librarians. By purchasing in large quantities a much lower price can be obtained from the publishers, and by putting the distribution into the hands of trained librarians —who will volunteer for the service—the entire business of providing our fighting men with literature will be made efficient.

It has been estimated that $1 will buy a book, pay for its distribution, and replace it when it is worn out. After the war many of the books will, of course, be worn past all use. As the camps are closed books will follow the forces abroad for camp and hospital use. Other books will be sent to permanent army and navy posts, and the remaining books will be used to upbuild the libraries which need encouragement to form new permanent libraries.

It is a recognized fact that much vice, discomfort, and that worst of all afflictions of the soldier, homesickness, can be obviated by the presence of good books. Both Germany and England have efficient camp library facilities.

"Our country! In her intercourse with foreign nations may she always be in the right; but our country, right or wrong."
—Stephen Decatur.

FOR DEMOCRATIC DEFENSE.

Not ignorance but the capacity of human nature to throw off the lessons of experience is the chief obstacle to progress. That is why men and nations have to be beaten well before these lessons will "take."

How much beating do we need to learn the lesson of the waste and danger of unpreparedness? Each generation since the republic began has had this lesson and forgotten the day after. When the sting is gone the moral goes with it.

Today we are spending money by the billions because we have practiced what we thought was economy in past years. All we were doing was running up the bill, but now we are compelled to pay arrears. In this case we are undeservedly fortunate thus far. We are paying in money. Later we shall probably pay in blood, but because we have the British, French, Italian, and Russian armies between us and the enemy we are saved from the full consequences of our unwise optimism and culpable indifference.

This has been said before. It is the outstanding truism of our situation. Yet it cannot be repeated too often, for our tendency is always to shirk the thought of our own folly. Especially the government and leadership of the party in power are careful not to remind us of the astounding fact that though we were driving straight toward war they did nothing to prepare us for its responsibilities. That is a natural avoidance, but we ought not to allow ourselves to forget, and we have enough to remind us.

The billions now to be raised and expended should have been distributed over years of well considered preparation. The fleet we are trying now to rush into being should have been built up consistently through years. The army we are trying to create by intensive methods, to be officered by men with only a few months' hurried education, should have been prepared for by universal citizen training which would have created the machinery for efficient expansion.

It was not necessary for us to have maintained an enormous war establishment. But it was the part of national and international duty and of common sense to maintain a system of preparedness, the foundation of a trained army, of a navy adequate to our situation, and other essentials to a defense commensurate with our interests and responsibility. At least when the world war began there should have been enough foresight among our leaders and in our government to have assured an energetic preparation for the growing eventuality of war.

We had not that foresight. We preferred to indulge ourselves with every variety of pacifist dope and to indulge in the typically American disposition to gamble with fate. Now we must pay, and we hope we shall pay without whimpering.

But let us do more than pay. Let us think and act for the future. Our temptation will be to fall back once more on the theory that this war is positively the last. Each generation has drugged itself with that hope. We can go on hoping, but let us have the intelligence to prepare against the disappointment of our hope. For a time, we can hardly doubt, there will be peace in this exhausted world. But men and nations recover. It is probable armament will be in some measure reduced after this war, but in any case we ought to lay the foundation of a democratic defense.

There is but one way to accomplish this. The system of universal training in peace should be adopted, not tomorrow, but now while the lesson of our past negligence and its heavy cost is fresh. We are seeing demonstrated today in the splendid officers' training camps and we shall soon see in the camps of the new army the benefits to America's young manhood of this military training. No one who has seen what Fort Sheridan does for its pupils but must be a convert. America would be not only stronger externally but healthier and happier internally if every youth in the land could have this man-making experience.

Let us not put off establishing this system. The Chamberlain bill or a better should be passed at this session of congress. Every parent who has a boy in the ranks, every stay-at-home anxious to do what he can for his country, should make his influence felt in congress to get this done and done now. The organization of universal training easily could be fitted in so as to supplement the present war organization, for we have never been in so favorable a condition to initiate it. A large part of the machinery is either existent or in rapid process of creation.

KNIT FOR THE SOLDIERS.

"Why aren't more American women knitting?" is the frantic query of Maj. Grayson M. P. Murphy, head of the American Red Cross in France. More American women ARE knitting, more than they have knitted for a century in America. Women are knitting everywhere and at every time. But most of them are knitting bright colored sweaters for themselves, for Christmas gifts to their women friends. It isn't one woman in ten who takes khaki or gray yarn out of the gay bag that swings from her arm.

This will be the worst winter that northern France has known. The supply of wood and other fuel which was available last winter has been materially decreased by the summer's warfare. And now there are not only the French and English armies and the thousands of refugees to be kept warm, but the American expeditionary force. Keeping warm in France this winter for the fighting armies will be a matter of clothing more than of fuel. If there is not enough warm clothing death will reap a greater harvest this winter than war.

This isn't sentiment. It is cold fact.

Whenever a woman knits a gay colored sweater when she might be knitting for the desperate need overseas she is by her criminal negligence exposing some one to illness and possible death. Every ball of fancy yarn is one ball of yarn taken from the possible supply of khaki or gray. It is practically impossible to buy khaki yarn today, and the reason is that women have taken to fancy knitting with a fury with which almost no other fad has ever swept the country.

There should be a yarn commission. The extravagant use of brightly colored yarn should be made impossible. And women should be made to realize that knitting for themselves is as unpatriotic as a prodigal feast in wartime.

LIMITATION OF FREE SPEECH.

Mr. Bryan joins Mr. Root in a definition of the limitation of speech, opinion, criticism, and argument in a country at war. In the matter of opinion and criticism Mr. Bryan has been less reticent than Mr. Root, but these two men in public life, one evangelistic and the other philosophical, men of totally different mental structure and different experience, agree that the individual has lost some freedom of thought.

The individual has lost a great deal of freedom. It may be a distressing loss. For intellectual progress it may be a great loss, and it would not torture the imagination to create a situation in which the loss might be dangerous, but we can see no way of avoiding it without meeting a greater danger.

It is worse to permit it than to deny it. Everybody has a right to an opinion, and if everybody had the right to yell that opinion at all times and in all places we should have a worse fight at home than we possibly could have abroad. The Germans would be needed here to keep the peace.

The individual has been lost. The unit now is the nation. The individual's opinion is of no importance to any one but himself unless it is obnoxious to the necessary national purpose and is expressed with the intent of hindering the processes of that purpose. Then it becomes important as a nuisance or a danger.

Mr. Root in his Chicago speech went painstakingly over the whole case. Our democracy is one of delegated authority and the officials with that authority have made decisions. They have the power to make decisions.

The intellectuals and radicals in the United States, the egotists and sentimentalists, have every opportunity to see in Russian troubles what follows the disruption of national plans by confusion of national purpose.

If the intellectual egotists and shallow sentimentalists, the radicals and pacifists, have any purpose it is to create just such confusion here. Their assertion of a right to have and speak their opinion is brushed aside by a nation in danger. We know that it is not endangering any principles of liberty to put silencers on them. The outrage against theoretical liberty may be great. The danger they might make for our real liberty is too great to permit of consideration of abstractions.

If they do anything at all they weaken the ability of the United States to carry out its decisions and to make good what it has willed. If they do that they aid the enemy. They might as well strengthen the enemy as to weaken their own people. They might even better encourage a German soldier than discourage an American soldier.

If they could succeed in confusing American opinion, in weakening American resolution, they would make the struggle longer and more disastrous. The nonconformists would make the work of the conformists harder and more costly.

Therefore the nation will not allow them to make the effort which if it were successful would have such consequence. Luckily a democracy does not have to have many intellectual pains in adopting arbitrary methods to silence its malcontents and egotists. It is genuinely assured that its freedom of thought and opinion, of criticism and judgment, is not imperiled by the war time limitation of expression.

We shall not have the censor standing over us after we get out of this trouble—not unless we get a German censor as the result of disorganization at home.

When army commanders are estimating the cost of military operations in abstract percentages which take no account of the human individuals composing the masses to be sacrificed it is hardly probable that national sentiment will permit individualism, obliterated in the army, to have its egotistic ecstasies at home.

PRO-GERMANS—WARUM?

The Society of the Friends of the German Republic (headquarters, 32 Union square, New York; organizing secretary, J. Koettgen) has issued a bulletin explaining why German-Americans so often support the German imperial government. "There is a considerable number of German-Americans who believe that Germany is not only a free country but that German political freedom can be worthily compared only to American political freedom. They must be excused; the ideas are not their own. Mostly totally ignorant of German constitutional facts and history, they have been the victims of a propaganda seeking to create in this country a split along racial lines. Their natural sympathy for their folks in the old country has been worked upon to such an extent that they have become blind to the most patent cases of oppression and arbitrariness in militaristic and autocratic Germany."

As an example of how German-Americans are being deceived, the bulletin cites a pamphlet purporting to be an analysis of the German constitution as given by an unnamed lecturer in San Francisco. He begins by declaring that "political and personal morality are two fundamentally different ideas." Beautiful! Magnificent! After a long and utterly misleading account of governmental methods in Germany, the alleged lecturer concludes, "Germany is a free country. Phrases do not make freedom; the deed has created it. The land of our fathers is an ideal land of liberty. It rejects loyally and sensibly all outside enticements to pursue a trashy so-called liberty. Unfortunately political conditions have resulted in our dear American fatherland declaring war upon the land of our fathers. But this war, too, will come to an end. And it is to be hoped that America will then recognize more and more that Germany and the United States depend upon each other, that they must cooperate in the interest of world peace, and that there are scarcely two other countries which, in spite of all differences in detail, are so much alike constitutionally as are Germany and America, the two great pillars of liberty."

As burlesque this is simply immense, but when German-Americans swallow it whole and behave accordingly, it is by no means a joke. As the well known Jap would put it, we "neglect to see the fun."

BILLIBUS-PLURIBUS.

"Sic semper Big Billibus!" runs a Chicago motto in dishonor of Mayor Thompson. The plural form is grammatically correct enough, but fortunately there is only one of him.—New York World.

Yes. But E pluribus unum.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1917: By the Brentwood company.]

OLD Prince Blucher, the principal military figure in Germany in the Napoleonic wars, in the first and second decades of the nineteenth century, was nicknamed by his fellow countrymen "Field Marshal Vorwaerts," that is to say, "Field Marshal Forwards." This was because he was always dashing ahead, regardless of the odds against him. Until the end of last year, and even until late last spring, Field Marshal von Hindenburg, the generalissimo of the armies of Germany and of her allies, was literally idolized by his countrymen. Today all his prestige and popularity have gone and he has received a nickname which is quite as illustrative of the position which he now holds in the eyes of the Teuton public. They have dubbed him "Field Marshal Rueckwaerts," which means "Field Marshal Backwards," to indicate that save a few minor successes in Russia, when pitted against Muscovite troops debauched by the revolution, his chief command of the German forces in France and Flanders and of the Austro-Turko-German forces along the Italian front, has been signalized by nothing but reverses and retreats.

At the time when Hindenburg was elevated by the kaiser to the chief command of the armies of the central powers, military experts in Paris, London, Rome, and Washington, acquainted with his record, were unanimous in declaring that as a generalissimo he was a terribly overrated man who had been able to succeede in the Mazurian lakes district, on Germany's eastern frontier, in the early stages of the war, because of his unique knowledge of the region, to which he had devoted years of study, and also because the Russian troops opposed to him were wholly lacking in equipment, munitions, and guns. They argued that as a director in chief of the armies of the central powers on the western and southern fronts he would prove a failure. This has now proved to be the case. His armies in France and in Belgium are at present retiring eastward instead of advancing westward, and have been falling back ever since they have been under his control. Moreover, the serious reverses sustained during the last two weeks by the German and Austrian forces in Roumania at the hands of King Ferdinand's gallant troops, who have been fighting in the most heroic fashion, and that, too, successfully, although subjected to every conceivable handicap, has still further damaged the field marshal's military fame. Then, too, his countrymen cannot forget or forgive his utterly reckless sacrifice of the lives of his soldiers, for which he has apparently no care.

His supersession may be looked for at an early date, and while it would be preferable, from an allied point of view, that he should be kept in chief military command, now that he has shown his incompetency, there will be a certain satisfaction felt over his downfall when it is recalled that he was, next to Admiral von Tirpitz, the principal champion of the policy of ruthless submarine warfare and of the sinking of enemy and neutral passenger shipping alike, without leaving any survivors to tell the tale.

Lord Lamington's only son and heir, Lieut. Victor Cochrane Baillie of the Scots guards, has just celebrated the attainment of his majority at the family place in Lanarkshire, where he is recovering from the second wound received in the present war. He was already once invalided home with a bad wound from the front in France in the early spring of 1915; that is to say, when he was in his eighteenth year, but rejoined his regiment at once on his recovery.

The young officer, as well as his father, Lord Lamington, are very proud of their descent from Scotland's famous hero and patriot, William Wallace. The latter contracted a marriage with the fair Marion de Bradfute of Lamington castle. She was killed some years later by the English, after having successfully maneuvered the escape of her husband, and left an only daughter, who married one of the Baillies, who became through her the owner of Lamington castle. Their son; that is to say, the grandson of Sir William Wallace, the patriot, married Lady Isabel Seton, and from this union the present Lord Lamington is the eighteenth in descent.

In 1817 Lamington castle, and the extensive estates connected therewith, were inherited by Miss Mathilda Baillie. She married Admiral of the Fleet Sir John Cochrane, G. C. B., grandson of the eighth Earl of Dundonald, and the son born of this matrimonial alliance assumed, on succeeding to the possession of Lamington castle and of the other estates of both his parents, their joint patronymics of Cochrane and Baillie as his family name.

He was one of the warmest friends of Lord Beaconsfield, their intimacy dating from boyhood, and the story goes that when the two were lads at school young Disraeli, who was then already indulging in dreams of future greatness, promised his fellow pupil Cochrane, "When I am prime minister of England, Cockie, I will make you a peer." This proved a prophetic promise, for when, in course of time, Disraeli became premier he nominated his old schoolmate, Cochrane-Baillie, for a peerage, as Lord Lamington, in 1880, as a reward for his valuable services as a Tory member of the house of commons throughout a period of forty years.

The late Lord Lamington was in his youth one of the celebrated "Young England party," and figures in many of Lord Beaconsfield's novels.

With regard to Lamington castle, it stands within a stone's throw of the Clyde, surrounded by a superb park, filled with trees many centuries old. It is full of historic memories and relics of Sir William Wallace, of Mary Queen of Scots, who stayed there on her journey to Dundrennan, and of the Young Pretender. Indeed, the rooms occupied by Sir William Wallace in the Old Tower are still shown.

The present Lord Lamington will be remembered at Washington as having officiated there as best man at the wedding of Lord Curzon to the beautiful and deeply mourned Mary Leiter, and has always remained a very close friend and crony of Curzon. Like the latter, he has traveled very extensively in the interior of Asia, knows Persia like a book, and was the first white man to enter and explore the Shan state. On one occasion he disappeared for so long a period in the wilds of Asia that he was given up for lost, subsequently returning to civilization with a wonderful amount of information. He has been in turn governor of Queensland, in Australia, and of Bombay. This latter post he was compelled to resign on account of the ill health of his wife, daughter of Lord Newlands.

AND NOW THE OLD SCOUTS!

THE boys have their Boy Scouts, the helpfulness of which is attested by the use that is being made of them in military establishments. John Hay bears witness to the fact that a soldier who had Boy Scout training in his early youth is a better soldier for that training. The impulse toward a Boy Scout life is born of the away from nature complicated social life which boys are now compelled to lead. Something to train judgment, decision, and initiative when in the woods and fields is needed. Something is needed to teach boys how to take care of themselves when away from home and parents. Something is needed to teach the health standards. All these necessities are supplied by the Boy Scouts.

But no sooner had a world-wide popularity demonstrated the fundamental rightness of the Boy Scout movement than people began to say "if this is good for boys why is it not good for girls?" The answer was the Camp Fire Girls—a girl scout movement. Like the Boy Scout movement, this is founded on a correct interpretation both of the needs and the mental and social makeup of those to whom they appeal.

But now a second question is being asked: "If this is good for the Boy Scouts, why is it not good for the old scouts?" To this Walter Camp answers that it is, and, acting upon his answer, he has organized the Senior Service corps.

In presenting this matter to the attention of congress last May Mr. Tilson, a representative from Connecticut, said that the most efficient and productive years of the life of a business or professional man are after he passes 45. To lose unnecessarily a single year of a life of ripened efficiency is an economic crime. A man who reaches 45 in a fair degree of bodily health should be good for twenty-five years more at least.

Mr. Tilson argued that patriotism demanded that the men past 45 spend an hour a day in keeping fit.

Walter Camp, the famous football writer and old time, all round athlete, organized this Senior Service corps some months ago. His first group consisted of 100 men varying in age from 45 to 73, in height from 5 feet 4 inches to 6 feet 4 inches, and in weight from 116 to 265 pounds. Among them were former President Taft, Prof. Farnam of Yale, Col. Ullman, president of the New Haven chamber of commerce; Dean Jones of Yale, former Mayor Farnsworth, and Judge Cleaveland.

The name of the organization is the Senior Service corps. It is composed of men:

1. Above military age.
2. Who wish to be of service and will give time.
3. Who will act as a body, not merely as individuals.

Qualifications:

1. Over 45 years of age.
2. Citizenship in United States of America.
3. Simple physical examination.
4. Willingness to devote an hour a day three days a week.

A prospective member makes a written application. This is passed upon by the membership committee. If he is accepted the applicant takes a physical examination and signs an agreement to carry out the exercises for ninety days. Mr. Tilson did not say how a group would proceed to get the right to organize from Walter Camp, nor whether such permission was necessary. Each member is given the following general instructions:

Clothing: All wear what you would ordinarily wear for walking. No tight collars, however.

Shoes and stockings: Wear those you are accustomed to. Do not put on extra thick ones just because you are going to train. With the moderate amount of walking in the first week or so there is no call for any change in footwear.

Smoking: Don't smoke anything till after your morning's walk.

Water: Drink all you like half an hour before breakfast, but no drinking with meals. Drink half an hour before any meal or two hours after.

Eating: Eat as you are accustomed to, but gradually cut down on rich foods.

Alcohol in any form: Preferably none, but at any rate cut out all cocktails.

Rub down: If convenient, a shower and rub down, but this is not necessary. If a man goes direct to work after walking he should keep a dry undershirt at the office and a rough bath towel. Rub down on return and put on the dry undershirt. This will not occupy more than four or five minutes.

Keep a pair of dry socks and an extra pair of shoes at the office and put on the dry socks and shoes when you come in.

Blister: If you should get a blister put a corn plaster or bunion plaster over it with the opening over the blister and fasten it firmly with two strips of surgeon's plaster over the ends but not covering the opening.

Suggestions on how to be fit:

Drink without eating and eat without drinking.

Five glasses of water a day, none with meals, will make you free of the doctors.

Warm feet and a cool head need no physician.

A bath, cold if you please, hot if you must, with a good rub, starts the day right.

If you will save your smoke till after luncheon you'll never have smoker's heart.

Wearing the same weight underclothing the year around will save you a lot of colds.

Dress cool when you walk and warm when you ride.

Your nose, not your mouth, was given you to breathe through.

Clean skin, clean socks, clean underwear every day.

Don't sit still with wet feet. Walk until you have a chance to change.

Never let a day pass without covering four miles on foot.

See how high you can hold your head and how deeply you can breathe whenever you are out of doors.

Hot water quick is the best thing for a sprain.

Short shoes and shoes that don't fit cost a lot in the long run.

Getting mad makes black marks on the health.

Envy, jealousy, and wrath will ruin any digestion.

When you rob the trolley company of a nickel by walking you add a dime to your deposit of health.

You'll never get the gout from walking.

Sleep woos the physically tired man, she flouts the mentally exhausted.

The best record in golf is the record she has made of restored health to the middle aged.

Tennis up to the thirties, but golf after forty.

Nature never punished a man for getting his legs tired. She has punished many for getting their nerves exhausted.

Two hours of outdoor exercise by the master never yet made him overcritical of the cook.

Don't ask the heart to pump extra blood to the brain all day and then to an overloaded stomach all night.

Tight shoes have sent many a man to bed with a cold.

Leg weariness never yet produced brain fag.

Loose clothes, loose gloves, easy shoes spell comfort and health.

No wise athlete stands still after exercise without putting something over him.

Open windows don't make half as many colds as closed ones do.

Too many drinks at the nineteenth hole undo all the good of the other eighteen.

The best way to use the Sunday supplement is to stick it under your vest while you walk an hour against the wind and then come home and read it.

Blood pressure does not come to the men who walk a lot out of doors; instead it looks for those who sit and eat a lot indoors.

Many a man finds too late that his motor car has cost him more in health and legs than it has in tires and gasoline.

A four or five mile walk daily makes your credit at the bank of health mount up steadily.

Nature won't stand for overdrafts any more than your bank.

The men who chase the golf ball don't have to pursue the doctor.

You never saw a dog fill his mouth with food and then take a drink to wash it down.

Practical suggestions:

Ten corps dont's: Don't shirk, don't talk, don't worry; don't explain, don't knock, don't kick, don't quit, don't loaf, don't lag and don't rush.

You can be: Prompt, alert, quiet, determined, steady, helpful, unselfish, considerate, gracious, observant, brave and clean.

You can own: A clean body, a clean mind, fresh air and good water.

You can't be taxed on: Cleanliness, perspiration, walking, and deep breathing.

You can do without: Profanity, obscenity, anger and envy.

You don't need money to be: Happy, healthy, hopeful and hearty.

You can be master of: Self control, self respect, self belief and self restraint.

Helpful suggestions:

Vacillation and doubt are poison to the nerves.

Two men in an eight-oared shell may be able to go faster than the other six, but they never win the race that way.

Don't disgrace the uniform.

"Eyes in the boat" is as good a maxim at drill as in a shell.

Success comes from service.

The leader may be no better man than you, but some one must give the orders and set the pace.

Don't make excuses. Make good.

Stand straight, think straight, march straight and the rest will take care of itself.

Worry makes cowards.

If you feel tired, remember so does the other man.

Fear is the forerunner of illness.

Coördination in the individual means coöperation in the squad.

Happiness comes from health, not from money.

In a squad it is the job of each individual to make himself fit, for it is his example that helps the rest.

After a hearty meal stand up straight for fifteen minutes.

Coöperation with others is the life of the squad.

When drinking a glass of water stand erect and take a full breath first, then drink with chest out and hips back and head up.

Your squad is only as good as the poorer ones. Don't be one of those.

Whenever you walk, stand up with chin in, hips back and chest out, and think how tall you are.

The success of any drill depends upon the concentration of each man of the squad.

If you have a stake in life it is worth playing the game for all there is in it.

Drill is a mental as well as a physical discipline.

Courage and concentration will conquer most obstacles.

The man who gets things is the one who pulls up his belt a hole tighter and goes out after them.

Work will take your mind off most of your ills.

The hurry of half a squad never brought the whole troop home.

Two things are essential to a clean skin; one is bathing and a rub down, but the other is still more important, and that is perspiration.

Washing out the impurities from within through the pores of the skin takes the undue load of work off the kidneys.

An army must have legs and a good stomach quite as much as arms and ammunition.

Preparedness is nine-tenths physical strength and endurance.

Food, water, and oxygen are the fuel for running the human machine.

Obesity comes from overloading the stomach and underworking the body.

Nature said, "You must earn your living by the sweat of your brow," and if you earn that living in some other way you must get the sweat or she will make you pay.

If you take more food than the digestion can handle you not only tire the stomach but the whole system.

Nine-tenths of the "blues" come from a bad liver and lack of outdoor exercise.

Full, deep breathing, drinking plenty of water, and keeping the skin active will keep most people out of the doctor's hands.

HIS CERTAIN PROSPECT

[From Punch (Copyright).]

Officer (on leave): "So you're still alive, Peter?"

Peter: "Yes, sir—ah' I'm goin' to see another Christmas, sir. You see, sir, I've always noticed that when I live through the month of August I live out the whole year."

Why We Are at War

BY HENRY T. RAINEY OF ILLINOIS.

(From an address in the United States house of representatives, April 5, 1917.)

A GREAT American writer has made a compilation of recent utterances of the German emperor and German officers and German leaders. I desire now to read some of them, and I read from "The Pentecost of Calamity," by Owen Wister. I quote:

"We Hohenzollerns take our crown from God alone. On me the spirit of God has descended. I regard my whole task as appointed by heaven."

Does that sound like the principles we stand for? I read further:

"The efforts directed toward the abolition of war must not only be termed foolish but absolutely immoral. The peace of Europe is only a secondary matter for us. The sight of suffering does one good; the infliction of suffering does one more good."

"The Belgians should not be shot dead. They should be so left as to make impossible all hope of recovery."

"German should replace English as the world language. English, the bastard tongue, must be swept into the remotest corners until it has returned to its original elements of an insignificant pirate dialect."

"The civilization of the world suffers every time a German becomes an American."

"They call us barbarians. What of it? The German claim must be education to hate, education to the desire for hatred. Let us abolish unripe and false shame. To us is given faith, hope, and hatred; but hatred is the greatest among them."

This is the Prussian creed, this is the Prussian ideal. We war not against the German people; we war against the Hohenzollerns and all they stand for.

It has been seriously contended that our real enemy is England on account of the events of a hundred years ago. The battles of a hundred years ago have passed into history; we cannot fight them over again. We are face to face with the events of the present.

No allied nation has deliberately planned the dismemberment of the United States, giving to barbarous Mexico a part, to Japan a part, keeping the best part for herself. No other nation than Prussianized Germany has brazenly admitted that in time of peace, while professing friendship, she has deliberately attempted to induce nations at peace with us to invade our territory. We war against that nation which wars against us.

Fathoms deep under the seas lie our great merchant ships, victims of German submarines, the American flag still floating from their mastheads, the American flag still painted on their hulls—sepulchres of American citizens.

We fight for our rights upon the seas. We fight the battle for civilization, for humanity, for free governments and against the tyranny of the Hohenzollerns which has come down to us from the darkness, the murder, and the bloodshed of the middle ages and which has no place in this new century.

We do not enter this war for territorial aggrandizement or for money indemnities. We enter this war for the purpose of keeping the lights of civilization burning on the ocean highways of the world, for the purpose of keeping the nations of the world from slipping back into the darkness of the middle ages. We fight for the flag that brings freedom wherever it goes. Having full confidence in the justice of our cause we bring into this war all the tremendous resources of the most powerful nation in all the world.

WILL REPAIR DEFECTIVE PAVEMENT.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Some time ago the Peoples Gas company tore up the good brick pavement at Harrison street and Homan avenue and left the street in bad shape.

W. F. B.

These cuts have been concreted. The Gas company has been notified to make permanent repairs immediately. The inspector of the district will follow the matter up and see that it receives attention.

F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of Streets.

NO 95TH STREET CAR LINE.

Chicago, Sept. 21.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Does the State street car line extend down Ninety-fifth street to Halsted street? There is no intersecting line from Seventy-ninth street to One Hundred and Third street; if it is not planned to make Ninety-fifth street a boulevard, is it not the most desirable location for such a line? B. E. C.

No. At present it is not planned to make Ninety-fifth street a boulevard.

The city council has passed an ordinance requiring the construction of a street car line on Eighty-seventh street from Cottage Grove avenue to Ashland avenue. The city council considered the proposition of having a street car line on Ninety-fifth street at the time this ordinance was passed, but the demand for a car line on Eighty-seventh street was greater. JOHN P. GARNER,
Commissioner of Public Service.

NINETY-NINTH STREET IMPROVEMENTS.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I understood that plans were made to pave Ninety-ninth street west of Halsted street to Vincennes road in the spring of 1917, but it has not been done. Why is this needed improvement delayed? H. D. L.

Ninety-ninth street, from Halsted street to Vincennes avenue, is an unimproved street, and the city council does not appropriate money for the purpose of unimproved street repairs. We will fill this street in with ashes in the fall when we begin our ash collections.

If the residents in this vicinity desire a new pavement by special assessment, which is the only permanent remedy for conditions here, they should refer the matter to the board of local improvements, which body will begin proceedings for same.

F. S. MITCHELL,
Superintendent of Streets.

MUTUAL BENEFIT ASSOCIATION LOANS.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Is it legal for a mutual benefit association which is not incorporated to loan money to its members on collateral or other securities, and to foreclose in default? X. Y. Z.

You would have to state a case in order for the department to give you an opinion. There are methods by which such an association can make a contract that would be legal.

GIVE THE BOYS A FIGHTING CHANCE.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—How fortunate it would have been had we adopted universal military training five or ten years ago. It would have meant much in the present crisis—it probably would have kept us out of the war. But it's no use to cry over spilt milk. The question is, what shall we do now? Every thoughtful man must feel that a nation unable to protect itself promptly is blind to the tragic possibilities of its heedlessness. War comes unexpectedly, and, as in our own case, it is sometimes forced upon an "innocent bystander."

The plan of universal military training as outlined in the Chamberlain bill would make available at all times millions of young men who have had sufficient military training to enable them to become excellent soldiers with a few weeks of additional training. This would safeguard the nation and prepare it against any contingency that would probably arise, and if one should never arise the training and discipline would be the very best experience that any young man could have. It would make him stronger physically, more alert mentally, quicker to see and to act. Also, it would increase his earning capacity and give him a better chance to win success in his life work. Our boys appreciate this. I think the majority of them would be glad to take the training.

Since the boys may at any time be called upon to defend our country and our flag, we owe it to them to provide them with a careful pre-training, so that they may perform this important national function both efficiently and as safely as possible. We must not be asleep at the switch. The responsibility is up to the American citizens and the voters of this country to demand the passage of the Chamberlain bill or some similar measure by congress at its next session. It has already been postponed too long. It's time now for action.

WILLIAM WRIGLEY JR.

SLAVS AND ITALY.

Chicago, Sept. 20.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In an issue of your paper I have noticed a misrepresentation of facts in your account of "Italy's Smash to the East" (accompanied by a war map), which was surprising to me, as it indicates a quite unexpected tendency on your part to back the Italians in their imperialistic and besides utterly unjustified claime to purely Slavic territory as yet incorporated with the Austro-Hungarian monarchy.

Your statement I am taking issue with reads as follows:

"The route of Laibach (the German name for Ljubljana, the capital of the Slovenian province of Carniola) runs through the Julian Alps from Tolmino to Goritz and the distance varies from forty to sixty miles. The capture of this Austrian base would result in the forced retirement of all Teuton forces from Istria, the Carso plateau, and deliver back to the Latins the greater part of Italia Irredenta."

The territory of the Carso or Ljubljana never belonged to the Italians and consequently it cannot possibly be delivered back to them. The Italians can try to annex it forcibly, of course, but even if the allies of the entente should consent to such a flagrant violation of the principle of nationality proclaimed by them as part and parcel of their working program in this war, I venture to say that the Italians would bitterly regret the day when they reached for a territory to which they have about as much right as to Tientsin in China, which, as I read yesterday, they are claiming, too, from China. No Jugoslav (Serb, Croat, or Slovene) would ever consent to a mere change of masters, from Austrian domination to Italian. The southern Slavs want to be free and independent both from Austria and Italy.

Editor of the Croatian Flag.

THE LAST GERMAN CRISIS

By Pavel Lobanis

[From the Revue Bleue, Paris, of Aug. 25. Translated by Lewis R. Galantiere.]

IT WAS during the early days of July that the restlessness, already affirmed beyond the Rhine, became suddenly aggravated. The two problems of the end of the war and of constitutional reform, posed during so many months, became astonishingly acute. The temporary reopening of the reichstag revivified the debates that had lulled somewhat during the months of May and June. An article in the Vorwaerts which concluded with the words "Quo vadis Germania?" seemed a prelude to the offensive of the Socialist majority against the government. At the same time the liberals of the type of the Berliner Tageblatt formulated their constitutional demands with a new vigor and in all parties except the Conservative the semi-absolutist régime found vehement detractors. An ill contained irritation persisted from Hamburg to Bavaria. Truly, Germany was little able to repose in her optimism.

I cannot enter into detail, but it was well established that Austria-Hungary was avid for peace and that to obtain a rapid armistice Charles I. and Czernin were disposed to subscribe to broad concessions. The cabinet of Vienna, without formally rising under the German yoke, sought its emancipation. The young emperor, in permitting the non-Germanic elements to hope even for conditional autonomy and in conceding an amnesty to political prisoners, had launched a defiance in the face of pan-Germanism. Tentative advances towards a separate negotiation with the provisional Russian government had miscarried, and the first American troops were in France. Scheidemann had brought back from Stockholm the impression that Germany was discredited with the neutrals and that the nation was reproached both for her methods of warfare and her submission to a disguised autocracy.

It was to obtain from the reichstag a credit of 15,000,000,000 marks that Bethmann-Hollweg had convoked it. As the two great Socialist journals, the Hamburger Echo and the Chemnitzer Volksstimme, explained, disputes centered about a desire of the parties to express their sentiments upon two capital subjects—peace and the political régime.

Catholics Lead Attack.

THE attack upon the chancellery came, in fact, neither from the Socialist nor the Liberal benches, but from a party which until then passed entirely as pro-governmental and which since Aug. 2, 1914, had supported the extreme right, the Catholic party. The chief of the center, Spahn, was always distinguished by his moderate zeal and by his docility to pan-German suggestions. On July 6, Spahn being ill, his lieutenant, Erzberger, took his place in the principal committee of the reichstag. He was a turbulent, ambitious person, unembarrassed by scruples, the very willing intermediary of the chancellor with the Roman Curiae. He had just returned from Vienna, where he had been received by Charles I. It was a violent diatribe which he pronounced, an address whose terms are unknown but which treated, we know, of three things—the sterility and perils of submarine warfare, the opportunity for a peace without annexation or indemnity, and the necessity for institutional reform.

This discourse unchained a tempest in the Catholic party, in the committee, and in the press. The Catholics were divided, the two principal journals, the Germania and the Koelner Volkszeitung, sustaining contradictory theses. The traditionalists reproached Erzberger with having deserted the center and acting without the knowledge of his colleagues; the faction less rooted in the past, and which represented district workers, extolled a parliamentary cabinet. In the eyes of the committee Bethmann-Hollweg and the minister of marine, Capelle, were in a painful position. For the most part Berlin and provincial journals were in accord upon one point, that a new era was due to be born, but sensational controversies surged on every side.

The Muenchner Post (Socialist) demanded in threatening terms the regulation of accounts—that is to say, an investigation into governmental responsibilities—while Revantlow manifested an unprecedented furor and the Deutsche Tageszeitung paralleled the grandeur of Hindenburg and the mediocrity of Erzberger, Scheidemann, and Bethmann-Hollweg. In reality the Conservative organs believed firmly that the orator of the center, while attacking the chancellor, was in concert with him, and they feared in advance against all political reform.

Calls Crown Council.

THE scandal was enormous in all Germany. On the 9th William called a council of the crown—such an initiative was rare in Berlin—of Prussian ministers and secretaries of the imperial state, and nothing was more indicative of the emotion by which these men were seized. This council endured for three hours, and the rumor spread that Bethmann-Hollweg pronounced himself categorically in favor of a renovation of the government. On the 10th the Berliner Tageblatt, whose connection with Wilhelmstrasse is beyond doubt, announced that Bethmann-Hollweg would remain at his post and that he counted upon surrounding himself with parliamentary collaborators. At this point the crisis seemed to evolve towards a liberal solution, and the Vorwaerts in the name of the Socialists and the Frankfurter Zeitung in the name of the Progressives formulated their hopes.

Then a new phase opened with the arrival of the crown prince. It is impossible to conjecture whether he was called by his father and of the latter's own volition or whether he imposed his intervention. When the official Wolf dispatch announced his arrival in Berlin the journals interpreted it as an insistence upon the part of the heir to the crown that he be consulted in measures engaging the future of the dynasty. These measures must by then have passed the new decision relative to the right of suffrage in Prussia which the kaiser had effected to placate public opinion. However, no one can ignore the fact that for many years, and above all since 1911, the crown prince has been firmly bound to the ultra pan-Germanist party.

On July 11 the crown prince presided at the second council of the crown. On the same day, the war credit coming up for discussion in the reichstag, Spahn claimed and obtained by a strong majority a postponement of the question until the settlement of the crisis in the council; he thus placed himself implicitly beside Erzberger.

From the 11th to the 13th violent polemics followed in the press and one commenced to feel the intrusion of the prince imperial and his advisers and the frowing timidity of the chancellor. The Vossische Zeitung insinuated that Bethmann-Hollweg, whose resignation was demanded by the center, was prepared to offer a portfolio to Spahn and to create a council of the empire that should serve as a bond between the reichstag and the government; it feared that the idea had been prepared, and I believe willingly that the sinuous mind of the chancellor had entertained it, despite the difficulties of its application, with some favor; particularly since certain words of his successor seemed to refer to a like project.

The Post, a pan-German organ, insisted upon the division of the reichstag; the majority, which could appear by the recasting of the constitution, was not formed of the same elements as that majority favorable to a "white" peace. The Chemnitzer Volksstimme, whose orientation was totally different, declared with the National Liberals in accepting parliamentarization and continued to sustain more or less the idea of annexation. Certain agrarian papers thundered against the Austrian press, which recommended liberalism to Germany, and, not daring directly to attack Charles I., recalled with persistent quibbling his reception of Erzberger. The Deutsche Tageszeitung denounced the sacrilegious agitation of the left against the empire, while the official organs of the southern states, such as the Bayerische Staatszeitung, exerted themselves to demonstrate that the introduction of the parliamentary system would bring about the end of the federal system; they cited Bismarck copiously, and the visits of the Bavarian, Wurtemburger, and Saxon ministers to Berlin multiplied. At last the attack upon Bethmann-Hollweg took a turn of savage violence and he was accused (a letter from Von Harnack being exploited) of being in league with Scheidemann. The chancellor became an instrument of social revolution. In forty-eight hours a prodigious change was accomplished in directing circles. The pretorian coup d'état was announced.

Military Party Triumphs.

IT was good enough for the Roman empire at its decline! Was William II. overruled? Did he resist energetically, feebly, or was he himself the instigator of this step, which in all probability will result in the weakening of his prestige and of that of the crown? For the moment that has little import. What remains is that on the 13th Hindenburg and Ludendorf, the chiefs of the army, whose political prerogatives and power of deliberation in the occurrence were nil, arrived in Berlin and like presidents of the council or sovereigns received the leaders of the parties.

At the same time Von Stein, the minister of war and their direct agent, and almost all the Prussian ministers resigned, as if to attest to the fact that they would not collaborate with Bethmann-Hollweg, whose slight desire for reform appeared to them disastrous for the state. On the 14th Michaelis was installed in Wilhelmstrasse. There arose a cry of triumph in military and conservative circles. At last, they believed, they had forced into the highest post a deferential and devoted man, a man who would combat at once liberal conceptions and the Scheidemann-like "white" peace.

From the 14th to the 19th an enormous work of lobbying was accomplished by the pan-Germanists to detach from the left the National Liberals and the center. Tirpitz wrote curious letters to Spahn, who remained insensible to them, and to Bassermann, who with a supreme gesture replaced the National Liberal group into the imperialist clan. On the 19th Michaelis pronounced his inaugural discourse, as vague as a discourse of Bethmann-Hollweg and as filled with hypocritical and contradictory incidents. The reichstag was divided on the motion of peace that had been elaborated by Scheidemann, Ebert, David, Von Payer, Erzberger, etc. Then William II. conferred with the chiefs of parties and the assemblage separated for two months. The game was played and the trick taken. Germany had not its day but its week of fools. However, to conclude, we must explain how the pretorians will be able to adjudicate this domestic victory.

It was not due exclusively to their authority, their personal influence, to the luster which remains despite everything about militarism, that they gained their end. They maneuvered, they intrigued like common politicians with the power of certain financial groups which dominated a portion of the great press in the capital and elsewhere.

They benefited first by the weakness of the opposing factions, the Catholics, Socialists, Progressives, who had never gone to the depths of their convictions but were always ready to content themselves with partial concessions, provided their campaign appeared efficacious to their constituency, who were perhaps more exacting than themselves. Then they perceived after the blow that they had been ridiculed, and a total resignation henceforth seemed to them the only possible attitude.

The high command and their agents had blocked out the divisions in which were the several parties inclined towards liberalism. Many National Liberal deputies had signed the motion for peace "without conquest," and since July 16 this motion had received 311 signatures. But the great industrial leaders who formed the National Liberal committees and furnished cannon and munitions for the war had their orders from Hindenburg and Stein and transmitted them to their parliamentary representatives; which explains the sudden reappearance of Bassermann, who had strength and time enough before disappearing forever from the political scene to restore to pan-Germanism his friends. The center itself was far from unanimous. Its divergences of views (the Koelner Volkszeitung strongly opposed the Germania) were ingeniously exploited, and the mass of the opposition, which should have carried all before it, was exhausted before the hour of battle.

Discontent Grows Evident.

BUT the most curious element in the situation was that above all the conservative and military party supported itself upon the particularism of the south, which was until then firmest for reform and least trustful of pretorianism. The most plausible explanation is this: If the empire became parliamentarized the center would triumph; the assemblies of state and the governments of kingdoms and grand duchies would be reduced to play a ridiculous rôle; the encroachments of the confederate cabinet would be such that the last vestiges of feudalism would be obliterated. Hertling, in the name of Bavaria, and Vistum, in the name of Saxony, protested to William II. against any constitutional modifications, and the debates which took place in Carlsruhe and in Stuttgart attest to the solidarity of the ministers of central Germany.

To appreciate sanely this crisis in its evolution and in its consequences, not alone immediate but future, and even distant consequences, it is essential that we remember three points: First, it is the issue of the dissatisfaction of the mass, which finds the war too long, too costly, too full of approaching menace; the deputies who were led to attack the government were impelled to it by the masses (and this remark applies as well to Catholics as to Socialists), who desired a rapid peace and the suppression of masked absolutism incompatible with the negotiation of such a peace; secondly, the domestic perturbation has been the most violent in Germany since 1914, and even since its unification; each assault that the chancellery has wiped out in the last eighteen months has been more vigorous than the preceding one, and this one more puissant than all; thirdly, two tiers of voters have pronounced against an imperialist peace, against pan-Germanism, and against the formula of which Hindenburg is trustee; a third tier, the Socialist minority, has waived the motion of Scheidemann-Payer-Erzberger because it seemed to it ambiguous and made no statement of German responsibilities admitted and proclaimed by themselves. In reality less than one-fourth of the reichstag voted for the program of the high command.

Here are three essential factors which I consider incontestable. And after having presented them it seems to me unnecessary to point out that the victory of Hindenburg, Reventlow, and the country squires was a victory in the fashion of Pyrrhus as Thucydides has related it. There are, however, several things in gestation beyond the Rhine, even after the reconstitution on Aug. 6 of the imperial and Prussian ministries, which remain almost totally bureaucratic. Who can say what interesting scenes the first mists of autumn shall perhaps envelop in Germany?

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

By Henry Justice

Dorothy Canfield Fisher and her Children

Last week's best sellers in a leading Chicago book store were:

WAR.

"Over the Top" (Putnam's), by Arthur Guy Empey.

FICTION.

"Martie, the Unconquered" (Doubleday-Page), by Kathleen Norris.
"Christine" (Macmillan), by Alice Cholmondeley.
"The Lone Lane's Turning" (Dodd-Mead), by Hallie Erminie Rives.
"The High Heart" (Harper's), by Basil King.
"The Secret Witness" (Appleton), by George Gibbs.
"Beyond" (Scribner's), by John Galsworthy.

NONFICTION.

"Poems" (Scribner's), by Alan Seeger.

MAUD MORTIMER is a California woman who was for one year an assistant "directress" (that's what she calls it) in a hospital five miles from the firing line in Flanders. She had charge of the salle d'attente where the wounded were received and thus had a peculiar hand clasp with the red god. Her experiences in that French field hospital she has set down in "A Green Tent in Flanders" (Doubleday-Page.) Into the ministering village of tents came only those soldiers who were too seriously wounded to be sent further on to a base hospital. The courage, the pride, the nonchalance, the humor, the utter humanness of the men who came and always went—either on to a base hospital or into a quiet little grave—make you close the book every little while and shut your eyes and think harder than you've been accustomed to think.

There is a finality about the things that happen under those green tents. There are no assurances of happy endings. Great love, great trust, prayers, nothing can keep them when they are destined to go. And yet every man goes on, either to recovery or to death, without resistance. I wonder if we aren't going to look straight into the eyes of life after this war. Books like "A Green Tent in Flanders" make you realize what a romantic mask we've demanded that life should wear. There's humor in the book, but it's the humor of reality with the rumble of cannon as the grinding of the mills of the gods.

There are some poignant vignettes in the book, bits of character sketching, pictures of poilus in their fundamental honesty. Mrs. Mortimer is the first woman to write a book about her personal experiences in a field hospital and she will certainly be the last unless it be some of the women who were in them before the edict went out that no woman should be allowed nearer the firing line than a base hospital. Mrs. Mortimer has made the naïve illustrations for her own book. You never can tell, of course, what the public is going to like, especially in a book about the war. So I can't predict that "A Green Tent in Flanders" will be a best seller, but one thing I can say with certainty. The Tabloidites will all read it.

Dorothy Canfield Fisher had breakfast the other day in Paris with a man who had been her instructor in mathematics in Lawrence, Kas., when she was 15 years old. That man is now Gen. John J. Pershing. When her father was president of the University of Kansas Gen. Pershing, then just from West Point, was stationed at the Kansas war college. The president's daughter entered his classes in mathematics, and a friendship started then which was renewed in Paris under circumstances of which neither of them could have dreamt. Mrs. Fisher is one of the busiest women in France. She has taken over the work for the blind which Winifred Holt originally organized. She is organizing a printing establishment where a magazine and books for the soldiers blinded in battle will be printed. Her latest book, "Understood Betsy (Holt), was tried out on her own little daughter, whose name is Sally. And Sally's comment was: "At last mother has written a really good book."

William Morrison Patterson has been making more experiments with the cadences in verse libre, for which Amy Lowell gave readings last spring, you remember. The results of the experiments are in a preface to the second edition of "The Rhythm of Prose," which will be issued by the Columbia University press this month. Dr. Patterson is in the department of English and comparative literature at Columbia.

George Gibbs' war thriller, "Secret Witness" (Appleton), he avers, is founded on authentic data which was given to him by a well known newspaper correspondent of the London Times in Vienna, and it is modestly admitted by his publishers that the story records "in the guise of clever fiction one of the most thrilling episodes of the war."

"King Gum Drop" (Whitman) is Elizabeth Gordon's juvenile for this year. The jolly illustrations in it are by Hazel Frazee.

Hetty Hemenway, whose first book, "Four Days" (Little-Brown), is a war inspired volume, is a Boston woman whose extreme good fortune it is to be a protégé of Margaret Deland.

Robert Underwood Johnson is republishing his two volumes of poems, both of which are practically out of print. The larger volume, "Saint-Gaudens: an Ode and Other Verse," contains all his serious poetry down to 1913. The later volume is called "Poems of War and Peace." Mr. Johnson is doing the publishing himself. The volumes may be had by addressing the author at room 411, 70 Fifth avenue, New York City. Yes, he is Owen Johnson's father.

Mrs. Nelson O'Shaughnessy, whose "A Diplomat's Wife in Mexico" (Harpers) was one of the most popular books on our unfortunate relations with the southland (Isn't that a tactful phrase?), and whose exquisite tactlessness on the women's campaign train for Hughes is one of the reasons why Wilson is our president today, has spent the summer in Paris. She wrote her publishers that she had been permitted to take a most unusual trip to Verdun and to the front, where she dined in the citadel and had the sensation of being actually under fire.

Curiously enough, America has the credit for the first English version of Ibsen's "Lady from the Sea." It was translated by a Harvard undergraduate and published in the Harvard Monthly, while Robert Herrick was its editor-in-chief. It filled an entire issue of the Monthly and caused no end of a stir.

A friend of the Tabloid from Cody, Wyo., writes: "Perhaps it will interest you to learn that Caroline Lockhart's 'The Man From Bitter Roots' was recently published in Copenhagen and that her other books 'The Full of the Moon,' 'The Lady Doc,' and 'Me, Smith,' are to be translated into both Danish and Norwegian. Miss Lockhart, whose home is in Cody, has been in the east since January working on her new book, which is to be a tale of the Wyoming sheep country." It does interest us, doesn't it?

SAFETY IN FRANCE

SOMEWHERE IN FRANCE.—[Special Correspondence.]—"Forty feet underground, you're safe against all shells, except, perhaps, the giant seventeen inch, which are as big as a man, weigh two tons, of steel and high explosive, and make a hole in the ground as big as a house; but they'll never burst in the roof of this place!"

"Why?" I asked.

"Because it is sixty feet underground or thereabouts, with fifty feet of solid earth and rock above it! The Germans dug it for themselves; and we are copying it as a model to protect American troops."

He who spoke was an American sergeant who has been everywhere up and down the front with French and British noncommissioned officers; and "this place" was one of the deepest and probably the most vast and solid of the immense subterranean refuges which the Germans abandoned in their retreat.

It is extraordinary.

Deep, deep, deep, down broad cement steps (easy to rush up or down, for safety or attack), great underground halls open into each other in long suites. They have vaulted roofs, heating and ventilating apparatus, and wall decorations—frescoes which must have cost months of artistic preparation, and disclose the way that German troops, by thousands, actually lived down here, under furious bombardment, in gayety and safety. There was a beer hall (brasserie), a concert hall, a moving picture hall, a theater or cabaret, and sleeping dormitories, dining halls and kitchens!

A thousand men could live at ease down there, play cards, chat over music, take in shows, smoke cigarets, snooze, meditate, take books from the library while killing time. And perhaps 3,000 men could pack in, a day at a time, without great inconvenience, and breathe pure air from motor pumped ventilators while the earth above them fairly rocked beneath a hell of shell fire!

Later it was up broad steps like these that German troops rushed with their portable machine guns—to mow down the infantry of certain French advances.

French and British have profited by the experience. Americans are profiting by the experience of all three.

German Mania for Tunnels.

THE Germans have a perfect mania for underground and concrete. At Lens even the sewers were enlarged and concreted. Above them (and communicating with them by cunning secret ways) the cellars of house after house, cellars of old time, already deep, originally strong, were revaulted by reinforced concrete. Modern brewery vaults, ancient wine cellars hewed in limestone, drains and old abandoned coal mines were found bolstered up with ferro-concrete.

The German troops were safe in them; yet they surrendered—when surrounded by numbers and threatened with bombs. "It's another matter when you are surrounded!" says my American sergeant.

Gen. Sixt von Arnim gave an order found on prisoners. (He commands the Fourth German army up here): "Henceforth the strength of German defense must be in the concealment of fighting forces!"

So runs the new German principle. If we could know the plans of French, British, and American attack the expressions would undoubtedly be similar. What? you ask, conceal troops in attack? How is it possible? Well, it is possible.

"The war is getting to be like a moving picture mystery thriller, full of secret passages, miles long, and subterranean chambers," says my sergeant. "Do you know on what pretext the Germans wrecked and flooded the coal mines of Lens? They claimed that the natives were communicating through them with the British army eight miles distant, and were clearing wide passages from mine to mine for a British infantry surprise in their rear!"

At the same time the whole affair has become so businesslike, so scientific, commercial and industrial in its methods that it rejoices the American heart. Gen. Pershing, it is published, has given orders for "eighty steam rollers," 270,000 shovels, 300,000 picks, 125 miles of piping, 50,000 rolls of felt lining material (against dampness), 80,000 stoves, thousands of power pumps, stationary engines, electric ventilating fans, and steam heat apparatus. What we are not told about is the arrival in France of mysterious excavating machines, results of American mining and subway experience and ingenuity, adapted to mysterious uses. Evidently we must be patient. An Italian paper has just published the photograph of an American "tank" unloaded at a French port; but even such great favor to an ally does not extend to the underground!

"We admire and venerate the French, and join right up with them!" exclaims my sergeant. "At the beginning they had nothing. Now they have everything!"

How our American soldiers profit by all this!

French Widows Teach Lesson.

AMERICAN wives and mothers venerate French widows! Your beloved, day by day, will sit in safety by experience of their dead. On the battlefields of Lorraine (where Paris was saved in the great struggle of August-September, 1914, no less than on the Marne) French infantry "took" the Bavarian shell rain on their naked breasts! On the Plateau d'Amance (a hill less than a mile long and eighth of a mile deep) the Bavarians threw 50,000 shells! This was in the early days before we heard of 1,000,000 being fired between breakfast and afternoon tea. The French had no subterranean refuges to shelter in—and a poverty of ammunition to fire back; and yet they "stuck" and saved Lorraine and helped save Paris and the world! How many French mothers paid the price of it? The French infantry lay dead like flies.

Even the trenches, at the beginning of the trench war of the Aisne, were accidentally constructed, so to speak. The Germans were away ahead. The French knew nothing about trench excavators, but scratched the earth with picks and shovels. Neither side fully appreciated the coming rôle of heavy artillery and the need of deep underground shelters which would result therefrom. The Germans (scientific killers by profession) developed these deep shelters long ahead. The French had to learn what they were—by storming German lines and seeing one, here and there (if they were lucky), with their own eyes. It cost them dear!

Today it is all systematized.

Today if a French general, either for attack or defense, mind you, demands subterranean shelters on certain spots of the front capable of preserving a great number of men against violent bombardment, the work does not depend exclusively on his military engineers—although these latter are, naturally, responsible for the most part of their organization. No, the general just gives his orders.

The French authorities have created a special department, which is always ready to pierce, excavate, and solidify with ferro-cement, swiftly, as soon as demanded, and on no matter what point of the front, as many of the exact kind of subterranean shelters as the general in-chief shall call for!

It is like giving an order to a great contracting firm for 20,000 tents, or 500,000 shells, or 2,000 packing cases of tinned beef or raincoats. They are, practically, contracting firms of professional excavators and cementers. They have illustrated catalogues. The general has only to look through the pictures and pick out the number. When the order is given the department takes the work in hand with its giant machines—power excavators, hydraulic piercers and flushers, narrow gauge tracks and cars for the removal of dirt and rock, and blasting sticks to hurry it all along! Then they get busy with their iron rods and cement, their wooden and metal girders, lay the water pipes, electric light, and telephone, install the ventilators, and all is ready for the kitchens, stoves, chairs, beds, and tables for the troops to play poker while waiting.

Work Done on Big Scale.

THIS department has existed for a year back; but only recently has it been permitted to speak of its work. Every month its machines have become perfected. Digging with pick and shovel (always necessary) is reduced to a minimum; and even the loading of narrow gauge cars with excavated dirt and rock is automatic.

"What strikes me is its straight commercial methods," says my American. "There is no red tape. It works like a business firm, and practically it is. The military engineers who run it have fetched in engineers from big industrial works; and these experienced professionals have gathered round them their former employés of civilian life. The work is dangerous. It is done in ground where unexploded shells lie thick and deep. Above their heads, before they get dug in, shells fly and crash continually. Where do you think they work? In the rear? Not much! These subterranean halls are needed on the front, the very front, close up, and——"

Here he stopped and caught himself.

"The workers, yes," he went on. "Many are middle aged men, who had worked in excavating the Paris subway. Each company has its special emblem, regularly a burrowing animal. There are 'The Moles,' 'The Rats,' 'The Beavers,' and so on. And when they have finished a job they put their totem on it, like a trade-mark!"

These are the French.

It is not permitted to tell what the American army is doing. You can guess.

But how, you say, can these deep shelters aid attack? They shelter thousands of men. They are scattered in the most unexpected spots. Some are not at all in use today—they're for sudden, future operations. I do not mean common shelters. Common shelters, every mile or so, are just defensive.

When the watcher, in quiet sectors, calls out "Ware mine!" it means that the "stove pipes" are beginning. You see something like a section of stove pipe or a big black bottle waggling drunkenly in the air and coming toward you; but you do not wait to watch it. Other stove pipes rise and waggle toward you. An attack of aerial torpedoes has begun in the quiet sector; and orders are that all men dive into the subterranean refuge. Each aerial torpedo carries from sixty pounds to 600 pounds of trinitrotoluol, ninety-eight times worse that dynamite. And this is a quiet sector! When great shell bombardments begin (but regularly they don't) nothing can live above ground.

But the attack? How can these deep refuges aid the attack? If I should tell you all that I have heard it would surely be censored out. So, if anything seems lacking here or hard to understand don't blame me but the circumstances.

It is extremely interesting.

To begin with (but not to continue), if thousands and thousands of infantrymen are to make a rush (not "over the top," perhaps, but "into the open") they must be alive and near the starting point to start off at the signal. And what would you say to cavalry in a secret passage miles long? If you feel disposed to smile, remember the coal mines of Lens.

AUTOMOBILES Conducted by SHEPPARD BUTLER MOTORCYCLES

Roads Are Good All the Way on This Day's Trip

By John De Long.

THE more one knows of motoring conditions in northern Illinois, southern Wisconsin, and northern Indiana the more convinced one is that the Hoosier state has the most to offer in the way of uniformly good roads. Illinois at last seems to have awakened to the good roads movement, and within the next few years it is likely vast improvements will be made on the highways of the state. Wisconsin gives promise of falling in line and probably will fix up many of its main highways.

But in the meantime the motorist in planning a tour of a day or two and with the possibility of getting caught on the road during a fall rainstorm likes to play safe by avoiding the dirt roads of Illinois and Wisconsin and making some Indiana place his objective point. An attractive touring suggestion is offered in the trip from Chicago to Terre Haute, Ind., a day's drive of less than 200 miles.

The Terre Haute route has much to offer in the way of good, hard roads that may be safely negotiated in any kind of weather, scenic attractions, and first class accommodations along the way. The route goes through South Chicago, Hammond, Dyer, Kreitzburg, Brunswick, Lowell, Lake Village, Morocco, Ade, Brook, Goodland, Fowler, Rainesville, Attica, Rob Roy, Veedersburg, Yeddo, Kingman, Tangier, and Armiesburg. The route consists of city pavements and macadam for the first twenty-three miles and of good stone and gravel for the balance of the distance to Terre Haute.

Many places of interest are to be seen along the way. The route runs past Cedar Lake and on through Fowler, which is the county seat of one of the richest agricultural counties in Indiana. It is mainly notable for being the center of a magnificent system of gravel and stone roads costing nearly $3,000,000. A few miles from Attica and to the west of the Terre Haute route is located Kramer, famed for its Mudlavia resort.

If one wishes to spend a little additional time and drive a few miles off the main route, a side trip to the famous Shades may be made by branching off to the east after passing West Union. The Shades is a native forest of more than one hundred acres, with all the forest trees of the temperate zone, many of them 300 years old. Here can be found both the open woodland and the tangled jungle, and great ridges covered with native timber. There are deep gulches and ravines; solid walls of rock 200 feet high; several springs of inexhaustible water coming out from under a solid wall of rock, ice cold and flowing down a deep gulch. For those seeking health there are the iron, sulphur, and magnesia springs.

The Shades grounds and gulches are on the banks of Rock river, one of the most beautiful streams in the Mississippi valley. The water that comes from the springs flows over a series of cliffs and rocks, forming a beautiful system of waterfalls.

Where's Illinois?

Statistics for thirty-three of the states of the union show that in 1916 there were 1,439,297 miles of roads, of which about 324,000 were improved highways. Iowa is recorded as having about 111,000 miles of roads, all improved. Ninety-two million dollars was expended on roads in these states in 1916, and more than $50,000,000 was appropriated to be spent this year.

Prison labor is used on the roads in Georgia, Washington, Ohio, Oregon, California, Colorado, West Virginia, and Virginia, and also to a limited extent in New York.

S. A. E. to Have Winter Session at Chicago Show

FOR the first time in its history, the Society of Automotive Engineers will come to Chicago next January for a winter conference of the national body. Arrangements to this effect were announced last week by a committee in charge of the society's deliberations for 1918.

In addition to the usual gathering in connection with the New York automobile show, there will be sessions here during the week of the Chicago exhibit, the organization thus dividing its major winter activities instead of concentrating them in one city.

During the New York show week there will be a two day session—Wednesday and Thursday, Jan. 9 and 10. Wednesday will be standards day, and will be known as such. Thursday will be known as S. A. E. day of show week. There will be a business session in the morning, a professional session in the afternoon, and a war dinner at night.

Chicago takes it place on the S. A. E. winter map with an engineering session either Wednesday or Thursday of Chicago show week, followed by a large patriotic dinner in the evening. Undoubtedly questions of farm tractor design will form a big part of the engineering session.

In addition to these two major winter meetings there will be at least two special sessions held in New York, one on aviation and the other on motor boats. The aviation meeting will be held during the aviation show, and the motor boat meeting will be held during the week of the motor boat show.

Programs at all of the meetings will be largely patriotic in nature. It is contemplated making the war and patriotic dinners in New York and Chicago popular in character and medium priced, and to get the best national talent available for the after dinner talks.

The S. A. E. membership is constantly growing. Since the last meeting of the council, on June 25, there have been received 247 applications for membership. The present membership is 2,775.

Charles Kratsch, of the Sumter Electrical company, Chicago, has been appointed chairman of the newly formed stationary and farm engine division.

Toledo in Line.

Toledo, O., has adopted the one way traffic plan which New York and several other cities have long used with success. To relieve congestion on narrow and much used streets, an ordinance has been passed providing that vehicles may go only in one direction on Huron and Erie streets, between Monroe and Jackson. On these thoroughfares vehicles may stop at the curb on either side, instead of only at the one on the right.

Motoring Hints

Do not forget that those parts of the engine which become hot in normal operation must be adjusted when they are hot. The valve tappets, for example, should not be adjusted when cold, because the clearances will not be correct after the metal has expanded.

The sediment trap in the gasoline tank should be drained periodically. This trap catches water and solid matter that may be in the gasoline. If the trap should become full of foreign matter the excess will travel along to the carburetor and the result will be trouble in plentiful measure.

At this season of the year the car owner should devote some attention to the lubrication of exposed parts of the mechanism, which invite the entrance of mud and water during the storms of fall. The various connections from the steering post to the front wheel spindles need lubrication just as much as do moving parts, and if they are not cleaned periodically and given a fresh supply of grease, they may fail at a time when they are most needed. Leather boots on the steering gear ends help somewhat, but even these do not protect the joints from the entrance of water. The steering connections should be well cleaned and greased. Moreover, from this time on through the winter these exposed parts of the mechanism should have a careful inspection every few hundred miles of running.

How are the Roads?

ABOUT CHICAGO.

The Cook county highway department has completed the work of laying the new concrete surface in Western avenue, and the thoroughfare is now open to traffic as far as the county line with the exception of a short stretch in the city limits. This stretch, which runs from Sixty-third to Seventy-first street, is closed for construction work and will not be opened for some time. Those using Western avenue as a southern exit should detour at Sixty-third street by going one block west and then south around the closed section.

Ballard road has been surfaced with concrete and is now open to traffic from the new Milwaukee avenue concrete road west to Desplaines, a distance of three miles.

The Chicago Motor club reports the operation of a speed trap just outside of Elgin, on the road to Plato Center. Tourists are advised to lookout for a motorcycle officer who makes arrests "for exceeding twenty-five miles an hour" without any particular effort to ascertain one's actual speed.

ELSEWHERE.

The Midland trail, which is reported to be in good average condition at this time, is carrying a large proportion of transcontinental traffic for a part of the distance. Secretary A. F. Bement and Field Secretary H. C. Ostermann of the Lincoln Highway association, who recently completed an inspection trip over the coast to coast route, covered a part of the Midland trail and declare it to be 80 per cent good, 10 per cent fair to poor, and 10 per cent bad. It is said, however, that improvements contemplated in Nevada and California will soon eliminate the bad portion. Those traveling to southern California over the Lincoln highway may follow that route as far as Ely, Nev., and then take the Midland trail through Tonopah, Goldfield, Mojave, and Big Pine to Los Angeles. If San Francisco is the objective point, it would be better to stick to the Lincoln highway throughout, although there are several bad stretch to be negotiated from Salt Lake City on.

The middle western roads are at their best just now and probably will remain in good condition until the fall rains set in and make the dirt roads too slippery for safe or comfortable traveling. The Illinois roads, which at their best are none too good, are in fair shape, while the southern Wisconsin roads are reported in good condition. The Indiana roads, which are the best in this section of the country, still remain the most popular with tourists and are likely to bear the heaviest traffic from now on.

A common cause of poor magneto action is dirt on the interrupter points. When the points are connected or getting dirty a few drops of kerosene will remedy the trouble and rstore the parts to good working order.

A TIRE FILLER

ESSENKAY tire filler keeps the casing "inflated" to the proper point until the tire is worn, evenly, down to its last layer of fabric. It FORTIFIES the tire—gives fabric and rubber a chance to make good.

There is no premature destruction of the casing due to frequent injury and deflation as is the case with air. Where a pneumatic tire will run 3500 miles, the same casing, filled with ESSENKAY will give 7000 miles and more.

ESSENKAY Tire Filler completely replaces air and inner tubes. It is a solid, elastic, resilient, easy riding, enduring compound. It is unaffected by heat, cold, water, sand, pressure, friction, atmospheric or climatic conditions. Containing no rubber, it will not bloom, harden, oxidize, deteriorate or change consistency.

Putting "Pep" Into the Old Car; Try Doing It at Home

By High Speed.

THE ordinary stock touring car or roadster has certain very definite virtues and certain limitations. It is built to give reasonable economy of operation, to last long under careful handling and to develop a moderate turn of speed; in short, it is adapted to what we might call general family service. This is absolutely right, for the average owner of such a vehicle desires a combination of virtues rather than a single outstanding characteristic developed at the expense of the others.

But there are certain conditions when it becomes desirable to increase the speed of a car. The old family ark may have descended to the eldest son, who desires to turn it into a speedster, fitting a snappy bucket-seated body in place of the former "carry-all." These changes may be made largely by the owner himself, though he may have to call in machinist help for certain alterations.

The engine is the first point of attack in the attempt to inject more speed into the car. As a general thing it is desirable to raise the compression. If the engine has a removable head, this part should be machined a few thousandths of an inch to make the compression space smaller, or the cylinder block may be machined at the bottom to bring it down slightly. Another method is to use pistons with higher crowns, or pistons of the same type as before but with the ribs just a bit lower down.

In the search for speed if is necessary to use lighter reciprocating parts than those generally fitted. Accurately fitted aluminum pistons are a great help, though cast iron ones are fair, if they are lightened by drilling. In drilling an iron piston put the hole in the skirt and not too near the piston pin. Two piston rings are enough for this construction and the clearances for alumifium pistons are twice those allowed for iron parts.

New connecting rods of tubular steel or in the form of a machined I-beam alloy steel are advisable, though it is possible to lessen the weight of this part by drilling the one already in use, but this process weakens the rod. The crank shaft is not usually bothered with, though it is possible to have it drilled so that oil from the main bearings will feed the connecting rod lower bearing. Unless it is supposed to run the engine for more than half an hour at maximum speed changes in the oiling system by drilling the crank shaft are not essential.

In the process of getting speed in the car the valve timing and lift are vital and both must be altered. The general procedure is to change the valve lift one-thousandth of an inch or one-sixteenth if there is room. This latter alteration will require a new cam shaft, which is too expensive to be generally followed. In the case of a Ford which is being jacked up a new cam shaft to increase the valve lift is not particularly expensive and is recommended.

It is a good plan to install larger valves than the regular service parts and to do this is necessary o counter bore the valve seats. This is not an expensive job or the owner may do it himself if he has the tools. Using valves one-thirty-second of an inch larger is about all that can be done safely. The tension of the valve springs may be slightly increased by doubling the spring just a little. Lightening the valve mechanism is a real help for high speed, so it may even be advisable to remove the adjusting nuts or in the case of an overhead system to machine the rocker arms and vertical rods to reduce their weight.

It will be necessary to make some change in the carburetor to get real speed into the old car. It may even be advisable to use two carburetors of the same size as the old one; barring that a larger instrument must be installed, an increase of from one-eighth to one-quarter of an inch in the diameter is permissible, and this may necessitate the installation of a new inlet manifold. When possible the idea of bolting the carburetor directly to the cylinder block is advisable. For feeding the fuel either weight gravity or straight pressure will probably have to be employed. The vacuum feed system, so successful on stock cars, has to be supplemented by a vacuum pump for use at high speeds.

For the ignition system to be installed at the speed pair. If a standard magneto is already on board it will probably give very well. If a good battery system is used an extra breaker should be installed, thus taking the current from two breakers instead of one. Special racing spark plugs with cooling flanges may be purchased from any of the big makers.

No change need be made in the cooling system, though the thermo-siphon type may not be able to absorb the heat at very high speeds.

The gear reduction in the rear axle can easily be changed, according to the ability of the engine to handle it. The general run of racing cars use less than three to one reductions, but there are exceptions that have done well with four and even higher to one. This change requires the installation of a new differential ring gear and driving pinion, which may usually be purchased from the makers.

The ordinary clutch may not be able to take care of the increased speed of the car. If it is a dry disk unit, increasing the number of plates and lubricating them at the same time that the spring pressure is increased by adjustment or substituting a longer spring in the same housing will probably serve. If the clutch is of the cone type, increasing the spring pressure and installing a new facing will turn the trick.

Beyond all this the entire car should be lightened wherever possible without weakening the structure seriously. All needless parts should be removed from the engine, such as the lighting generator, the starting motor, etc. The frame may be lightened by drilling, cross members should be drilled away from the center, and the rear cross member of a touring car may be removed altogether. Perhaps the spring brackets may be filed and a leaf or two may be taken out of the springs. On this lightened chassis an aluminium body of the desirable cigar shape may be mounted, be-with it wire wheels may be installed, and the "speed bug" has the desire of his heart, a real racing car, and no one need know that it was made out of father's old touring car.

COMMON SENSE

Chicago Tackles the Job of Making the Streets Safe for Motorists.

Accidents at street intersections are due frequently to short radius curbs which throw a vehicle making the turn into the wrong side of the street. The pictures show how Chicago thoroughfares are being adapted to the needs of the automobile in this respect.

The intersection is that at Lake Shore drive and Division street, where the old curb of one and one-half foot radius has been replaced with a new one fourteen feet in radius. The change makes it possible for motorists to negotiate the turn with only a slight reduction of speed and with no necessity of taking the wrong side of the street.

Mobilizing.

The state council of defense of Wisconsin has issued an appeal to car owner to organize county squads for the purpose of taking harvesting hands to and from the fields.

Dollar 'Gas' in Cuba.

More than 1,000 automobiles in Havana have been forced into retirement by the action of retail gasoline dealers in jumping the price from 47 cents a gallon to $1 and in some instances to $1.20.

The Experts Say---??

Owners of cars wired by the single wire method should examine the ground connections at frequent intervals. A loose or corroded ground will often cause dim burning, and sometimes it may even eliminate all flow of current.

One of the factors making for deterioration of the spare tire is the exhaust. The heat and corroding gases issuing from the exhaust, right near the spare when it is carried in the rear, tend to impair the rubber and shorten the life of the tire, even more than if it had been in active service on the road.

If trouble develops in the battery, which upon examination is found to be up to normal and yet is not delivering enough current to furnish lights nor spark enough to ignite the fuel, the basic fault will very possibly be found in corrosion of the terminals. When the terminals are covered with a hard green deposit, no current can flow. Sometimes this deposit is so hard that it takes a chisel to remove it.

Unequally adjusted rear wheel brakes are a potent cause of skidding, and it is wise to make frequent tests of the parts for incorrect adjustment. It is necessary to have some one with you to watch the wheels. Drive the car along a dry road, accelerate quickly and then suddenly apply the brakes. If one wheel slides while the other is revolving, it may be taken for granted that the brakes are not holding with equal effectiveness.

This is a good time to apply some graphite to the rims, so that they will not rust. A good graphite grease or plain graphite may be used for this purpose.

Double boiled linseed oil may be used to waterproof the top. The oil should be spread evenly over the fabric with a fine brush. Naturally two coats of the linseed will give better results than one.

"The Most Beautiful Car in America"

Introducing a Motor That Was Developed by the War

For eight years now, the general public and the automobile industry have learned to expect great things of the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company. Each one of our annual announcements has proved to be unusually significant. Each one of these announcements has created history in a very definite way, and the motor car buyer has invariably been the gainer.

This year, we confidently predict, will prove no exception to the rule. We have produced a car that must inevitably revolutionize the trend of thought and practice in the six cylinder field. Coming directly to the point, we have produced what we sincerely believe to be a perfect motor car.

It will probably be your first impulse to condemn this statement as extravagant and altogether unprovable. We ask you, however, to consider a straightforward statement of the facts. You will then be in position to accept or reject our claims after a thorough investigation of the car itself.

We would first remind you that internal combustion motors have been under the scientific microscope for the past three years. The European war necessitated immediate development in all fields of engineering, and the gasoline engine has received more attention than any other type of power plant.

It was quickly recognized that tractors, trucks and aeroplanes must be developed to their utmost efficiency. The best brains of two continents were focused on the problem. American engineers—including two of our own—worked night and day just behind the battle line in France.

Then—slowly but surely—came the results.

Old weaknesses were routed out and discarded for all time. Changes in design were suggested, applied and adopted. Constant experiment and tireless scientific research would not be denied—and, before long, entirely new principles and standards were firmly established.

The old orthodox gasoline motor was dead—deader than yesterday's newspaper. A new King had been crowned in the engineering world. The wheel of progress had turned.

It was at this point that the Paige-Detroit Motor Car Company made a prompt decision. Paige power plants must be brought up to the current day—the current hour—of engineering efficiency. Good as our old motors had been, they were not good enough when science afforded anything better.

So, without quibble or compromise, we started at the very beginning and produced an entirely new design. Just what changes were made and just how they were made would require a small volume in the telling. But it is results that you are interested in and these we can lay before you.

In power, flexibility, quietness and economy of operation, the new Paige Essex Model "Six-55" is, we believe, the most remarkable car on the American market.

The last irregularity of the power impulses has been done away with. The car travels evenly, smoothly and sweetly at every speed. As a consequence, vibration has been reduced to the absolute minimum. One no longer rides in a Paige—he floats.

The slightest depression of the accelerator pedal brings an immediate and truly amazing result. It can only be compared to the unleashing of mighty, hidden forces. With no sense of laboring effort—no "bucking" or side sway—the Essex sweeps ahead into its full stride with the speedometer needle frantically attempting to keep pace.

Despite its tremendous power, however, this new motor is anything but a glutton for fuel. An improved system of carburetion utilizes every last atom of gasoline energy, and repeated factory tests have shown economy records that surpass anything accomplished by earlier Paige cars.

To sum it all up, scientific distribution of weight, scientific alignment of working parts, scientific designing of all chassis units—these are the great factors that have united to make the Paige a superb mechanical product. These, indeed, are the factors that distinguish between the old standards of engineering and the new.

And now there remains but one thing more to be said: The Essex Model, as a whole, is strictly in keeping with its wonderful power plant.

We started out with the deliberate intention of producing a perfect motor car—and we have accomplished just that result. From tire carrier to headlights, the Essex is flawless. There are no crudities, no hidden weaknesses, no "compromises."

So far as beauty and elegance are concerned you, of course, know what to expect. "The Most Beautiful Car in America" speaks for itself. It is an exquisite creation — an artistic achievement as well as a mechanical masterpiece.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

A national law regulating all phases of motoring and taking the place of the present state and municipal statutes is urged by W. G. Tennant, president of the Tennant-Oakland company and secretary of the Chicago Automobile Trade association. "I have been collecting and analyzing the various existing motor laws and ordinances lately," says Mr. Tennant, "and I can readily understand why so many pleasure motor excursions develop into annoying trips. There is such a variation in speed laws, light regulations, and other conditions that drivers frequently are absolutely ignorant as to whether they are complying with the rules of the state, county, or city through which they may be traveling. The automobile industry has become too big, too important, to allow loose, careless laws to handicap it."

Economy runs, made under actual touring conditions, are growing in favor. A Dort has just completed a ten day test in California under A. A. A. supervision, running between Los Angeles and San Francisco, and covering 4,658 miles at an average of 22.96 miles per gallon of gasoline. In an attempt to drive a Briscoe from Jackson, Mich, to St. Augustine, Fla., on fifty gallons of fuel, Charles F. Hopkins Jr. of St. Augustine has made 761 miles of his journey on thirty gallons—an average of a little more than twenty-five miles to the gallon.

"Harry Newman's Pep," the newest contribution to the literature of motordom, is a bit of a magazine bristling with the characteristic observations of the president of the Harry Newman-Stratton company, which stands sponsor in this neck of the woods for the Hal Twelve, the King, and the Maxwell. An idea of the contents of its first issue may be gleaned from some of the titles—"Mark Twain and Salesmanship" "The Quiet Man at the Wheel" "A Nice Gang to Know" "Crossing Cops and Courtesy" and so on.

The Elgin Motor Car corporation of Chicago has been elected to membership in the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Drastic headlight laws in various states are compelling the manufacturers to adopt special lenses in increasing numbers. The most important change in the new Hudson models it is announced is to be the appearance of the so-called Controllite lens as stock equipment.

Casting up the conclusions reached at its recent sales congress which brought together salesmen from every part of the United States Willys-Overland, Inc., submits the aphorism that the successful motor car has five cardinal attributes—appearance, performance, comfort, service, and price.

A surprising amount of interest is reported by Walter J. Evans, sales manager of the Centaur Motor company, in the new Nash models, first shown in Chicago during the week. Hundreds of visitors were received at the concern's salesrooms, where the low price of the car, made known only at the last moment, proved the chief subject of comment.

"If there is a lull in the demand for some motor cars," says Ned Jordan, head of the Jordan Motor Car company, "it is the fault of the car, and not due to economic conditions. I judge this from the number of letters and telegrams I have received about the new Jordan roadster, announced a few weeks ago. Decidedly, they don't indicate any letup in business."

Letters have been sent to every Reo owner in Chicago announcing the establishment of a service school for owners, with classes meeting every week. Instruction will be given in such matters as cleaning spark plugs, draining and lubricating the motor, adjusting brakes, clutch, and valves, greasing the car, locating lighting troubles, and replacing fuses. A patriotic desire to release as many trained mechanics as possible for government duty is given as the reason for the innovation.

AT THE COLISEUM

News Notes of the First National Exposition for Ford Accessories.

Visitors at the exposition for Ford accessories, now under way at the Coliseum, are learning, among other things, how tires are made—hitherto a matter of considerable mystery to the average motorist. The Ehman Tire and Rubber company has an exhibit showing tire builders actually at work, illustrating every operation from the placing of the carcass to the completion of the tread, with the exception of the final vulcanizing process, which required a large and cumbersome mechanical installation. The tires as they are built each day will be taken at night to the company's plant at Twenty-seventh and La Salle streets to be vulcanized and made ready for the road. Under the direction of the concern's chief chemist there is also a display of all the raw materials used in tire manufacture, such as rubber, fabric, and chemicals.

To demonstrate the immunity of Essen-Kay tire filler to the effects of heat, cold, water, sand, mud, pressure, friction, and atmospheric conditions, the makers of this compound, at their booth, are offering daily illustrations of how it can be mistreated without injury. The filler is being boiled, frozen, and subjected to enormous pressure in a vice. One piece will remain in boiling water until the closing day of the show. Another is imprisoned in a cake of ice. When the exposition is over a committee of technical experts will be asked to determine by examination whether any substantial change in the compound has been produced. The product is offered as a substitute for air in automobile tires.

A novel device for the use of low grade gasoline or kerosene is shown by the Kerosene Burning Carburetor company of Detroit. This is a manifold, the inner chamber of which is thickly studded with cast pins, designed to be heated by the exhaust. As the mixture of fuel and air passes through the pin chamber on its way from the carburetor to the engine the liquid part strikes the hot pins and is thoroughly vaporized. At the same time, it is claimed, the whole stream is heated to just the proper degree, the result being that all the fuel vapor reaches the cylinders in the best possible condition. For using kerosene a special carburetor is offered as auxiliary equipment.

The Chicago Pneumatic Tool company is exhibiting the Duntley hydropneumatic generator, another device for burning kerosene. This is being made the subject of an elaborate experiment by Teddy Slingman Jr. and G. Heym, who are driving about the country with a 1913 Ford equipped with the Duntley generator and operating on nothing but such coal oil as the tourists can buy at grocery stores along the way. The drivers have traveled more than 1,200 miles thus far and report an average of better than twenty-five miles per gallon of the inexpensive fuel. Their lowest mileage, they say, was 21.08, through the White mountains. Their highest was over the good roads of Connecticut, where they negotiated an even 100 miles on three gallons. No trouble has been experienced at any point.

THE MOTOR CAR OF 1951

'Twill Have No Levers, Pedals, or Steering Wheel, Says Waldemar Kaempffert—Front Wheels Will Drive It

What will the automobile of the future be like? Any one has the right to guess, but Waldemar Kaempffert, who used to edit the Scientific American and has subsequently directed the destinies of the Popular Science Monthly, may be presumed to know, in a measure, what he's talking about. Here are his ideas, as presented in McClure's Magazine:

LET me show you the motor car of 1951. First of all, you are struck with its sheer beauty of line. There are no abrupt, ugly angles. Curve melts into curve with a grace that you associate with the form of a swan. There is no wall-like windshield; there are no obtruding fenders. By 1913 the designer of airplanes had discovered that a large correctly designed bulk is more easily moved through the air than a mass composed of projecting wires, stays, wheels, arms, and legs—that each projection, however slight, rakes the air and leaves an invisible wake behind it.

His work was not lost upon the motor car designer. The streamline body, as it is called, made its appearance about 1915. By 1951 not only will it have been generally adopted, but it will be far more refined than anything which we can now display. It will part the air gently, as smoothly as a pike slips through the water of a lake.

We may expect in the motor car of 1951 something akin to push button control. The guiding of a motor car or truck in these days of the motor car's infancy is no mean physical performance. Arms and legs play far too important a part in motoring. If a locomotive engineer were thus dependent on his muscles, there would be no seventy car freight trains, no twenty hour train between New York and Chicago. Think of the physical demands now made upon you and then ask yourself if you have not the right to demand that by 1951 inventors will have tossed gear shift levers and brake pedals upon the scrap heap.

The ideal motor car of the future will have just one controlling lever and no more. See, as I pull or push the lever I turn the power on or off. Did you notice how the engine slowed down and the brakes were automatically applied as the car slackens speed? There are no pedals to operate. The speed of the engine determines how hard the brakes shall be applied—in other words, in what distance the car shall be brought to a full stop.

In a country threaded with superbly smooth thoroughfares the steering wheel will be abolished. With a little handle you will guide the car of 1951 to the right or left. No tense muscles will be called upon to avoid collisions. Steamships have long had their steering engines to swerve rudders that weigh many tons. The steering engine is controlled by the wheel on the bridge. So in this car of 1951 the little steering handle causes a motor to turn the front wheels to the right or left.

We do, in 1917, but it is wrong, egregiously wrong, to drive a vehicle from the rear. Why? Because it is easier to pull than push. The tugboat pulls its barges; the locomotive pulls its coaches; the freight handler on our wharves pulls his hand truck. Nature seems to have discovered long ago that pulling is easier than pushing. Unlike the car of 1917, the motor car of 1951 will, therefore, be pulled by its motor.

And the motor itself—how different from the engine of 1917. Gasoline will cease to be motor car fuel in 1930. There will not be enough oil in the world from which gasoline can be distilled. The alcohol and electric motor will take the place of the gasoline engine.

That Spare Tire.

A special tire carrier for Ford and Chevrolet cars consists of a flanged metal rim, mounted at the rear of the car and holding the tire in much the manner of a clincher rim. A ridge presses the bands of the tire out against the rim flanges, holding it securely in place after it has been expanded by means of a lever. The lever may be padlocked in the expanded position and prevents mud and water from splashing into the tire. There is a single type at $4 and a double type at $6.

Help Build Roads.

The national congress of Peru, at its last session, passed a highway law having for its purpose the encouragement of road construction throughout the country. The new law distributes the cost of new construction between the local and the national governments and provides both for new revenues for this purpose and for the payment of a road tax either in money or labor.

Increase, 222 Per Cent.

Municipal officials have to think fast nowadays to keep up with the growth of traffic on their streets. An official traffic census, taken in 1915 at seven points in Seattle, Wash., revealed 17,568 motor vehicles. In 1911 a total of 5,160 was counted under the same conditions. That's an increase of just 222 per cent.

Too Low!

The hydrometer tells the tale!

The little float, sinking deep in the battery solution, gives instant warning of danger.

The specific gravity is too low—the battery has been starved, but the hydrometer warns you in time to apply the remedy and keep your battery in good health.

You might never have guessed that trouble was near—because your battery appeared to work with undiminished energy. But the hydrometer is never fooled—it always shows up the true condition of your battery.

Next time you're near, come in and we'll show you how to take hydrometer tests.

And while you're here, ask us about the Still Better Willard with Threaded Rubber Insulation. The remarkable performance of this battery during a two years' test is of interest to all car owners.

The Hole in the "Special Discount" Doughnut

As a rule the American public is safely suspicious of the man who would offer it something for nothing.

Yet curiously enough there still persists in the minds of certain motorists that fallacy of the "special discount" tire.

Let it be said here and now that there is no such thing as a "special discount" tire which has not at its heart a "special discount" quality.

For it costs money to build worth and wear into a tire just as it does into any other article that you buy.

When a dealer offers you a "special discount" to get you to buy a tire, you may fairly be sure that he is doing one of two things.

Either he is offering you a tire on which he, himself, gets a special discount from its maker, or he is withholding from you the helpful service so necessary to secure maximum mileage from the tire.

In the one case, the tire is damned at its source by compromised manufacture; in the other, it is handicapped in its service by neglect.

There is a hole in the doughnut somewhere. You do not want that tire.

Only the conscientious dealer who gets his fair margin can afford to sell you quality tires and to perform for you the service such tires should have.

Think of these things the next time a tire dealer offers you something for nothing in a "special discount" tire.

Mountain Trails on Dixie Highway Ready Next Year

By V. D. L. Robinson.

[Secretary Dixie Highway Association.]

COMPLETED Dixie highway between Cincinnati and Chattanooga now depends only on how rapidly the work under way in the Kentucky and Tennessee mountains can be carried on. The only condition which might be attached to this statement is that of completing the raising of a fund of $50,000 to be used with a like amount set aside by the state highway department of Kentucky for the construction of four and a half miles in Rockcastle county, from the Rockcastle river to Livingston. This fund is practically assured.

On a recent inspection trip reports of progress made were carefully checked up and county judges and road authorities in each of the counties interviewed. The trip gave positive assurance of a well surfaced road throughout by the middle of 1918 and a travelable road prior to that time.

While a motor trip through the Cumberlands along the eastern division of the Dixie highway at the present time represents the severest test of endurance of car and occupants, to be brought into intimate touch with the spirit of progress which has come to the mountain people amply compensates the motorist for the difficulties encountered. They seem to have caught the bigness of the idea of a Dixie highway tying up the north and the south in a way which would put to shame many of the more fortunate communities of the valley.

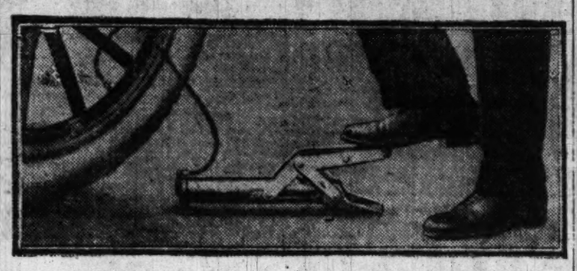
The mountain men have had their difficulties, in many instances of far greater import than those of counties having less expensive road to construct with greater resources. These are traceable more to the intensity of the competition of rival communities for the routing of the highway than to a lack of interest and determination to see it through. The work is now being pushed as rapidly as labor and materials will permit.

The type of grading and surfacing, particularly in the Kentucky counties, reflects the value of state aid and its attendant rigid state inspection. All curves and grades are made along lines of the most approved type of road construction. When a well surfaced highway is connected up, it will be possible to make the entire trip through the mountains in the majority of makes of cars in high gear all the way.

Even the detours encountered over rocky mountain trails around new grades where bridge and culvert construction prevents the use of the new road cannot detract from the marvelous beauty of scenery of the Pinnacle, Lone, and Wild Cat, and other mountains of the Cumberland range, which will equal that of any road in the United States. It is safe to predict that the cars from all over the United States which will travel this highway when completed during all seasons of the year can be counted by the tens of thousands.

The highway between Knoxville and the Blue Grass is now being dotted with excellent hotels to cater to the needs of the tourists. There are now three hotels located in mountain towns along the highway, which are equal in appointment to any hotels of similar size in the United States. Modern garages are being constructed in almost all of the mountain towns in preparation for the stream of tourists certain to come the minute the highway is travelable. Even now the tourists are coming. Seventeen cars passed through a mountain town in one day last week, south bound from Ohio and other points.

The LITTLE THINGS THAT HELP

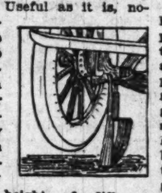


You "Step on It."

Motorists who are not equipped with the luxury of a power driven tire pump should be interested in a sensible and inexpensive little device designed to do away with the back breaking work of operating a hand pump. This operates on the simple principle of using the vastly greater muscular power of the foot and leg. Having bent over once to attach the hose to the tire valve, you do the rest of the work of inflation in an upright position instead of stooping for every stroke. A spring returns the lever automatically to its original position as each stroke is completed. The device is of simple and durable construction and folds up when not in use into a space 17x3½x3½ inches. The price is $5.

Why Is a Jack Handle?

Like the fat man, the ordinary jack has few friends. Useful as it is, nobody likes to operate it. So here comes an inventive genius with a contraption which makes the car raise itself. Essentially, it is a baby rocking chair—an upright made adjustable to allow for the varying height of different axles, and a rocking member which furnishes the leverage. In use, the support is propped against the axle with the rocking member on the ground. Then the car is driven forward or backward a few inches—just enough to swing the jack into an upright position. Of course it takes a bit of skill to do this, but the inventor says it's easier than it sounds.



A Wartime Signal.

Some day, perhaps, we shall smile in retrospect over the naive little devices with which the motorists of 1917 blazoned their patriotism. Meanwhile, the flag holders and similar contraptions are finding wide favor. A Cleveland manufacturer now offers a warning signal which represents a miniature Liberty bell and is attached in a prominent position, usually to one of the windshield supports. Above the bell is a tiny red light which flashes at night when the signal is operated.

Crystal Coated Bulbs.

One of the many methods of avoiding headlight glare is the use of specially prepared lamp bulbs. For this purpose there are now to be had lamps which are described as crystal coated, as opposed to frosted. The coating is permanently applied to the surface of the glass, forming a network with open spaces between. The tiny crystals allow the light to pass through freely, but at the same time, it is said, break the large glaring beams into fine rays, giving a field of soft, white light. It is the maker's claim that one may stand within the focus and gaze directly into the light without experiencing any inconvenience

Still Going Up.

The expected increases in tire prices were marked by the announcement by seven companies of a rise of from 5 to 15 per cent in quotations. This is the third increase since last December and totals approximately 50 per cent since that time. The last rise was in April, amounting to 15 per cent. Last December they rose 15 per cent.

As in former rises, the mounting cost of production and the steady increase in fabric have been responsible for the higher tire prices. It is stated that the fabric now going into one tire costs $4 more than it did several months ago.

Prices of raw rubber are a trifle lower, so tubings are not so much affected.

Now They Give Us Motor Fuel Made of Straw!

THE subject of fuel divides with that of tires the honor of being the topic most discussed by motorists. Especially in these days, when saving gasoline is so desirable and desired. Short cuts and economy methods are getting more than their usual share of attention.

Motor fuel from sawdust already has been noted. Now it is reported from Canada that fuel gas—10,000 feet from a ton—can be made out of everyday straw. It is reported that more than 20,000,000 tons of straw are available in western Canada, for which otherwise there would be very little use.

Thirty to forty tons of this straw will provide the average farmer with light, heat, and power for a year, it is said. But more important from the automobilist's point of view is that this straw gas is adaptable to internal combustion engines.

From France comes the word that a mixture of 75 per cent denatured alcohol and 25 per cent gasoline is being used successfully in engines. This combustion is characterized as very satisfactory, "one that affords flexibility and makes starting a cold engine as easy as with a gasoline mixture." The alcohol-gasoline fuel does not require an increase in the oil supply, but its use necessitates that the lubrication system be carefully watched; that is, with the splash or combination splash and force feed that the maximum level be constantly maintained.

French tests lasting for two months indicate that the use of alcohol as a fuel removes any carbon previously existing. After disassembling the engine it is found that the valves, pistons, rings, and cylinder are clean and in excellent condition. It is said that part of the lubricating oil slightly enriches the mixture. Tests demonstrated the carbon removing possibilities of carburetted alcohol, it cleaning an engine in about three hours.

VOICE of the MOTORIST

Doesn't Want Macadam.

Chicago, Sept. 18.—[Automobile Editor of The Tribune.]—Recent references to the state and federal aid road appropriation in Illinois have quoted B. B. Johnson of the Chicago Automobile club as saying, "I hope these roads will be built of macadam in the same manner that the New England roads are built."

You know that one of the most difficult things we have had to contend with in our campaign to secure good roads in this state is the education of the public as to the proper type of road to build. Our state highway department has taken a progressive view of this situation, with the result that none but concrete, brick, or asphalt, with concrete base roads is approved for main travel systems.

The majority of the states in New England do not build any macadam roads at all any more, unless it be in some spot where travel is light. Macadam road for heavy automobile traffic is a total failure and the only type of road that deserves an investment from a bond issue is the permanent hard road, such as specified by our state highway department.

ERNEST L. BEIFELD.

To the Wisconsin Lakes.

Janesville, Wis., Sept. 17.—[Automobile Editor of The Tribune.]—An inquiry from a TRIBUNE reader as to how to find the best automobile roads to the northern Wisconsin lake region, and to Mercer in particular, prompts me to make certain suggestions out of my own experience. I have driven to that part of Wisconsin for three years now and have found the roads as good, on the average, as any in this part of the state.

The best way to reach Mercer, I think, is to go to Appleton and pick up the Big Fish route, which you can follow to Minocqua. This takes you through the reservation north of Shawano, where the scenery and roads are both good.

From Minocqua you go straight north about two miles to Woodruff. From Woodruff the best road goes to the east of Trout lake to Boulder, thence west to Manitowish, and then to Mercer. The only doubtful part of the road would be from Woodruff to Boulder; the rest is improved road.

We made more than 200 miles a day on all three trips.

Another way is to go up through Hurley and Ironwood and then down to Mercer. Several parties from here have taken this route.

STANLEY G. DUNWIDDIE,
District Attorney for Rock County.

That Rockford Route.

Belvidere, Ill., Sept. 20.—[Automobile Editor of The Tribune.]—I note that your suggestion in last Sunday's TRIBUNE for tourists from Chicago to Camp Grant shows routing via Cherry Valley. This road is the poorest of the three from Belvidere to Rockford.

The best route from Belvidere to Rockford is over the Newburg road, or the center road out of Belvidere. This is a graveled road, and is the only one of the three roads leading to Rockford that can be traveled as well after a heavy storm as when the road is dry. I would suggest that this route into Rockford be recommended.

A. B.

EDITOR'S NOTE.—The tour suggestion referred to called attention to the fact that residents of Belvidere have worked out two reasonably good ways of entering Rockford from their city. These have not been logged in detail, however, and the Cherry Valley route was given for the benefit of those who like to guide their driving by their speedometers.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS by HIGH SPEED

Because of the large volume of requests for automobile routes and the relatively small amount of space in which to answer them readers wishing immediate replies are advised to inclose a 2 cent stamp with inquiries so they may be answered by mail. Questions of general interest, such as those pertaining to driving and the care of the car, will be answered as far as possible in this column.

What in your opinion is the better, a car that has the splash feed oiling system or one that employs forced feed lubrication? M. E. T., Chicago.

The forced feed system is by all means the best and for that reason most of the cars are equipped that way. As long as the engine remains in a level position the splash system gives fair satisfaction; that is, providing the level of the oil is kept up to the lowest point of the connecting rod where it may be picked up and thrown to the upper part. If, however, the car is on a stiff grade the engine will be tilted, whereupon the oil runs toward the rear cylinder. The result is that the rear cylinder is overlubricated, while the front one is underlubricated. With the forced feed system the oil is forced by a pump from a reservoir at the bottom of the crankcase. In this way the oil is forced to the main bearings, thence to the connecting rod bearings and on up through channels or pipes to the wrist pin, after which it goes out of the wrist pin to the walls of the cylinder. In addition to the types described is the semi-circulating system as used on the Ford car. This is a semi-splash system, in which troughs are placed in the bottom of the crankcase. These troughs retain the oil, even when the engine is at an incline. The connecting rods splash the oil to all parts of the motor and the fly wheel throws the oil to the top of the transmission case where part of the lubricant is caught and fed by gravity to the cam gears. The overflow, coming back, tends to keep the troughs filled with oil

To settle an argument will you please state what kind of a mixture has a tendency to heat the motor most, rich or lean? A. T. G., Tiskilwa, Ill.

It depends upon the circumstances. If the car is running light a rich mixture will heat the quicker. If the car is under a heavy load a lean mixture will cause teh motor to heat up.

Will you please let me know through the department if the Lincoln highway has been completed clear through to San Francisco. If not, when will it be finished? What is this highway composed of, asphalt or macadam?

MRS. McA., Delavan, Wis.

I regret to inform you that you are laboring under a delusion in thinking that the Lincoln highway is a hard surfaced route across the country. It consists of just ordinary country roads of dirt, sand, gravel, clay, and macadam, according to the locality through which it passes, with a few short stretches of concrete. It is doubtful if this generation will see any transcontinental route that consists entirely of asphalt, macadam, or concrete.

Will you please give the best automobile route from Danville, Ill., to Sedalia, Mo.? C. W. RHODE, Attica, Ind.

Drive to Terre Haute and then follow the old National road through Effingham and Vandalia to St. Louis. From St. Louis follow the Southern State highway through Dwyer, Ellisville, Washington, and Morrison to Jefferson City. Then go through California, Tipton, Otterville, and Smithtown to Sedalia.

Please furnish me with the best route and the distance from Chicago to Crawfordsville, Ind. I. J., Chicago.

Go through South Chicago, Hammond, Dyer, Brunswick, Lowell, Lake Village, Morocco, Ade, Goodland, Fowler, Rainesville, Attica, Newton, Wingatex, and Elmdale to Crawfordsville. 162.2 miles.

Motor Hints

The substitution of a blue bulb for the ordinary clear one, which illuminates the dash, has certain advantages. The blue light is brilliant enough to afford ready reading of the various instruments and yet all back glare is eliminated. Moreover the blue light rather improves the appearance of the compartment at night.

Oil on the brake bands is a not uncommon trouble, even in some modern cars, and it is caused by excess oil in the differential housing. The excess oil is forced through the axle tubes and eventually gets to the brakes. This is true of those axles not fitted with special devices to prevent leakage. On some axles a small drain is fitted near the outer end of the tube, while in others the interiors of the shaft housings are fitted with tubes which catch the oil before it gets to the brakes. By keeping the oil level in the housing at the correct point, much of this leakage will be obviated.

Care in the use of the machinist's hammer, which forms a part of the tool equipment of every automobile, is one of the first things the amateur automobile repair man must learn when working around the engine. With this hammer he can do more damage in a moment than a good man can repair in a week. His first inclination is to use this form of persuasion on any and every refractory part, and this is a desire which should be overcome.

Not only should the hammer itself not be used on any metal parts without the intervention of a block of wood to protect the surface, but care must be exercised to avoid hitting the other parts through the inaccuracy of aim that distinguishes the unskilled wielder of this tool.

A poorly aimed blow that misses its target and lands on one of the valve push rods or similarly vulnerable parts with any degree of force is apt to cause trouble of an expensive nature.

It is a good thing for the novice to be sparing in the use of his hammer as a sure-all. Do not resort to it unnecessarily, and do not use a sledge hammer blow where a light tap will do the work.

BIG LAND OPENING

40,000 ACRES of choice land in Antrim, Kalkaska, and Charlevoix Counties, Michigan, to be placed on the market October 2d. These lands were formerly timbered with sugar maple, beech, elm, basswood, birch, hemlock, poplar, oak and ash. There are no superior new lands to be found anywhere in the United States. Beautiful virgin forests still standing, worth going a long distance to see; adjoin these lands and plainly mark the character of them. This is an opportunity for the homeseeker that will never come again.

DO NOT GET THE IDEA that this is an unsettled country. Many good improved farms adjoin our lands and they are close to towns and schools. There are good roads, telephone lines and rural mail routes.

NOW ALL OF YOU who have complained because there are no more good lands to be had at cheap prices, such as your fathers bought, must act now or forever after hold your peace. The opening price on these lands will be from $20 to $30 per acre according to location and character. They will be sold in tracts of 20, 40, 80, and 160 acres, for cash or on terms that most any one can meet, small first payment, balance monthly or yearly payments stretching over a period of six or seven years. This is your chance to get first choice in this splendid new district.

WRITE TODAY for new handsome illustrated booklet free, giving full information about these lands and the district in which they are located. Get posted in advance and make arrangements to join our first Special Pullman Car Excursion to this new tract on Tuesday, October 2d. Excellent accommodations for both men and women at our fine new hotel. Round trip rate including railroad fare, Pullman Car, hotel and automobile trip over the lands, $14.70. Leave Chicago at 11:00 A. M. Tuesday, back early Friday morning.

"Kaiser Booster" Just General City Hall Term

As a result of a controversy between Charles P. Schwartz, attorney, and Maj. Funkhouser, second deputy of police, concerning the failure of the major to grant a permit for a motion picture represented by Mr. Schwartz, the major was alluded to as "one of the kaiser boosters in the city hall." Mr. Schwartz explains this phrase was not directed toward Maj. Funkhouser personally, but used to describe the city administration generally. The quotation was provided by Ben Garretson, press agent for the motion picture.

U. S. ENGINEERS DEFY BOMBS TO RUN WAR TRAINS

Regiment Wins Praise for Efficient Work in Big Task.

BY LINCOLN EYRE.

[Copyright: 1917: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

AMERICAN FIELD HEADQUARTERS, France, Sept. 22.—Railroads carrying troops, munitions, and supplies near the French battle fields are today being run by American engineers. Loaned to the French army by the United States, a regiment composed of men from the big American lines is operating trains over a large area which is frequently bombed by German air raiders.

Already the engineers, to whom goes the distinction of being the first American troops actively in the greatest war in history, have been savagely attacked by German airmen. Attracted by the red glare from the locomotive, due to the opening of the firebox, the Germans rained high explosives down upon a train that was being driven through the night by an American crew. Obeying instructions given them in advance, the Americans took shelter under the engine and escaped harm, although bombs were bursting all about them, one less than 100 feet away.

Go to Front with Smiles.

I accompanied the engineers to the front from the base town in which they had been spending a month for instructional purposes. Nowhere among the American troops in France have I seen a higher spirited or abler looking lot of men. Their hilarity as they entered the train which was to carry them to their corner in a famous battle region almost shocked the pollus watching them.

After three years of it there is no laughter in a Frenchman's heart when he sets out for the front. With him it is just a grim job that has got to be done; with these railroaders it is adventure, romance, opportunity for glorious achievement. They are fired with enthusiasm for everything and everybody—for their country, for every reason one can imagine; for France, for which they are to do their bit; for Great Britain, where they landed and received a boisterous welcome, and for themselves because they are picked men and know it.

Called "One Out of Seven."

"One out of seven" is their slogan. It means that from every seven applicants for enlistment in the regiment only one was chosen. Among them are traffic managers, division superintendents, train dispatchers, conductors, engineers, firemen, brakemen, signal men, track walkers, and a numerous variety of specialists needed to run a modern railroad.

Their colonel is a regular army engineer, but all their other officers and almost all of the men were civilians last May. Although superficially they seem on more familiar terms with their officers than the average infantry regiment, they are soldiers and recognized as such by the French veterans, and are charged with one of the most important tasks of an important region.

One night they found themselves aboard a French troop train which carried them to one of the big bases behind the French front. Their reception there can be told best in the language of a brawny fighter from whom I heard about it.

Not Even a Cigaret.

"Our train was hopping along without light," he said. "We didn't know where we were except it was somewhere near the front. We knew that from an exceptional gun booming away north of us. Along about 10 o'clock at night we pulled into this here place, and they told us we had arrived. No talking and no lights, not even cigarets, was the order. And so we staggered out into pitch darkness, with which this burg was illuminated, like a flock of mice.

"I never saw a darker night. 'Boys, I guess we've got to the war at last,' our captain whispered. Just then out of the darkness comes a small, exclusive gang of men wearing natty French uniforms and welcoming smiles. They were a celebrated group of generals sent in the place of the band, which don't work at night for fear its French tunes disturb some German airplane.

"What they lacked in noise they made up in cordiality. One of them made us a little speech in whispers, and, while I did not get a word of it, I knew it was great stuff and very hospitable because of the way it was received by the one man in our company who talks French. He was crying—said he couldn't help it hearing such pleasant things said about us and how glad the French were to see us, and all that.

"The time I felt like crying was later, after we started off to our barracks. Believe me, there was never nothing like it. At 10:30

BUT for a spurt at the close of the week the real estate market would have been of a decidedly uninteresting character, brokers' reports as well as the recorded deals being below the average in both interest as well as number as compared with those for several weeks past. As it was, however, the showing in the aggregate was fairly good, despite a considerable falling off in the number of recorded transfers as compared with the corresponding week a year ago.

The fact remains, however, that the market is decidedly dull, despite the fairly good movement of the cheaper classes of property, and, in the opinion of experienced brokers and operators, there is little chance for improvement until the policy of the government with reference to the excess profits tax, as well as its general tax schedule and proposed price fixing program, is determined, and until would-be builders become satisfied that there is little chance of any pronounced cheapening in the cost of labor and materials for a considerable time at least.

Many Projects Held Up.

The taxation question, and particularly the proposed excess profits tax, has become an especially disturbing factor in connection with new manufacturing enterprises, and the uncertainty as to what the government's final action is likely to be is holding up many important projects in this field, according to brokers' reports. As becomes prudent business men, those behind these different projects want to know where they stand before they invest their money.

It probably is true also that some hesitancy is caused in this field by a feeling of doubt as to what the effect of peace may be on the industrial interests of this country. Predictions have been made that with the coming of peace the markets of this country will be flooded with the manufactured products of the belligerent European nations, which have been laying aside for this day, and which, in their desire to secure much needed funds, will offer their wares far below any prices that could be made in this country.

Few Share Views.

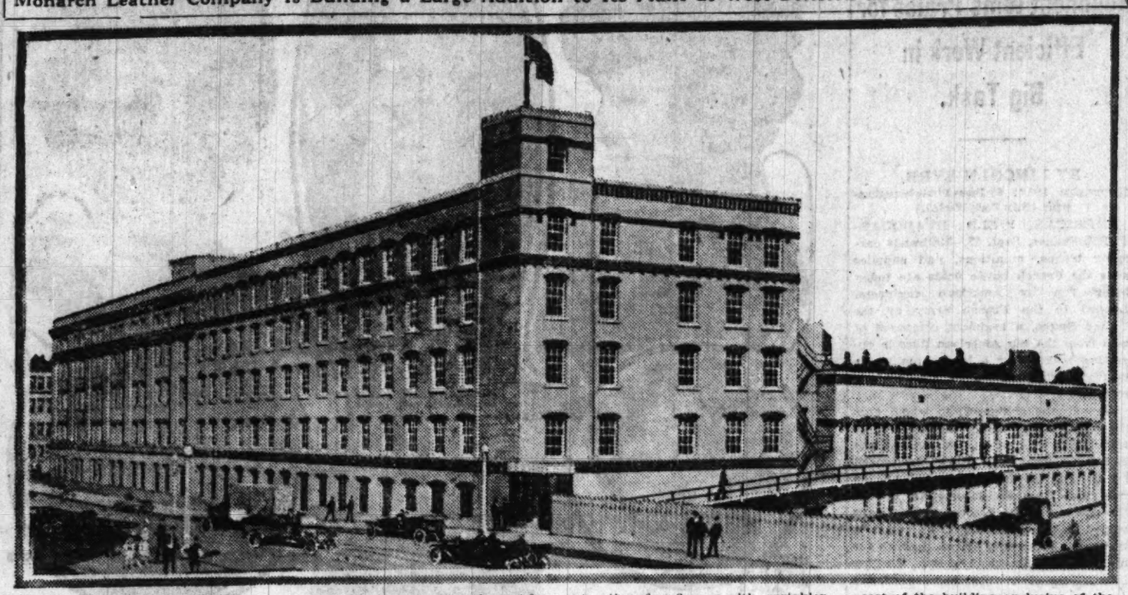
This apprehension, however, is shared by a comparatively few people, for the reason it is generally realized that the creative energies of these nations have been centralized to a feverish extent on the manufacture of munitions and other war material, leaving little room for purely commercial products. For this reason it is believed that for a few years, at least until they have partly restored their 'ante bellum industries, they will have to depend largely on this country for manufactured products, and particularly structural materials.

There is no doubt as to the serious effect which the tremendous falling off in building operations is having on the market, and by some this is regarded as a far more serious evil than the other causes indicated. Buying for improvement is the only basis of a sustained and healthy market, and, accordingly, when building stops, the market is bound to experience a similar slowing up. Prospective builders have been deferred by the excessively high cost of materials, and they are not disposed to plan for the future, for the reason that many of them believe that with the coming of peace there will come a big slump in the cost of both materials and labor that will prove ruinous to the person who builds under the present high cost of both.

There is no doubt, however, that the opinion is growing that there is little prospect of any material reduction in this cost, even with the coming of an early peace

ACTIVITY IN GOOSE ISLAND

Monarch Leather Company Is Building a Large Addition to Its Plant at West Division and North Branch Streets.



The growing activity in factory property is one of the most interesting features of the real estate market, and most of the purchases are for purposes of immediate improvement. The Monarch Leather company is now constructing a large addition to its plant at West Division and North Branch streets. The construction is solid masonry walls, combination reinforced and mill construction for floors, with sprinkler system. A feature will be the office part in the two story section. The main building will be five stories, 150x60 feet ground dimensions. The cost of the building exclusive of the machinery will be $175,000. The construction of the building is under the supervision of Ottenheimer, Stern & Reichert, architects.

PERMIT ISSUED FOR NEW ANNEX TO BLACKSTONE

New $200,000 Building to Be Erected on 35th Street.

Of much interest in a building as well as general way was the permit taken out for the construction of the twenty-one story annex to the Blackstone hotel, the general plans for which were announced in THE TRIBUNE several weeks ago. The proposed annex will be located at the northeast corner of Wabash avenue and Seventh street, adjoining the Blackstone theater on the west. The proposed building will conform with the general architectural style of the Blackstone, and its cost is placed at $1,000,000. It is thought that work probably will not begin before spring, but the fact the permit has been taken out is an encouraging event in these days of general building inactivity.

In an interesting deal involving the erection of a $200,000 building on Thirty-fifth street, Alexander Flower purchased from L. Cohen the property at the northwest corner of Thirty-fifth street and Forest avenue, 125 feet on Thirty-fifth street by 150 on Forest avenue, for an expressed consideration of $40,000, subject to $17,000. He conveyed in part payment the six flat building at 5726-28 Michigan avenue, lot 49x100 feet, east front, for an expressed consideration of $52,000, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000. L. L. Sachs of J. P. Strickland & Co. represented Mr. Flower.

Plans New Theater.

Mr. Flower is interested in a number of moving picture theaters and is having plans prepared for a store, office, and theater building on the Thirty-fifth street corner, the theater to have a seating capacity of 1,800, and to be used for vaudeville as well as pictures. The cost is placed at $200,000, the building to be completed early next fall. Harry Myerson of Myerson and Slotke attended to the legal details.

A deal involving the improvement of forty-nine lots in the northern part of the city with bungalows and two flat buildings, to cost about $5,000 each, figured in yesterday's real estate market news. The lots are between California and Albany avenues, north of Peterson avenue, and were acquired by Jacob Klapka from George F. Nixon and George W. Prassas, Mr. Klapka conveying in exchange the high grade six apartment building in Drexel avenue, 100 feet south of Fifty-second street, on a lot 60x109 feet, west front.

$45,000 Flat Deal.

The apartments are said to rent at $1,000 a year. The property is said to have sold for $45,000, subject to an incumbrance of $28,700. The lots, which are registered under the Torrens system, are in Nixon & Prassas' Lincoln, Kedzie, and Peterson addition to North Edgewater and are said to have figured in the transaction at a valuation of about $550 a lot, or around $27,000. It is stated that Mr. Klapka will begin building this fall. G. A. Boerste & Co. represented both parties to the transaction.

Record has been made of the purchase by Darling & Co., fertilizers, from James B. Pratt, of the 125x120 feet, east front, in Ashland avenue, fifty-four feet south of Forty-second street, a nominal consideration being given.

Real Estate Transfers

Real estate transfers filed for record yesterday totaled 205, of which 169 were in the city and 36 outside, including 19 under the Torrens system. Transfers were as follows:

New Catholic Church for the Northwest Side

A transaction involving the establishment of a new Catholic parish in the northwest part of the city was one of the features of the week's real estate news. It will be located at the northeast corner of Addison street and La Vergne avenue, and will occupy 354x126 feet at the corner, south front, and 125x126 feet, north front, in Patterson avenue, 229 feet east of La Vergne avenue, the property being conveyed to the Catholic bishop by Chester M. McGrath. A nominal consideration is given, but it is said to have been in the neighborhood of $15,000. It will be known as St. Bartholomew's parish, the Rev. William O'Shea, pastor. A school and hall building will first be erected, to cost in the neighborhood of $50,000, and later, when the parish becomes better organized, a handsome church will be erected.

E. J. Magerstadt Buys South Side Vacant

Record was made of the transfer by Lena Strook to Ernest J. Magerstadt of the vacant property at the southeast corner of Seventy-fourth street and Justine avenue, 375x480 feet, or about five acres, a nominal consideration being given. Mr. Magerstadt is said to have no plans looking to the improvement of the property.

Plan New Office Building; May Build at Once

The Old Colony Insurance company is said to be considering the erection of a sixteen story office building, 50x166 feet, at 166-72 West Jackson boulevard, extending to Quincy street. It is said the company will decide this month, probably, whether to build at once or later.

HOME PROPERTY TAKES LEAD IN WEEK'S TRADING

C. H. Morgan's Purchase of Hart Home Marks Activity.

High grade residence property in the city, as well as along the north shore, figured conspicuously in the week's business, the showing being better than for many weeks.

One of the most noteworthy of these was the sale by Harry Hart, president of Hart, Schaffner & Marx, to Clarence H. Morgan, president of the C. H. Morgan Grocery company, of the property at 4639 Drexel boulevard. It is an attractive twelve room modern stone dwelling, and occupies a lot 44 feet by a depth of 250 feet, and while the consideration is not disclosed it is understood to have been $37,500. The sale was negotiated by James J. Parker & Co.

$30,000 Home Sale.

A North State street deal was the sale by Frederick P. Hansen to Charles D. Frey and wife, Mary B., of the property at 1431 200 feet south of Burton place, on the east side of the street. The lot fronts twenty-one feet with a depth of 130 feet and the house is an attractive four story stone front structure containing twelve rooms. A nominal consideration is given in the transfer, but the actual price is said to have been $30,000. Paul Steinbrecher & Co. represented the seller and J. L. Floyd the purchaser.

Of the north shore deals, Kenilworth furnished two, one of which was the sale by William Aitken to Ophelia C. Woodland of the property on Leicester road, near Kenilworth avenue. The lot fronts 110 feet with a depth of 175 feet and is improved with a new twelve room dwelling containing four baths and two large porches. The consideration is not disclosed, but it is said to have been $25,000. The house is of brick and stucco construction, as is the garage in the rear. Casey & Bell negotiated the deal.

Essex Road Deal.

The other was the sale by Mrs. Belle H. Brown to Mrs. D. M. Bennett of the attractive property on Essex road, just south of Kenilworth avenue. The house, which was designed by Architect George Maher, is a nine room stucco structure and occupies a lot 100x175 feet, east front. While the actual consideration is not disclosed, it is said to have been $17,000. Murray & Terry represented both of the parties to the transaction.

FEW LOANS MADE; LARGEST $112,000

There were only a few loans of any importance reported or recorded during the week.

Cochran & McCluer have made a bond issue loan of $112,000 six years, at 6 per cent, to William Pickel, secured by the fifty-five apartment building at 4041-49 Broadway. The building is a duplicate of the Baytona building, which it adjoins.

Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company has made a bond issue loan of $55,000 two to eight years to the General Millwork company to secure a loan of $55,000 at 6 per cent on the 200,000 square feet of ground at South Fourteenth street and West Fifty-fifth court, in Cicero, with one story building.

They also have made a bond issue loan of $52,500 two to seven years, at 6 per cent, to Louis Solomon and others on the twenty-four flat building at the southeast corner of Grand boulevard and Forty-fifth street.

E. G. Krumrine & Co. have made a loan of $25,000 for five years, at 5 per cent, for the New England Mutual Life Insurance company, Boston, Mass., to the Northern Trust company, trustee for the estate of Russell D. Hill, deceased, secured by the property 326-30 North Michigan avenue, east front, between South Water street and the Chicago river, lot 48 feet wide, with an average depth of 85 feet, and a two story and basement brick building.

Krumrine & Co. also made a loan of $18,000 for five years, at 5 per cent, secured by the twelve apartment building at the northwest corner of Sheridan road and Jonquil terrace, having a frontage of 45 feet on Sheridan road and 130 feet on Jonquil terrace.

A. F. Anderson Buys Tract at Thirtieth and Spaulding

Record has been made of the sale by E. A. Cummings to Adolph F. Anderson, head of the A. F. Anderson Iron works, of the vacant property at the southeast corner of Thirtieth street and Spaulding avenue, 202.78 feet, north front, to railroad right of way, for an expressed consideration of $15,000. It is said to have been a personal purchase by Mr. Anderson.

Acquires Acre Tract in Wellington Avenue

A tract of five acres in West Wellington avenue, 628 feet west of Central avenue, north front, has been conveyed by Henry Rusteberge to Albert F. Keeney, a nominal consideration being given.

FLAT BUILDING TRANSFERS SHOW FREE MOVEMENT

Feature of Week Sale of Concord Court Apartments, $165,000.

Apartment property made a better showing last week than in the previous week, particularly in the way of good sized transactions. There was also a free movement of medium priced properties, so that as a whole the week's business, in view of the generally depressed market conditions, was of an encouraging character.

The feature of the week's market was the sale by Max Mickel to Charles E. Williamson of the Concord court apartments at 5838-52 Michigan boulevard. The lot is 138x161 feet, and is improved with a thirty-two apartment building, twenty-four apartments having four rooms and eight containing five rooms, the building having a reported gross annual rental of about $17,000.

A nominal consideration is given, but the price is reported at about $165,000, subject to an incumbrance of $68,000. The purchaser conveyed in exchange 552 feet of business property on Fort street, between Twenty-fourth and Twenty-fifth streets, Detroit, Mich., said to be valued at $250 a foot, remainder in cash. It is stated plans are to be prepared for an eight story loft building for auto accessories. George W. Stewart represented Mr. Mickel, and Philip Foran of the Frischkorn Realty company, Detroit, represented Mr. Williams.

South Side Flats Sold.

Nonresidents were the purchasers in an important transaction under the Torrens system involving south side flat property. Frederick W. Anders Jr. and others of Detroit purchased from Wilson Critzer and wife, Theresa P., the thirty apartment building of three and four rooms in South Park avenue, 518 feet south of Sixty-first street.

The building, which is on a lot 80x178 feet, east front, has a gross annual rental of about $13,000 and was erected about three years ago.

A nominal consideration is given in the transfer, which is made subject to an incumbrance of $62,500, but the actual price is understood to have been about $100,000. Franklin Browne of L. M. Smith & Bro. was connected with the deal.

The apartment property at the northeast corner of Lawndale avenue and Ainslie street, lot 83x125 feet, improved with a fifteen apartment building, has been conveyed by Paul Windmueller to Elmira Kendell, a nominal consideration being given, subject to an incumbrance of $37,000, but the actual price is said to have been about $60,000. F. E. Lackowski & Co. were the brokers.

North Side Apartment Deal.

In an interesting deal involving north side apartment properties Fred J. and Frederick Pischell Jr. have acquired from Mrs. Mary J. Killen the property at the southeast corner of Wilson and Campbell avenues, lot 50x125 feet, improved with a twelve apartment building having an annual rental of $5,200, the sale being subject to an incumbrance of $27,500.

The property is said to be valued at about $38,000. The Pischells conveyed to Mrs. Killen the two story flat buildings, registered under the Torrens system, at 4019-21 North La Vergne avenue, at a reported valuation of $14,500.

Application already has been made to register the twelve flat building under the Torrens system, as are the other realty holdings of the Pischells. J. F. Hecht represented the Pischells and E. P. Maynard & Co. Mrs. Killen.

$60,000 Grand Boulevard Transfer.

W. Harley Allen has sold to P. R. Flanagan the high grade six flat building at 4822-24 Grand boulevard, lot 51x135 feet, east front, for a reported consideration of $50,000, subject to an incumbrance of $35,000, the seller taking in part payment the residence property at the southwest corner of Oakley avenue and Garfield boulevard, 48x125 feet, and three vacant lots on Oakley avenue. A. D. Garnsey of McKey & Poague was the broker.

Leases and Loans.

In the way of leases of business space both in the downtown district as well as outside, the week's business showed a marked improvement over that of the previous week. There was nothing of a noteworthy character in loans.

The feature of the week's business probably covered space in the near north side business district, in which the Howe Manufacturing company, makers of the Howe Spotlight and other lighting devices, leased from Louis M. Nelson of Nelson & Lewin, the builders, the four and one-half story and basement fireproof building at 115-23 East Ontario street, just west of Lincoln Park boulevard, with the two story fireproof building adjoining on the east.

The lease runs for ten years with a term rental of $100,000. Until recently the building was leased to the government for commissary purposes. The widening of Michigan avenue will take in the property to the east, making this property the first street level corner north of the river, the upper deck of the proposed double deck bridge over the river reaching ground floor level at the alley in the rear of the property. Hedberg & Bistor, in connection with Hart & Whetston, negotiated the lease.

$40,000 Lease.

J. G. Kirk & Co. leased for the Western Union building to the Northern Express company the store at 157 West Jackson boulevard for a reported term rental of $40,000. They also leased for Gustav H. Adanick to the National Produce company the store and basement at the northwest corner of Milwaukee and Lawrence avenues for a reported term rental of $27,000; for the Lehmann estate to the Silver Mirror company the fifth floor in the Clock building at a term rent of $25,000; for the Peoples Life building, Randolph and Fifth avenue, to the Tubular Stud and Rivet company, five offices at a term rent of $12,000; for the Frier estate to the Accessories corporation, fifth floor at 322 West Washington street for a term rental of $13,500; for the same to O. C. Keckley & Co., the second floor at 318 West Washington street for a term rental of $12,000.

The Central Realty and Investment company have leased for the Doble Steam Car company of Illinois to the Pan American Motors company the store at 2250 South Michigan avenue for a term at a yearly rental of $6,000; for Charles Rubens to the Packard Motor Car company of Chicago for a term at a yearly rental of $2,400; for the A. H. Vilas company to the F. W. Jansen Clock company the third floor of the building at 1101 West Lake street for a term rent of $6,000. They also report eight leases in the North American building for Stumer, Rosenthal & Eckstein.

Irving Theater Deal.

Record was made of the lease by Ambrosia Y. Race to the Irving Theater company of the theater in the building at the southeast corner of Irving Park boulevard and Crawford avenue for a term of ten years at a term rent of $100,000.

Also by the same lessor to the Hensel Cut Rate Drug company five stores in the building at 39-46-56 North Crawford avenue for fifteen years from Jan. 1, 1917, at a term rent of $49,500. The leases were assigned to C. C. Mitchell & Co.

Record also was made of the lease of the theater part of the building at 1548-56 North Clark street by Charles H. Kusel to Henry M. Lubliner and Joseph Trinz for ten years from time of delivery of building at a term rent of $117,640.

Randolph W. Matteson has conveyed to Annie L. O'Shea the flat property in Winnemac avenue, 248 feet east of North Clark street, lot 50x115 feet, north front, consideration nominal, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000.

OUTLYING STORE PROPERTY SHOWS FAIR ACTIVITY

Corner of Fulton and Halsted Streets, Valued at $60,000, Is Sold.

While outside business property did not make as good a showing in the real estate market last week as in the previous week, several fairly good sized deals were recorded.

An interesting transaction in near west side business property was made a matter of record, covering the southeast corner of Fulton and Halsted streets, 99x140 feet, with old frame improvements of no value.

The property first was conveyed to Nelson T. Burroughs to Maxwell A. Kilvert of St. Paul, Minn., a nominal consideration being given. Mr. Kilvert then conveyed the property in turn to O. H. Haugan to secure a loan of $25,000, one year, at 6 per cent, and Dan transferred it to Howard Cole of Hudson, N. J., the consideration not being disclosed.

It is thought the property is likely to be improved, although no definite statement was made to this effect. It is thought to be worth about $60,000.

Stony Island Avenue Deal.

There also was filed for record the transfer by William K. Young of W. K. Young & Bro. to Gustav A. Klug, of the property at the southwest corner of Stony Island avenue and Seventy-first street, through to Seventy-first place, 226x165 feet.

Part of the plot is improved with a row of one story frames with a one story building at the corner, comprising in all seven stores.

The consideration is not disclosed, but it is reported at $80,000, subject to an incumbrance of $30,000, Mr. Young conveying in part payment the vacant property at the southwest corner of Seventieth place and South Shore boulevard, 122x158 feet, at a reported valuation of $30,000.

Record was made of the transfer by Orval Simpson to the Jewell Electrical Instrument company of the 73x130 feet in Walnut street, seventy-five feet east of Paulina street, consideration nominal, subject to $15,000 incumbrance. Hedges Seelye & Co. negotiated and financed the deal, which also involved the erection of a one story factory building to cost about $25,000.
